COAL CONFERENCE TAKES RECESS UNTIL NEXT WEEK

Statement Declares That It Cannot Be Said That the Parties Are Any Nearer Agreement Than When They Met—The Statement is Qualified by the Addendum That Each Side Has Made Progress Toward a Better Understanding of the Viewpoints of the Other.

"While it cannot be said that the parties are any nearer agreement than when they met" said an official statement issued after the adjournment "it is true that each side has made progress towards a better understanding of the problems and viewpoints of the and of the reasons for their respective positions."

It was announced that the recess was taken for the reason that questions have arisen which require more analysis than is possible in the conference. The miners offered to agree to a contract for two and a half or five years upon definite terms for either period and no arbitration.

"At today's session to the conference the operators presented further arguments for a long term contract, assuring continuity of production with some form of arbitration to prevent possible deadlocks. The operators stated that they do not seek wage reduction but believe it necessary to provide for readjustment that economic conditions may require in the future. They said their purpose is to avoid suspension of production and that they are willing to adopt any means that will secure this result.

"The miners asserted that the proposal of the Pinchot plan for a board of investigation and award should afford the operators the protection which they need.

"The operators suggested a modification of the Markle plan so that the investigation of the board, in case of disagreement would make recommendations to the joint conference within 30 days. If, following these recommendations, no agreement was reached within the succeeding 30 days the board then to decide the matters in dispute. The operators claim that this would probably make arbitration unnecessary, believing that the recommendations would dispose of the matter.

"The miners claim that in the final analysis this proposition provides for arbitration, as does the Markle plan. On this ground, htey object to both proposals.

"The miners offer to write a two and a half or five year contract upon definite terms for either period, and no arbitration.

"Representatives of the operators and miners have since Tuesday tried diligently to find a basis for adjustment of their differences. Both sides have sincerely applied themselves to this risk.

"Questions have arisen which require more analysis than is possible in the conference for this reason the conference has agreed to recess until Tuesday, January 5.

"While it cannot be said that the parties are any nearer agreement than when they met, it is true that each side has made progress towards a better understanding for their respective positions."

Most of the operators and miners arranged tonight to leave for their homes tomorrow. It is expected that the representatives of the operators will confer with other leaders among the coal managers between now and Tuesday and that the mine owners will also confer among themselves.

New Year's Eve Quiet in Paris

PARIS, Dec. 31—(AP)—New Year's eve was being celebrated much more quietly in Paris tonight than Christmas eve, and there were few signs in the streets to indicate that the old year was going out. The restaurants made no great preparations for the revelry, as many were caught overstocked on Christmas eve, since the average Frenchman, frightened by the high prices demanded, preferred to dine at home.

Condition of Cardinal Mercier

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 31—(AP)—The condition of Cardinal Mercier, who underwent an operation on Tuesday, was stationary today. His pulse is given in an official bulletin tonight as 84, while the fact that his temperature is only slightly above normal has raised the hopes of his physicians that his recovery will not be a lingering one.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—Almost 100,000 federal taxpayers shared in $151,885,415 refunded out of collections by the treasury department during the last fiscal year.

The list of refunds, submitted to the house ways and means committee today by the treasury department, showed that $134,107,773 of the total was returned on account of taxes illegally collected, while $17,777,642 was refunded because of the provision of the 1924 revenue act allowing a 25 per cent. reduction on income taxes.

While most of refunds amounted to less than $100 each there were many for amounts of more than $100,800, and exceeded $1,000,000. The Pennsylvania Coal company, of Dunmore, Pa., received $1,041,109 and the California Wine association of San Francisco, $1,050,410.

The list includes: Connecticut Electric syndicate, New York, $63,423; Manville Co., Providence, R. I., $224,177; Central Railway Signal Co., Boston, $146,475; North Packing & Provision Co., Boston, $118,062; Nicholson File company, Providence, R. I., $111,285; New Britain Machine Co., New Britain, Conn., $208,829; executors of G. Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, $762,070; Laurel Lake mills, Fall River, Mass., $59,320; Edison Electric Illuminating Co., Boston, $20,199; The American Hardware corporation, New Britain, Conn., $691,526; Charles Conway Lyon, Mass., estate of William Waldorf Astor, New, $155,288; Wright Esch Co., Worcester, Mass., $221,532; United Gas Improvement Co., Philadelphia, $120,567.

AN ELABORATE RADIO PROGRAM FOR TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—The radio world will launch the New Year tomorrow night with the most elaborate attempt yet made to bring all the earth in speaking distance.

From New York a program of music and greeting will be broadcast to Europe. In reply another will be sent back from London and to make it a world-wide event, news dispatches received by radio telegraph from the Orient, and south and Central America will be relayed across the Atlantic from New York.

Nine of the most powerful broadcasting stations in the United States have been asked for the quarter of the globe to clean whatever scraps of knowledge they may from the event, and several hundred ships at sea are to co-operate.

The American program, broadcast originally from Station WJZ, in New York city, will begin at 6:30 o'clock eastern standard time. John McCormack and Lucrezia Boro will be the principals of the musical program. London stations will relay the program to the continent.

The chimes of "Big Ben" in London will be heard in reply between 6:45 and 7:30 o'clock. They in turn will be answered by the carillon at the Park Avenue Baptist church in New York.

The New York program will open with messages broadcast "back home" by consul-generals of England, Germany, France, Poland, Italy and Japan. The world news dispatches will be relayed by Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, and General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America which is sponsoring the experiment, will make an address.

EPISCOPALIANS CALLED UPON FOR UNIFIED ACTION

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Bishops, priests and laity of the Episcopal church in the United States were summoned to unified and concerted action in an address issued to them today by the Right Reverend John Gardner Murray, D. D., bishop of Maryland, as presiding bishop of the church. He was elected to the office by the Episcopal general convention in New Orleans last October and was the first to be democratically elected.

Bishop Murray's position in this country corresponds to that of the Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Episcopal church in England.

"In the different orders of our common ministry in the Church of God," said Bishop Murray in his address, "we find no division of interest, no diversity of aim, no confusion of authority. We have but one master, and under him we all are controlled by one motive. We have one common desire to do with all the force of our will, abilities and powers, our duty, severally and untiedly, in that particular position of stewardship in which it has pleased God to place us for service in His name."

BUSINESS RECORDS BROKEN AT PORT OF PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, Dec. 31.—(AP)—All records for annual business through the port of Providence were broken during 1925. Receipts of coal amounted to 1,756,491 tons, 11,991,771 barrels of oil were received and lumber receipts totalled 103,916,450 feet. Six ships bearing 360,000 barrels of oil are now enroute to Providence, as are also a dozen colliers and several lumber ships.

JOHN C. ADAMS, OLD TIME MINSTREL MAN, DEAD

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The dying year saw the passing of an old time minstrel man when John C. Adams, 2nd, died at his home here in his 78th year. Adams trod the boards [illegible] years ago with the Whittemore and Clark minstrels, a company famous in its day. From that troupe Adams went into vaudeville for a dozen years before [illegible] retired, to become a [illegible] and Odd Fellow [illegible] this town.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS ARE TO BE DEPORTED

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 31—(AP)—A liquor record against Fred Guimondx, of Rumford decided Judge Clarence Hale to order deportation of Guimond, and his wife, Florida, to Canada, according to a decision filed in the United States district court today.

The Guimonds were ordered deported last September, after a hearing before immigration inspector Carr G. Horne, on complaint that they entered the country illegally and were likely to become public charges. This the Guimonds denied, and writs of habeas corpus were served against Samuel H. Howes, inspector of immigration, which stayed deportation pending Judge Hale's decision.

The couple came to the United States in 1905, married in 1911, and returned to Canada in 1924, the husband first having taken out naturalization papers.

Before his entry into Canada and after his return Guimond was convicted of violating the dry laws, and while he was in jail his family, including four children, were cared for by the town of Rumford.

TAMMANY OVERNS NEW YORK CITY AND STATE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—At midnight tonight, James J. Walker, son of Tammany took office as mayor of New ork. In office with him went an entire Tammany administration, placing for the first time in history a Tammany government over the state and the city at the same time.

Mayor-elect Walker has pledged that vice, gambling and the underworld resorts must go. A clean-up of the city is one of the promises made during his campaign.

George V. McLaughlin, Walker's choice for police commissioner to succeed Richard E. Enright, went into that office ahead of tive having been appointed by William T. Collins, president of the board of aldermen and acting mayor since John F. Hylan's retirement at midnight last night. Mr. Hylan takes with him into private life a pension of $4,205.99 a year as long as he lives.

Enright, who retired at the same time as Hylan receives $5,000 a year pension for life.

Mayor-elect Walker has already selected the cabinet which will advise him during his four year term of office.

CHARED WITH PASSING A WORTHLESS CHECK

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 31—(AP)—Chester H. Daly, 29, a coast guardsman, was brought into superior court this morning to plead to a secret indictment charging him with passing a worthless check for $29.50. He pleaded not guilty and was held for trial January 5 in $2,000.

Daly was sought by the police for several months, but was not found until this week in New London, where he was enrolled in the coast guard unit. He was brought back by Inspector Bowen and Captain John J. McGuire. He is accused of having the check cashed at a chain grocery store.

FARMER FOUND DEAD WITH SKULL CRUSHED

BURRILLVILLE, R. I., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Edward F. Farrington, 64, a farmer, was found dead with his skull crushed on a side road in the village of Hohegan this afternoon. Medical Examiner Dr. Edgar S. Potter said the man had been kicked in the head by his horse, which was standing nearby. It is thought he was under the wagon, repairing a broken part, when struck.

DEATH OF EMELINE UTLEY SEPARATES AGED SISTERS

EAST HAMPTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—Two aged sisters who lived alone on Barton Hill, were separated today for the first time in 25 years when death took the younger, Miss Emiline Utley, 87. Miss Mary Utley, two years her sister's senior, is in a critical condition at the Middlesex hospital. Apoplexy was the cause of Miss Emeline's death.

The sisters had not been seen about the house during the morning and this afternoon, Rev. Dr. Hubert S. Stafford, pastor of the Methodist church, who lived nearby, went to their home. He found the door locked and called Dr. Frederick Fitch, the town health officer. They forced an entrance and discovered Miss Emeline dead and Miss Mary suffering from shock. The latter was removed to the hospital.

Three years ago the Misses Utley suffered with the grippe, both being taken to Middlesex hospital. The elder Miss Utley was a school teacher in Hartford for a number of years. The younger had been a dress maker.

Their nearest relatives are four cousins who include Mrs. W. H. Perkins, of Bristol, and Mrs. Charles Carter, of East Hampton.

Striving to Make New Year's Dry in Boston

"Dry" Agents Are Circulating Through Streets and [illegible] of Entertainment.

BOSTON, Dec. 31—(AP)—A dry New Years eve was planned for Boston by the liquor squad of the Boston police force and Prohibition Administrator George A. Parker.

Managers of all the hotels and cafes in conference with Administrator Parker agreed earnestly to co-operate in enforcing respect for the prohibition laws and forces of private detectives were assigned to watch for violations. In addition, however, a small army of liquor squad agents, plain clothes men, and prohibition men, many in dress suits, were under orders to circulate through the streets and places of entertainment [illegible] law violation.

The streets were ordered policed as never before. Officers from outlying districts were conscripted to augment the forces in the theatre and hotel district and during a two hour period at midnight arrangements provided for the doubling of the usual night shift. It was arranged that in all down town and Back Bay stations double squads of uniformed men were to be on duty from 9 o'clock until 3 a. m. All sergeants of the overlapping shifts were ordered to remain on duty and in addition half a dozen captains were directed to keep an eye on conditions.

During the night Administrator Parker, Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley planned to tour the city to observe conditions.

At the offices of the prohibition administrator it was said that little liquor was available. Contraband shipments by land and sea have been cut down to a minimum, it was asserted. A contin ted patrol of highways by city police officers, prohibition agents and 50 members of the state constabulary was ordered to prevent speeding, drunken driving and transportation of liquor.

Some supplies of poisonous liquor concoctions were known to be on hand, and one of the tasks of the officers was expected to be to prevent serious results to persons who might drink them.

PROSPERITY REFLECTED IN NEW YEAR'S EVE PLANS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Prosperity was reflected through the east tonight in elaborate plans for welcoming in 1926 and in an excess of requests for reservations at supper clubs, cabarets and other places of entertainment.

In New York, Philadelphia, Boston and many smaller cities police and prohibition agents, determined to make it the driest New Year's eve on record, mingled with merymakers. Many of them in veneing clothes occupying costly tables, in cabarets.

"THE WASHDAY THIEF" IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 31—(AP)—William F. McDonald, held for the grand jury on the charge of entering Elmwood homes, and termed by the police, "the washday thief" from his alleged operations being conducted while house-wives were hanging out clothes, has been identified as a convicted felon, having served terms in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

According to records sent to the police here, McDonald at various times since August 17, 1921, served terms in Lynn, Mass., for forgery; in New Haven for burglary, and in Boston for larceny, receiving stolen goods, and for forgery.

The state identification bureau shows by records that McDonald had given addresses at 789 Georgia avenue, Washington, D. C., 406 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, and 54 Central avenue, Lynn. Entries in the records show his age to conform to the figure as given now, 24 years.

409 AUTO ACCIDENTS IN THE STATE LAST WEEK

HARTFORD, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Five deaths resulted in five automobile accidents included in the 409 crashes in the state reported last week to the motor vehicle department. The fatal accidents were at Bristol, East Canaan, East Hampton, Georgetown and Manchester. Fourteen cities reported a total of 201 minor accidents.

Hartford led all cities with fifty eight; New Haven was second with thirty one, and Waterbury, third with twenty. Other reports were as follows: Bridgeport 17; New Britain 16; Stamford 10; Middletown 10; Norwich 7; Meriden 7; Winsted 7; Greenwich 6; Norwalk 6; New London 4; Winsted 3.

Rivers of France Over Their Banks

Belgium Floods Are Causing Greater Damage Than Any Since 1876.

PARIS, Dec. 31—(AP)—Althdugh all the rivers and streams in France are over their banks, there is confidence everywhere that the situation is well enough in hand to prevent serious disaster two of the places suffering most are Bethune, where some streets are under three feet of water and the assistance of engineers from Arras has been asked, and Caen, where the Orne river has done much damage.

Paris thus far has not seen anything that looked like some of the previous floods, but the waters of country streams will continue to swell the Seine for the next two days and the river is slowly rising.

In the suburbs of Paris the waters continue to most [illegible]. The plains about Verdun are a vast lake, due to the overflowing of the Meause, while at Maubeuge, the low quarters are inundated and many factories have been compelled to suspend operations. Three feet of water is reported in many houses in Erest.

FLOODS CAUSING HEAVY DAMAGE IN BELGIUM

BRUSSELS, Dec. 31—(AP)—Floods such as have not been equalled since 1875 are causing much damage throughout Belgium.

In a funeral at Marchiene the cortege had to proceed to the cemetery in boats. The city hospital at Namur had to be evacuated on account of rising water. Hundreds of families have been forced to quit their homes.

On several railways, trains have been held up on account of flooded tracks.

APPEALS OF LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS WERE DENIED

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—(AP)—Appeals of six of the twenty-three men convicted in the Jack Daniel distillery robbery trial at Indianapolis were denied today by the United States circuit court of appeals. Supersede as writes were filed early in the day in an eleventh hour effort to prevent the defendants beginning sentences in Leavenworth prison next Monday.

The six denied stay of execution were Nathan Goldstein, republican politician of St. Louis; Michael Whalen, democratic politician of St. Louis; William J. Kinney, of St. Louis; William Lucking, George R. Landon and Harry Stratten, all of Cincinnati.

Goldstein and Whalen were given maximum sentences of two years in prison, with fines of $5,000 each, in federal court at Indianapolis.

The trial resulted from the removal of 891 barrels of whiskey from the Daniel distillery and warehouse at St. Louis in 1925. Kleney was a deputy internal revenue collector in charge of the warehouse. Fifteen of the convicted men were sentenced to the fedral pnitentiary.

FOR THE CODIFICATION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—(AP)—The association of American law schools at the close of its annual meeting today continued by unanimous consent its cooperation with the league of nations in the codification of international law.

George W. Wickersham, of New York, who was attorney-general under President Taft and is the American member of the league commission of codification, will sail for Geneva Saturday.

Professor Manley O. Hudson, of Harvard, chairman of a committee, created at the previous annual meeting to assist Mr. Wickersham and others engaged in the development of international law, reported that his committee had investigated subjects designated by the commission.

The association unanimously adopted a resolution calling for joint application with other organizations for funds from the Laura Spellman Rockefeller foundation for a survey of the crime situation and its solution.

40 PERSONS KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION IN CHINA

LONDON, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Forty persons have been killed and 50 injured and 200 others are missing in an explosion at a fireworks factory at Macao, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Hong Kong. All the dead, injured and missing are Chinese, and most of them women.

A New Year

Over the threshold a gallant new-comer
Steppeth with tread that is royal to see;
White as the winter-time, rosy as summer.
Hope in his eyes, and with laugh ringing free.
Lo! in his hands there are gifts overflowing,
Promises, prophecies, come in his train;
O'er him the dawn in its beauty is glowing,
Banishing shadows of sorrow and pain.

Though we may blot them ere long with our tears;
So it has been through the long passing ages,
Worn with the footprints of close crowding years.
Welcome, sweet Year! may the full-handed hours
Find us like servants, trusty and true.
Using with earnest devotion our powers
To be worthy our Master and worthy of you.

PREMIER BRIAND'S VIEW ON FRANCE'S DIFFICULT[illegible]

In Exclusive Interview Given to the A. P. the Premier Express[illegible] sed the Belief That the Settlement of Financial Problems is Contingent Upon Settlement of War Debt to the United States—Cites Work in Morroco and Syria as Refutation of Accusations of Militarism and Imperialism.

PARIS, Dec. 31—(By the Associated Press)—Aristide Briand, premier of France, in an exclusive interview given to the Associated Press today, expressed the belief that France's financial difficulties will find their chief alleviation in an equitable settlement of France's war debt to the United States.

"Anything which generally speaking, would permit the great American nation to make the weight of its influence more strongly felt in the work of international concord and the re-establishment of normal conditions between peoples in their economic life will be welcomed with great satisfaction by French public opinion," M. Briand declared.

"The decision of the American government to be represented in the disarmament conference which is to be held at eneva under the auspices of the league of nations constitutes in itself, in the eyes of the French people, one of the most highly appreciated New Year's gifts in international politics.

"I feel convinced that the American people, deeply attached to the maintenance of the world's peace, have followed with interest the work of international co-operation in Europe which has led up to the conclusion of the Locarno agreement. A peace method has been insurgurated with power to decide the destinies of a new Europe. Of this new Europe we have already caught a glimpse—an association of free peoples respecting each other and spontaneously collaborating in realizing the same ideals.

"By working for the creation of this new European spirit, of which she was one of the initiators, France, I believe, has supplied the best reply to the accusations of militarism and imperialism which have been too hastily brought against her by persons who lack proper knowledge or have not sufficiently observed her in the free play of the fulfillment of her national aspirations.

"At this very moment at the cost of very heavy sacrifices she is called upon to face moral obligations incumbent upon her in Morocco and Syria. What is she doing but insuring respect for treaties and international mandates in the interest of peoples who have placed themselves under her protection or guardianship? And she is doing it in the spirit which inspires the conduct of all states that have shown the highest concern in bringing their contribution to the common work of civilization.

"That disinterested role which her traditions assign to France may be deeply hampered at this moment by the financial difficulties which are weighing on her national life. But I have the firm hope that 1926 will mark the end of these difficulties which are an inheritance from a war that inflicted greater suffering on my country than on any other.

"I do believe that this situation which brings consequences that today affect all members of the community of states which share the same views, will find its chief alleviation in an equitable settlement of our war debt to America."

FRENCH DEPUTIES VOTE CREDITS FOR JANUARY

PARIS, Dec. 31—(AP)—The chamber of deputies tonight adopted the provisional credits for January. The vote was 385 to 136.

FFINANCIAL EXPANSION OF DILLON, READ & CO.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Having electrified Wall street with the two outstanding financial coups of the year, the banking firm of Dillon, Read and company, today was reported to have embarked on another conquest of the financial district which will reach its climax next year in the combination of several powerful New York banks under its control.

The first step in this program was taken today when it was announced that Benjamin Joy, vice president of the Bankers Trust company in charges of foreign activities, had resigned to become associated with Dillon, Read and company. In addition to serving as a member of the firm, he will become chairman of one of the Dillon, Read foreign enterprises, the United States and Foreign Securities corporation.

While only this bare announcement was made by Dillon, Read and company, interests close to the firm indicated that Clarence Dillon, who startled the financial world by outbidding J. P. Morgan and company and the General Motors interests for the Dodge automobile properties, had selected Mr. Joy as the man to engineer a union of Wall street banking institutions under the controlling influence of the Dillon firm. While this development may not take the form of an actual bank merger, it is expected at least to result in the early formation of a "friendly alliance," made up of trust companies and commercial banks. Such a combination would compare with the so-called Morgan group, which numbers among its most prominent members of the First National bank, the Guaranty Trust company and the Bankers Trust company.

17 NEW YEAR'S EVE LIQUOR RAIDS IN ANSONIA

ANSONIA, Dec. 31—(AP)—New Year's eve found the Ansonia police station "the wettest place in the Naugatuck valley," according to local officers who watched thirty state policemen this afternoon bring into headquarters liquors seized in 17 raids.

The state police from Groton, Hartford, Wesiport and Danielson gathered at Bridgeport early today. Each officer was in plain clothes. With Sergeant Frank Verilli and Sergeant Lenahan in charge, they came here and simultaneously raided 17 different places in the north end section of the town, mostly on Liberty and Starr streets. The evidence had been obtained during October and November. The police had warrants for arrests in connection with each place entered and when the alleged proprietor was not found, an alleged bartender was arrested.

Some of the men arrested will be arraigned on three or four different counts. Hearings will be on January 9. Each violator is being held in bond of $1,000 until then. This is the first time that liquor law violators here have been held in bonds of that amount, $200 to $500 usually being required as surety for the appearance of the defendant when his case came up.

Twenty automobiles were used by the state police in transporting the alcohol, wines, mash, beer and other seized goods to the station. During the unloading the street was crowded with spectators.

CREW OF THE JULIA MAY HELD FOR HEARING

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 31—(AP)—The crew of the trawler Julia May, fired upon by the coast guard and captured off Martha's vineyard, were arraigned here today before U. S. Commissioner Lilly, and held for a hearing January 9. Captain Henry W. Days of Fairhaven furnished bail of $2,500 and Milburn Stuart of Woods Hole and John Silva of New Bedford each gave bail of $1,000.

The cargo of Scotch flavoring and champagne found on the trawler and valued at $72,000 was brought here from Woods Hole, where the trawler arrived today.

NEW YEAR CELEBRATION WAS GENERAL IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Dec. 31—(AP)—Greater Berlin's outdoor celebration to welcome the New Year was equal to those before the war, both with respect to the general merrymaking and the extent to which the crowds flocked to the popular-priced cafes. Fashionable hotels did a cappelly business at nine dollars a cover, which did not include libations, but accorded persons dancing opportunities until daybreak.

The popularity of the radio kept many families at home for their celebration. Broadcasting programs were extended until 1 a. m.

In conformity with popular superstition. The ceremony of melting lead was widely indulged in. This consists of pouring molten lead into water, the figures which from being considered prophetic of the nature of gifts to be received in the new year.

Many persons also are placing the scales of carn in their wallets and pocketbooks, for this, according to superstitious Germans, assures the owner of having cash throughout the year.

DANCED IN LONDON TO MUSIC PLAYED IN BERLIN

LONDON, Dec. 31—(AP)—Atmospheric conditions were such in London as to permit New Year's revellers to dance in the last minutes of 1925 to music played in Berlin in 1926 and then, reversing the process, to dance in the early minutes of 1926 to music played in New York in 1925.

Except for this novelty, the passing of the old year was celebrated in the customary manner—feasting and dancing for the pleasure-loving, and midnight religious services and carol-singing for the more serious minded.

The week had been rainy and stormy, but in London the weather cleared for the last few hours of 1925 and great crowds gathered in the precincts of St. Paul's cathedral and the west end, where all the restaurants and cabarets had New Year dinner and festivities. The biggest affair of the sort was at Albert hall, the proceeds going to hospital charities. Alanson B. Houghton, the American ambassador, and many prominent aristocrats were boxholders, and numerous well-known theatrical celebrities helped to make things merry.

VARIOUS COLORS OF EASTERN STATES ON 1926 AUTO PLATES

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Just what the traffic officials of the northeastern states can do in the way of art will be seen tomorow when the roads become crowded with automobiles bearing the new and colorful 1926 plates.

Connecticut's motif for its new plates is chrome yellow with blue numerals. New Jersey will have orange plates with white figures, West Virginia select white figures on a blue background and Pennsylvania will sport dark blue numbers on a bright yellow field. New York adopted a blue background with white figures.

Maryland is ranked among the most conservative states in the matter of colors, with a plain black background and white numerals. Massachusetts will show white letters on a light blue background; Maine, orange numerals on gold base; New Hampshire, white background with white letters; Delaware, blue background, gold numerals and Rhode Island will use the same sign as Maryland uses.

SPOTTING BOOZE JOINTS
MERRIMAN DRIVER'S SIDE LINE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 31.—The five liquor law violators who were arrested Tuesday night were given a hearing in the police court Thursday morning, when all the continued cases were heard during a session that lasted from nine o'clock in the morning until after twelve noon. The accused were, Raymond Desrosiers, who was found guilty of actual sale was fined $200 and costs, it being his third offense. He entered a demurrer and gave notice of appeal to the superior court. His father, Camille Desrosiers furnished a bond of $500 for his appearance.

Henry Potvin pleaded not guilty to actual sale. It was his second offense and he was fined $100 and costs, amounting to $112.15.

Frank St. Martin, another violator, was not put to plea and his case was continued to Saturday morning.

Harry Barrows pleaded not guilty to actual sale and fought his case through counsel. He was adjudged guilty and fined $75 and costs, amounting to $87.15 which was paid.

Fred Chalifoux, who had admitted being a carrier-bootlegger, pleaded not guilty to a sale charge. The court failed to find grounds for a conviction of actual sale and the defendant was discharged.

The star witnesses in all of the cases were Roy J. Hebert and Constable Lewis E. Hodis. Herbert testified that he bought liquor from all the defendants but St. Martin and in three of these cases he was driven to the bootlegging places by Constable Hodis who was a witness to the transactions. All of the defendants emphatically denied having sold liquor to Hebert or to anyone else. Hebert admitted having been hired by County Detective Jackson to secure the evidence. He said his regular work was driving a truck for a Norwich concern; spotting booze stills was his side-line.

In the Chalifoux case, Hebert and Hodis testified that liquor had been purchased from the man November 23, Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officer William S. Congdon, Lieutenant of Police Frank McLean and Officer Edward F. Leahy testified that in raiding the Chalifoux home they failed to find liquor, but that the defendant admitted to them that he had gone out to other places and purchased liquor for friends. He received no pay for these errands. He flatly denied having sold liquor to Hebert and claimed that on the date the alleged sale was supposed to have been made he and his wife were in Occum. George Dugas and Eloise LePage, of Occum, said that Mr. and Mrs. Chalifoux arrived at their home about noon on that date and did not leave for their home until six o'clock in the evening. Judge Foss acquitted the accused.

The case of Harry Barrows of 87 Summerbrook street, was the hardest fought of the quintet. Barrows introduced evidence to show that he had been handling liquor and had never sold a drink or a bottle of the stuff to anyone. October 25, the alleged date of the sale, he said that he had worked out in the woods in Chaplin all day and did not return home until quite late. The liquor was alleged to have been purchased between 7 and 7:30 o'clock. Hebert testified that he met Barrows in Desrosiers's store. He asked for a quarter, Raymond Desrosiers, the bootlegger and the latter told him that it was "all out." Barrows stepped up and said that he could furnish a supply and Hebert gave him two dollars. In a few minutes Barrows came back with a pint of liquor which he handed to Hebert, giving him 75 cents in change. Constable Hodis had stationed himself where he could watch every move of the transaction.

Constable Joseph Peck said that Barrows was a tenant in his father's house, which he looked after. He had known Barrows for some time and one year or so ago had asked the man if he could bring him back a quart of "good liquor" on one of his trips to Providence. Barrows refused and told him that he had never done such a thing and did not care to start in. After brief arguments had been made by Attorney Kelley for the accused and Prosecuting Attorney H. S. Gaucher, Judge Foss imposed a fine of $75 and costs, which was paid.

Henry Potvin, fined $100 and costs, unable to raise the amount, so committed to Brooklyn jail.

MORRIS SPECTOR FINED NEGLECTED HIS CHILDREN

WILLIMANTIC, Dec. 31.—Morris Spector, Quarry street junk dealer, was fined for wilful neglect of his children[illegible] appeared in police court Thursday, charged with wilful neglect of his children. Through his attorney he entered a demurrer which was overruled by Judge Foss. Spector was found guilty and fined $50 and costs, amounting to $75.15. He took an appeal to the superior court. A bond of $200 was furnished by Rabbi Max Levine.

Spector's wife left him about two weeks ago and on various occasions she has caused him to be presented on a charge of non-support. About a year ago Mrs. Spector and her three children, Howard 8, Ruth 6, and Stanley 4, removed to New London. On one or two occasions, Mrs. Spector was assisted by the New London police squad on disorderly house raids. The last one was taken some time ago, the Sarah Kaplan scene in the town of Montville just over the city line. Officer agents of the Connecticut Humane Society conducted an investigation and found that the children were not receiving the proper care and that they were being boarded by a person not having a license to operate a children's boarding house, under the 1921 statutes. Since that time the oldest child has been sent to the Jewish orphanage in Hartford and the two children are to be cared for at the Mansfield Depot boarding house for children conducted by Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Bennett.

In police court Thursday morning, Roy J. Hebert was charged with intoxication. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $17.15 which he paid.

Those attending New Year's Eve attractions in the city were the New Year party at the Al-Pierre Tabarin conducted by Lodge No. 1511, B. P. O. Rafferty, Mrs. John Henry, Mrs. Roderick Gaudreau, Mrs. Wolfe Rosen, Mrs. J. H. Hurley, Mrs. A. J. Squires and Mrs. John Reilly.

John G. Lewis, 82, Civil War veteran and resident of Coventry for many years died at his home there about eight o'clock, Wednesday evening. He was born in Colchester, April 15, 1843, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis and is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Edna L. Cushman of Coventry. He was a member of Company H, 21st Connecticut Volunteers during the Civil War and was wounded at Drury Bluffs.

Funeral services for Mrs. Abbie Daniels were held at her home, 201 Lewiston avenue at two o'clock Thursday afternoon, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock officiated. Burial was in the family plot in Willimantic cemetery. There was a large gathering of friends and relatives in attendance. The bearers were Frank M. Lincoln, Otto B. Robinson, A. Linn Weatherhead, and William B. Elliott. The J. C. Lincoln company had charge of the arrangements.

State's Attorney Howard B. Bradford, of Putnam, met local attorneys at the office of Attorney Harry S. Gaucher Thursday afternoon to consider cases which will be heard at the criminal session of the Windham county superior court in Putnam, Tuesday next. The following local defendants will be tried at the session: Frank Magara, Frank Nycek and Aleck Stygar, charged with assault on Frank Leiss; Clarence M. Ellison, fraudulent check passing; Martin Shea, non-support; Albert Wawer, Raymond Brown, breaking and entering; Clifford H. Wilson, passing forged checks; Raymond Desrosiers, violation of liquor law, Morris Spector, wilful neglect of his children.

General Secretary Albert B. Smith of the Y. M. C. A. has sent out New Year's greetings and a list of the activities for the Y during the coming year. During 1926 several new lines of activities will be introduced to Y. members and to the public. Two experts will conduct popular courses weekly in salesmanship and public speaking. Professor Norman Cawley of Boston, a member of the faculty of Harvard University will have charge of the speaking course and E. O'Brien manager of the Ansonia Novelty company and a graduate of Yale University, will supervise the salesmanship course. A first aid group will also be formed and a special effort will be made to spread the knowledge of swimming by forming new classes in this phase of Y work. An electrified hair dryer has been installed for the women and girls.

The bowling alleys are open to the public and members enjoy the privileges of a large reading room where good books, magazines, radio, telephone, fire place, billiard tables and the like, may be found. The following have charge of the 1926 activities: Albert B. Smith, general secretary; Ric ard W. Holden, physical director; Iv Prater, office secretary; Mrs. C. Webster, woman's department; Alb Dion, bowling alleys; E. Byrd Freeman, building superintendent.

As Mrs. John Phillips of Nor Windham came out of her home Wednesday morning, she saw an unusual sight, fourteen deer, which appeared to be seeking domestic quarters. The deer weighed from one hundred to one hundred and fifty pounds each and would have made any hunter's fingers itch. They appeared quite docile and remained quiet as Mrs. Philips approached them until the leader snorted the danger signal and the entire herd plunged over the fence and out of sight.

Theodore Hamilton, of New York, who is a holiday guest of John Mnasure at the Mansure home, South Chaplin, occasioned considerable worry to his host Wednesday afternoon when he fell on the ice in Hall's pond in North Windham while playing hockey and was rendered unconscious. He was rushed to a local physician where it was found that his bruises were slight and that he would recover speedily.

The Windham Girls' Club held its annual Christmas tree party at the club rooms, Wednesday evening, with fifty children present. An entertaining program was carried out with Miss Avis French as son leader. Miss Marion Hurlihee as Santa Claus, distributed gifts to the children.

Frank Monroe has tendered his resignation to the board of selectmen in the town roads department, to join the force of Superintendent Irving M. Ford of the city street department. Mr. Monroe was employed under Mr. Ford during the previous administrations.

Postmaster William T. Crumb and local operatives in the railway mail service received Wednesday the following Christmas and New York greeting from the postmaster general.

It gives me much happiness to extend a personal Christmas greeting to each employe of the postal service. Your loyalty and devotion to service during the past year have evoked my deepest appreciation, and this feeling is voiced by a grateful public in the many letters received commending the first general suspension of service on Christmas day.

May the coming year bring to each of you great happiness.

Astronomical experts from several colleges are conducting investigation relative to the meteorite which passed over this section just after dark, Tuesday evening, appearing to explode in mid-air as it shot over the town. H. G. Willis and his wife, who were the only Jewett City people who have reported seeing the rapidly moving ball of colored fire, are to be asked just how it looked to them. All the Wednesday morning papers gave accounts of the remarkable occurrence, with statements of many all over New England who saw it. Mr. Willis ran from his home to tell the Bulletin reporters what he had seen, and even the then the luminous track was visible in the sky. In view of the fact that there was a small Leonid display seen over the town a month ago, the wise Bulletin man wrote it up as a Leonid—Not so, however. Mr. Willis and his wife were witness to one of the Celestial phenomena that is the sight of a lifetime.

The local automobile fraternity is all worked up. Tuesday evening in a local place of business two men, residents of the town became engaged in conversation relative to the speed they could make between different points. As a result of the discussion, which in the final stages warmed up some, a bet of $50 was made and the cash put up.

One man claiming that he could make the run in his Ford, from the Jewett City post office to the Providence railroad station, in one hour and ten minutes. The other man to follow in his high powered machine, and see that he did it. The Ford owner took a passenger and left the local p. o. at 10.50 p. m. The accounts of the trip are beyond the power of print to portray. Anyway at 11.50 the Ford stopped at the Providence station. He made it in an hour flat.

Vapors stop Colds

VAPORS reach a cold directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks VapoRub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime:—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin (like a poultice or plaster) "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

DANIELSON

NEW STATE LICENSE BUTTONS HANDY IF NOT HANDSOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Dec. 31.—Have you seen the new license buttons for hunters and fishermen, issued in Connecticut for the first time in this year 1926? Well, if you haven't, you will be interested when you do see one. Up to 6.29, Eastern Standard time, New Year's eve, critics of the buttons had not agreed as to whether the new issue is a work of art or a railroad turntable.

The buttons are fully as large as necessary. They are to be worn on the outer garment of sportsmen at all time when they are in quest of fish or game in this state. So if you witness the approach of what appears to be a crusader across the frozen surface of some fishing pond, these crisp winter days, or meandering along a trout brook when spring comes again, be not afraid. The contraption that appears to be a crusader's shild which the approaching man strides behind and the spear-like device he carries militantly in one hand are wholly removed from anything war-like. This is but a carefree fisherman, wearing his new license button and carrying a fishrod.

These buttons may open a new field of adventure, produce a new crop of fishing yarns and be converted to sundry and various uses. One can imagine four fishermen sitting on logs about a camp fire while waiting for a tilt to tip on the nearby ice. They are absorbed in something. It proves to be a poker game. They are sitting about a round table. Inspection proves it to be more other than one of the fishermen's license buttons. Out on the ice another fisherman has set up his button as a windbreaker and is huddled behind it out of the cutting wind.

"I had a big one hooker," some trout fisherman will tell you next spring, "and was playing him nice when I went to reach around my license button and struck my finger in a deer's eye. Of course I hadn't seen the deer and he hadn't seen me, being as I was behind the button. In the excitement of the thing I let the line get slack and the trout got away—and I bet he weighed 5 pounds.

Anticipating inquiries, it may be mentioned that coon hunters, seeing that they operate at night, may wire their buttons for electric lights if they wish. There is nothing in the law against it.

Breaking a wheel off a Ford in rough country isn't going to distress hunters or fishermen any more. A button will serve as a spare wheel until one can get back to civilization and such comfortable places within the state, as are used at times by alleged statesmen in doping out some new-fangled idea for making man as near to being registered like the inmate of a kennel as is possible in this deay and age.

WM. PHILLIPS BENEFITS BY $75,000,000 DEAL

DANIELSON, Dec. 31.—Despatches published Thursday telling of the coup achieved by Clarence Dillon, 43-year-old head of Dillon, Read and Company, of New York, in bringing the securities of the National Cash Register company into the open for public purchase instead of their being held largely as a family issue, becomes a matter of special local interest, by reason of the fact that William Phillips, formerly of this town is a partner in Dillon, Read and Company. The new deal involves $75,000,000.

Mr. Dillon, whose rise to fame as speculator, was a classmate at Harvard of Mr. Phillips, a graduate of Killingly High school. Mr. Dillon, it was made known some time ago, was located in business in Chicago when he was induced by Mr. Phillips to go to New York and join him in what has since become Dillon, Read and Co. Mr. Dillon is now an outstanding figure in the financial world. What he has just achieved has been sought for by other groups of financiers and without success since 1922. As a partner in the concern, Mr. Phillips will have a large share in the benefits accruing from Mr. Dillon's newest accomplishment.

JOHN H. KENARY DIES AT HIS DAUGHTER'S HOME

DANIELSON, Dec. 31.—John H. Kenary, 68, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Neill, in Dayville, during last night after an illness of only a few hours. He was stricken at about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and died without rallying. He had been in failing health for some time, but his condition was not regarded as being so critical as likely to cause death in such an unexpected way.

Mr. Kenary was born in Leicester, Mass., and lived there for years. For twenty years, up to April of this year, he had made his home in Putnam and in that city is remembered in the kindliest way. He made a great many friends through his inherently high qualities of character and citizenship and it was with regret that Putnam lost him, in April of this year, after he had resigned a position he had held with the Putnam Woolen company during practically all his residence in that city and went to Dayville to make his home with his son-in-law and daughter, retiring from active work.

Mr. Kenary leaves two daughters, Mrs. O'Neill of Dayville and Mrs. Frederick Welch, of Worcester, a son, John, of Millbury, and a brother, David, of Worcester. There is also a grandson, Richard Kenary, of Millbury.

A host of radio fans throughout the town of Killingly will be at their radio sets at 6.45 this New Year's night, hopeful of hearing the chimes of Big Ben in London. Many here and hereabouts having made special preparations for this event, buying new tubes, getting full charged batteries and otherwise conditioning the sets to give the very best possible results. Big Ben will be on the air sometime between 6.45 and 7.30. Most people who own sets in this town will be found at home tonight at the hour mentioned. They anticipate something very unusual in the international broadcast. It is possible, too, that the great majority of them will hear a California station for the first time in the nation-wide hook-up that has been arranged.

From over the Rhode Island border comes talk of a stricter enforcement during 1926, of the regulation of that state allowing motor vehicles from other states only 15 trips a year into that territory without taking out Rhode Island registration. There are those who will tell you that the most this will amount to will be talk. The average car that brings people into Little Rhody from another states carries people that spend money within that commonwealth. Rhode Island isn't driving any business away insofar as can be noticed. It is not likely to do that by seeking stricter enforcement of the regulation mentioned.

A New Year's eve dance and frolic at the state armory ended at 4 o'clock this (Friday) morning if pre-arranged plans were adhered to. Fleeting toward the armory just before 11 o'clock Thursday night were numbers of people bent on dancing the old year out and the new year in. They found a pretty setting in which to satisfy their desire. Music was by the Club Royal orchestra with Warren Braley directing. This orchestra broadcasted the dinner concert at WJAR, Providence, Thursday, before coming here for the dance. As this orchestra is made up of musicians from communities hereabouts, there is special interest in the progress it has made.

The majority of the Danielson members of Putnam lodge of Elks were at the lodge room in Putnam, New Year's eve for the usual social session held as a year passes and a new one dawns and for the special purpose of being in at the silver anniversary observance of the organization of the lodge. Since its organization Putnam lodge of Elks has had membership in Danielson and other parts of the town. Today the Danielson membership would make a sizeable lodge on its own account, so it was with great joy and anticipation that the men left here Thursday evening for what promised to be a very fine affair.

This area has come through to the first day of the new year with a snowfall that is less than three inches for the entire season.

Miss Blanche Gauthier of Broad street is in New York to spend the holiday with friends.

Mrs. W. W. Woodward, injured when she fell on the ice Christmas eve, remains confined to her bed, but is recovering slowly.

Many a motor car driver here took dvantage Thursday of the privilege discarding 1925 registration plates d dressing his machine with the oshy yellow ones of 1926.

Though the practice is not as general here as in days gone by, there re many who will revive today the ustom of making New Year's calls.

Mrs. Marjorie Woodbury and daughter, of New Rochelle, are visiting Attorney and Mrs. A. G. Bill.

There was one case of minor importance for the town court to consider at Thursday morning's session.

The time for paying personal taxes has expired. Attorney L. A. Woisard, the collector, said Thursday that the taxes came in very will during December, but as usual, there are delinquents.

Next Monday many of the employes of the Quinebaug company who have been having a vacation extending from Christmas eve will return to work.

From the home of her parents, Mr. nd Mrs. Henri St. Germaine, Dyer street, the funeral of Marie Irene St. ermaine was held Thursday afternoon. Following a service at St. James' church the body was entombed at Holy Cross cemetery. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The coming meeting and banquet of the Chamber of Commerce has aroused general interest among business men and seems to forecast the revival of the organization into an active force for good. The meeting is scheduled for January 5.

Continued cold weather until the first of the coming week will see the ice crop for Danielson ready to cut and the workers making ready for action. Much ice for use in dairies in the surrounding country is already stored away for the year.

The post office closes at 10 o'clock this (Friday) morning, though the lobby will remain open.

MAYOR VICTOR CHAPDELAINE ISSUES 1926 GREETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Dec. 31—Mayor Victor Chapdelaine has issued the following greeting to the people of Putnam:

The City Government of Putnam extends to all of its citizens best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

The City's prosperity and success are the reward of every citizen's interest and participation in the City Government.

With that result in mind, criticism can be constructive and helpful. Let us try to be of real service in our community, so that in twelve months we can point to 1926 as a year of harmony, prosperity and progress.

VICTOR CHAPDELAINE,
Mayor of Putnam.

COMMUNITY TREE HELPS INCREASE CHISTMAS JOY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Dec. 31—The Christmas tree in the public square which was erected by the Rotary Club of Putnam has been admired by everybody and helped increase the Christmas spirit in the community. The committee in charge has expressed public acknowledgment to the Putnam Light & Power company, which assisted in putting the tree in place, furnished all of the wiring, all the lights and the power free of charge.

A car driven by Everett Packard of the Fox Lumber company and one driven by Louis H. Mathieu came together at Canal and Pomfret streets at noon Wednesday, the former being forced against the big pole of the Light and Power company at the corner. No one was hurt; the cars were more or less damaged.

That big pole is getting to be popular as a meeting place for automobiles. Canal street from Pomfret street is very narorw but the automobile traffic on it is heavy and seems to be increasing. Possibly the best remedy will be to make it a one-way street for cars northerly bound. The grade is not nearly as steep as the ascent on Pomfret street, from Canal to Main.

Mrs. Oliver Reynolds, 84, who died at the home of her son, Elmer Reynolds, in Norwich, Tuesday evening, was the mother of Mrs. Otto E. Wulf of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Wulf are in Norwich, where the funeral will be held.

The past week has afforded an excellent illustration of the vagaries of winter weather in New England. Christmas it snowed the entire day, but the temperature was very mild. Saturday afternoon it grew cold and the thermometer showed from 15 to 20 degrees above zero. During the night the mercury dropped twenty-five degrees, there was no modification during the day and it was thought the night would be repetition of the one before. Instead it grew warmer and at seven o'clock Monday morning the average thermometer recorded 15 above. Tuesday morning was even warmer than the day previous. One is inclined to agree with the Danielson coresponden in his estimate of the Cloud Digger's predictions. A change of 25 degrees downward in the twelve hours following six o'clock Saturday night and a change of 25 degrees upward during Monday night certainly doesn't dovetail with any predictions that have been in print, nor is it likely that there is any other region in the country that can duplicate the record.

John F. Whitford, Eastford farmer, who challenged all old-time fiddlers to engage in a contest to determine the state championship, so far has had no acceptances. Mr. Whitford, who is 72 and who says that he has played the violin since he was twelve years old, is willing and desirous of matching his skill against that of "Meilie" Dunham, the Maine champion, who recently played for Henry Ford in Dearborn, Mich.

Mr. Whitford is no specialist. In addition to the violin he plays the piccolo, snaredrum and bones. He played the last named instrument as a member of Green's Minstrel show with which he traveled years ago. He disdains jazz music, but when it comes to the Virginia Reel, Money Musk old time jigs and waltzes, he is in his element, he says.

Ethelbert Aldrich of Providence, formerly of North Grosvernordale died very suddenly from an attack of acute indigestion while on a visit with relatives in Worcester.

For many years Mr. Aldrich was paymaster for the Grosvernordale company but several days ago moved to Providence, where he has been employed. Mr. Aldrich was one of the charter members of Israel Putnam lodge No. 33 of Odd Fellows having joined March 21, 1890. Funeral services were held in Providence Wednesday. Burial was in West Thompson cemetery.

Miss Duhamel, who has been at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, Boston, for the past month arrived home Thursday and is able to walk alone for the first time in many weeks. Physicians at the hospital have given her assurance of complete recovery. It was feared for a while that she had lost the use of her limbs permanently. She is the sister-in-law of Willis D. Carroll, druggist, alderman from Ward four.

Cadet Allen Thayer left early Thursday morning for the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. He had an eight days' leave of absence which expires Thursday afternoon at four o'clock and it is not well for officers in the making to take liberties with the big Academy on the Hudson. This is the first time that Mr. Thayer has been home since his admission to West Point, one and one-half years ago.

Nearly all if not all of the textile mills and other factories in Putnam closed Thursday evening until Monday morning. This was the second three-days' holidays as at Christmas time.

Henry L. Converse, who has been an employe of the Putnam postoffice for 24 years, said that the Christmas just passed was the first one in 24 years in which he had not worked. Although the larger cities are making complaints about the non-delivery of mail on that day, so far as known it has caused no business inconvenience here. Mr. Converse has been mail carrier for city route No. 1 ever since the free delivery service was established here.

The employes of the finishing department of the Putnam Woolen company presented their overseer, Thomas Ryan of School street, an electric floor lamp and a box of cigars, as a Christmas gift. The employes of the weaving department presented James C. Buntler, their overseer, $32.50 in gold at Christmas.

The stores will be closed all today, New Year's day.

Miss Gertrude Jones and her niece, Miss Ruth Bartlett, are spending the holiday vacation with friends in New York.

Dr. and Mrs. William Saretski and children have been guests of Mrs. Saretski's parents in Brooklyn, Conn.

Guy L. Baker stopped in Putnam a few days ago on his way from Florida to Boston. He has not definitely determined to remain in Florida permanently.

Mathewson Angell of Putnam, who has been spending the fall and early winter in Rhode Island, has been in the city this week. He will go from here to visit his daughter, Mrs. McMannis in Holyoke, Mass., but expects to spend most of the winter with another daughter, Miss Lottie Angell at Atlanta, Georgia.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING FROM MAYOR CHAPDELAINE

To Putnam Citizens: The Mayor and the City Council join in wishing a most happy New Year. Let us strive, during 1926, to show Putnam the progress and prosperity which we all, working together, deserve.

VICTOR CHAPDELAINE,
Mayor of Putnam.

LOOKING BACK AND AHEAD

We are once more at the point where we look both ways, backward and ahead. We are prone to reflect upon what has happened, what has been done, what accomplishments and progress have been made. We have a habit of measuring them up with what has gone before and to cogitate a bit on the comparisons. Out of it we get the foundation for the look ahead. Naturally we look forward with confidence but it is a confidence that is well grounded in the knowledge of conditions and the acquaintance with businessmen.

In The Bulletin's survey of business, banking and industrial activities in New London and Windham counties facts and figures are presented which indicated that it has not been a record breaking year. Such was not expected and yet it has been a year of better business, increased payrolls and a quickening of industrial activity. Banking shows an encouraging increase though construction work has not reached as high limits as in 1924, while the factories increasing production, with the postoffice doing such a volume of business that it is advanced into another class, with the annual turnover in the banks mounting to bigger figures, with the savings banks showing appreciable additions to deposits, the people of this end of the state can readily appreciate the importance of such conditions. The figures presented are worthy of careful study. They give a better idea of what eastern Connecticut is doing.

Even though 1925 was not a record maker it developed a strong turn in not only side for better business and better industrial activity, factors of great importance to the well being and prosperity of all concerned, directly and indirectly.

In the eastern part of the state there are spots which have been hard hit industrially during the past year. Indications point to the fact that the conditions are now improved and headed for a period of increased productivity.

The year has witnessed a number of transportation changes. They reflect the changing conditions and response to demands. Of particular importance locally, and for surrounding territory, also, is the decision of the army engineers to increase the width and depth of the Thames river channel from Allyn's Point to this city. Norwich will not only appreciate this increased facility but should make plans for getting every possible advantage from it in the future. By so doing we can the more fully justify the decision of the engineers.

One effort which should not go without note during the past year is the work that has been done under the stimulation of the Commercial Travelers for the elimination of dangerous railroad crossings up through the Quinebaug valley. It is a relief that cannot be experienced too soon.

Other good signs that have come to attention have been the village developments, the betterments looking to improved and cheaper power facilities and the continued efforts in behalf of road improvements.

Eastern Connecticut turns the year under auspicious prospects and with industry back to normal and humming, with the outlook good for an increasing volume of business the look ahead into 1926 must be regarded as decidedly promising. Under such conditions the desirability of all the cities and towns giving their earnest cooperation for those causes that are found to be of a general benefit should get deserved consideration.

WASTE FROM FIRES

When it comes to stopping waste there is a big opportunity always starring us in the face in many directions. One in particular looms up conspicuously when we stop to consider the fire losses which are reported each year. These great contributions to the national ashheap are glaring. Constant efforts are being put forth in behalf of fire prevention and attention is being directed to the enormous losses that are piling up in spite of them. Persistent campaigning against them undoubtedly results in more care being exercised than would otherwise be the case, but it is regrettable that greater reductions in the losses are not being made.

According to figures which have been compiled for this country and Canada the fire losses for 1923 totalled $536,000,000. In 1924 the total loss reached $504,000,000 and in 1924 the figures were $575,000,000. These show a small but steady drop, and to them should be added the estimate of $560,000,000 for the year 1925. A drop of $15,000,000 in three years is not to be scorned as it simply goes to show that it should have been greater in the past and likewise in the future the good work should be made to go on.

Building [illegible] such fire losses as [illegible] type of construction may have its good effects but our carelessness unquestionably runs extremely high. We can build better, put out more money for fire fighting apparatus and adopted the most approved methods of fighting fires, but the greatest and best means lies in preventing the fires. If the fires are not started there will be no fire losses. A large proportion of the fires are preventable and when that is thoroughly digested and there is a general effort made to such an end there will be the reduction in the great national fire waste every year. It is of course an old story but it is only through keeping it constantly to the front that and actually preventing that the fire losses will be kept down.

SELLING FIREARMS

Every time an attempt is made to restrict the sale of firearms it bumps up against the fact that they can be purchased and received through the mail. Thus though a state has restrictions they are easily dodged by getting the assistance of Uncle Sam.

There are large mail order houses which have acted upon their own initiative and announced that they would no longer deal in firearms. That removes certain sources but there are still plenty of those who have not taken action. Until they are forbidden to do so it is highly probable that they will not turn down the chance to make such sales for they will insist that as long as someone is going to make such sales they might as well have the benefit of the business as the other fellow.

In his annual report for his department, Postmaster General New has included in his recommendations the adoption of legislation that would restrict the sending of deadly weapons by mail. There is no chance for any such things to be excluded by the department without legislative action, and it is even possible for the postmen to do the collecting of the payments for such goods. They go the same as other merchandise.

When efforts have been made for the reduction of crime it has invariably been the case that the stopping of the sales of firearms has been advocated. States have established restrictions and heavy penalties have been fixed for possessing firearms without a permit. Still they are obtained, kept and used. The criminal has not been put out of business because of the restriction. Those who have obtained firearms for protection have been bothered but the criminals have had no insurmountable difficulty in getting all the guns they need. The chance to go to other states and purchase them or to buy them by mail order has not been overlooked by the criminally inclined and it will not be as long as the opportunity prevails. Forbidding the manufacture of firearms would be going too far but effectively restricting the sales seems entirely proper.

BRAZIL AND ITS COFFEE

While congress is digging into the facts concerning the rubber it is also doing the same thing in regard to coffee, the Brazilian coffee situation being the particular object.

Brazil has a monopoly in coffee quite as much as the state of Pennsylvania has in anthracite. It has a plan of fixing the price of coffee so that the world market is controlled. The valorization scheme may mean that though the warehouses of that country are filled with coffee, following a large crop, yet the exportation would be so controlled as to maintain the price. Brazil has a right to do this if it desires and if it does not care what the effect is going to be. Coffee can of course be grown elsewhere but not so cheaply and extensively as in Brazil, and Brazil not only knows this but it fully understands how strong the insistence is for coffee as a beverage.

Brazil seems to have a grip on us concerning coffee. Have we any chance for retaliating. Such a practice may not always be wise. Once started there's no telling where it will stop, and it does not contribute to closer relationships trade and otherwise.

But it is impossible to overlook the fact that while congress is looking into the coffee situation Brazil is looking for a loan of $50,000,000 to continue its valorization scheme. Naturally it might be expected to have such a loan floated in this country, but bankers have been asked not to participate. Whether Brazil can obtain it elsewhere remains to be seen. The difficulties in obtaining it however may cause some reflection on the advisability of continuing national monopolies.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A happy and prosperous New Year to all.

"Wets win in Scotland!" The surprise would have come had it been otherwise.

For a few days care will have to be taken to see that you don't date your letters a year back.

The mine conferees are to sit every day until they reach an agreement. Serves them right!

If you haven't received your new markers the safest course is to leave the car in the garage.

There is nothing to prevent hoping that the coal conference will result in a satisfactory agreement.

Are we getting to the point where the coal miners' president has experienced a real awakening?

It is always well to remember that the new year depends to a large extent on what you make it.

The man on the corner says: Don't be suspicious of the New Year just because it starts on Friday.

Those who are looking for quick results in New York should remember that a watched kettle never boils.

In Mr. Ford's efforts to revive the old dances he will find a few who can serve as excellent instructors.

Winter always revives the discussion on that old question that all thermometers are not noted for their veracity.

The judge of the Massachusetts court who says, "There's only one penalty in this court for stealing autos, and that's two years," is doing much to get respect for the law and to stop the stealing of autos.

TROUBLE WITH EUNICE.

"I see that the Terlings have a young man visiting them this week end," reported the tired business man who had joined his family for over Sunday at the lake. "When I came in from fishing I noticed him out at the boathouse with Mr. Terling and he is right good looking!"

"He would be," said the lady from the next cottage but one. "Whenever the Terlings have a young man up he is certain to be handsome, just as certain as he is to spend lots of his time being shown the boathouse and the electric plant and the garage and the row of beets and three muskmellons out back—they unite in keeping him thus occupied so that he will not have too much time to think about Eunice."

"Well, but isn't that what he is asked for—to think about Eunice?" demanded the tired business man. "What is the good of putting out the best embroidered guest towels and having doilies under the finger bowls and homemade ice cream and chicken and comfortable hammocks if a young man guest is not going to think about the daughter of the house? Maybe the boy thinks he is invited to be looked at or listened to."

"Young men that are don't think," explained the bachelor friend, who had dropped in on his way back to the hotel. "They just take what the gods provide and I have no doubt the Terlings are praying that in just that absent-minded trusting way he will take Eunice. Eunice is no picnic for a deserving set of parents to have around and they've had her for a lot of years. I admit that Eunice is pretty to look at, but I've heard her bawl out the cook, snub her father and get temperish at her mother and she was never known to be polite to anybody over 30 minutes unless it was in the presence of one of her young men. She's had six of 'em up here this summer and not a single one of 'em has seemed to stick. The only hope those poor parents have of getting the girl married off is to let a young man look at her in short snatches so that he'll remember her eyes and not the temper lines around her mouth."

"You know too much," protested the wife of the tired business man with feeling. "No wonder you are a bachelor! I always know when Eunice has a new young man visiting and so do all the rest of us hopeless and not-to-be-considered beyond-30's! When she has no young man about the girl is just as likely as not to walk right over any of us she meets on the path and not even turn around to see what was the bump under her heel! But when she is showing a new young man around Eunice begins beaming 500 feet away, her eyes glow meltingly at sight of one; she dons the expression of a lovely, trusting babe and ooces or trills or laughs according to her brand of young man.

"Oh, Mrs. Casperl I am so glad I met you! I do want Mr. Budd to know you! I was just hoping we'd meet you!' 'How-de-do,' says Mr. Budd as politely as he can, having no interest whatever in you, and gazes futurously on the kind, sympathetic, generous-hearted little creature beside him who he sees is so friendly toward all the world that she goes out of her way to be nice to lady fossils like yourself.

"And not a soul of us has the nerve to respond to Eunice with a shoulder shrug and bid her go chase herself—while we may yearn to slap her hard we play up to her in the most cowardly fashion and bid her bring Mr. Budd in for sandwiches and punch after swimming.

"The trouble seems to be that, with the best intentions in the world, something always slips at the Terlings—the boy hears Eunice answer old Mr. Snooks when he doddders up to call on the family or comes on her unexpectedly when she is giving her younger brother the dickens for something. I tell you if we have a heart we've all got to turn in and help the Terlings marry off Eunice and get the agony over!"

"This young man wasn't at all interested in the boathouse, either," reported the tired business man. "He kept looking back, as though hoping Eunice would appear! He seems real serious! He quite took my fancy and it seems too bad—"

"Shucks!" said the bachelor, preparing to move onward. "Trouble develops character—and, anyhow, he's a lucky guy!"—Chicago News.

Little Talks on Thrift

Outlook for Coming Year

Our country at large has been very prosperous during the past year and the business outlook for the coming year is bright.

Almost every division of trade and commerce report a good twelve months just closed. Labor is well employed, well paid and for the most part stabilized and satisfied. Wages are high, prices are being maintained for all commodities and our people are handling a great deal of money.

But the mere handling of large sums of money in the matter of earning and spending is not all sufficient to make for permanent prosperity for either the nation or the individual.

When times are good, as the common expression goes, there is always greater opportunity and more temptation to spend as you go. It is, in fact, harder for most people to save when they are prosperous than when they are not.

When the business sun shines high and strong it is hard for some people to think of the rainy days bound to come.

It would seem to be easy to make the most of our good fortune and yet it requires considerable strength of character and forethought to do this in just the right way.

In times of peace the wise soldier prepares for war. In times of abundant business the wise business man and true philosopher prepares for the day when business is bound to slow down.

The present times call for thrift.

It has been the universal human experience that thrift is less popular and more difficult to practice when we are in prosperity than otherwise.

No man was ever so prosperous or successful to be beyond the need of thrift.—American society for Thrift.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Henri Haeberlin, who today will be installed as president of the Swiss confederation, will serve for one year and will receive an official salary of $2,700, with an additional $3,000 for expenses. His chief duty will be to direct his country's foreign policy, for most of the internal administration is in the hands of the cantons or districts. There are thirty-five cantons, each of which is represented in the two houses of parliament. In his official duties the president is assisted by a federal council of seven, which forms a sort of cabinet. The new president is 55 years old and the son of a noted Swiss lawyer and orator. The son followed in the hands of the cantons or districts, turn became one of the foremost representatives of the legal profession in his country. During the past year he has served as vice president of the confederation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

O'Reilly View

Mr. Editor: Below are a few lines from the pen of the poet, John Boyle O'Reilly, which appear to describe the motives actuating the imperialistic nations of Europe that are so intensely desirous of our entrance into the world court with a view to "world peace." He wrote:

There was once a pirate, greedy and bold,
Who ravaged for gain, and saved the spoils;
Till his coffers were bursting with blood-stained gold,
And millions of captives bore his toils.

Then fear took hold of him, and he cried:
"I have gathered enough, now war should cease!"
And he sent out messengers far and wide
(To the strong ones only) to ask for peace.

"We are Christian brethren," thus he spake;
"Let us seal a contract—never to fight!
Except against rebels who dare to break
The bonds we have made by the victor's right."

And the strong ones listen; and some applaud
The kindly offer and righteous word;
With never a dream of deceit or fraud,
They would spike the cannon and break the sword.

But others, their elders, listen, and smile
At the sudden convert's unctuous style.
They watch for the peacemaker's change of way;
But his war-forges roar by night and by day.

Even now, while his godly messengers speak,
His guns are aflame on his enemies weak
He has stolen the blade from the hand of his foe,
And he strikes the unarmed a merciless blow.

To the ends of the earth his oppression runs:
The revels are blown from the mouths of his guns.
His war-tax devours his subjects' food
He taxes their evil and taxes their good;
He taxes their salt till he rots their blood.
He leaps on the friendless as on a prey,
And slinks, tail down, from the strong one's way.

The pharisee's cant goes up for peace;
But the cries of his victims never cease;
The stifled voices of brave men rise
From a thousand cells; while his rascal spies
Are spending their blood-money fast and free.

And this is the Christian to oversee
A world of evil! a saint to preach!
A holy well-doer come to teach!
A prophet to tell us war should cease!
A pious example of Christian peace!

I consider that the above lines of O'Reilly should have the immediate and most serious attention of all Americans at the present time, as they will be of immense aid to them in analysing current reports headed "Chinese killing Christians," "Turks massacre Christians," etc. etc.

Yours very truly

Lynchings in 1925

Mr. Editor: I send you the following concerning lynchings for the past year as compiled by Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research. I find there were 16 persons lynched in 1925. This number, ranking with the number of 16 for 1924 as the smallest number of persons lynched in any year since records of lynchings have been kept, is 17 less than the number 33 for 1923, and 41 less than the number 57 for 1922. Two of the victims were insane. Three others had been formally released by the courts. 10 of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, 2 from jails and 8 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of these lynched were burned at the stake and one was put to death and body burned.

There were 39 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 7 of these were in northern states and 32 in southern states. In 26 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In 13 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. In 3 instances during the year persons charged with being connected with lynching mobs were indicted. Of the 41 persons thus before the courts, 21 were sentenced, 5 suspended sentences dependent on good behavior, of from 4 to 12 months on the road; 1 for 30 days in jail, and 15 of from 6 months on the road to 8 years in the penitentiary.

Of the sixteen persons lynched all were negroes, 6 or less than one half of those put to death were charged with rape or attempted rape. The offenses charged were: Murder, 6; rape, 4; attempted rape, 2; killing officer of the law, 2; attacking child, 1; insulting woman, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 1; Florida, 2; Georgia, 2; Louisiana, 1; Mississippi, 6; Missouri 1; Utah, 1; Virginia, 1.

Yours very truly,

From Small Beginnings

Friedrich Gerstaecker, a Great German Novelist

"Write to thy mother and thou shalt become famous," is the way the old commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother," seems to have been written for Friedrich Gerstaecker, one of the most noted of German writers of the first half of the 19th Century. The honor given to father and mother has more than once been the stepping stone to greatness. Friedrich Gerstaecker had been little better than a tramp. He had left his home and his country and had come to the United States, where he wandered everywhere looking at life, laughing at oddities and working just enough to give him money to move on to the next place. He was by nature one of those restless persons who long to see all that there is in the world. Before his death at the age of 56 he had wandered over a very large part of the world, including the far-off Pacific islands and the interior of Abyssinia.

In his first wanderings as a young man of 21 he forgot everything else except his mother. To her religiously he wrote regularly, telling her of all the interesting sights that he saw, of the queer people, the new customs and especially of the adventures that he experienced in his wandering life. The mother, with a mother's pride in her son and constant love for him, read these letters and cried over them and then read them to her friends. One of these friends was an editor, who began to print in his paper the delightfully breezy, unrestrained, spontaneous letters of travel. In them there was nothing artificial, no false striving for art—simply a straightforward telling of the truth in a way intended for interest. That is the very sum total of the writer's art. Friedrich Gerstaecker, without knowing it at all, was becoming an author. Six years after he had left home he went back to see the mother whom he loved—and he found himself greeted as one of the most popular writers of the day. In his years of wandering he had worked at everything, and was ready to do anything, no matter what it was.

Now for the rest of his life he did the two things he liked best to do; he traveled over nearly the entire world and he wrote book after book, all of them founded on exactly what he saw in his wandering life. At no time in his life did he forget his home and his mother. When he was away, in whatever strange region, whether in little-visited lands in South America or in the extremely remote regions of the East, he wrote home faithfully. From time to time he went back to his native place, the real source of his inspiration. There was in his writings such a quality of freshness and originality, such a genial spirit, of looking at the world through the eyes of hearty good nature and such a revelation of the unusual in unusual places, that he made himself famous beyond his own country.

Stories That Recall Others

Separating the Spoons

Tom, age six, has just returned from a fashionable party.

"Did you have a good time?" his mother asked.

"Yes," he replied, "but there were four spoons at my plate."

"What did you do about it?" his mother asked.

"Well," he replied, "I just said eent, meent, mini, mo and took the last one."

His Dad Made It

Out in the country lives a man who has been arrested several times for making hooch. He has four children in school and they are naturally asked many questions. One day the following conversation with one of the boys took place:

"Do you like hooch?"

"No."

"Why don't you like it?"

"It's not good."

"How do you know it's not good?"

"It don't smell good."

"Your dad certainly don't make very good hooch, does he?"

"None of your business."

Prisoners Turn Critics

Richard Bartelmess recently paid a visit to Sing Sing prison to award prizes to the winners in the review contest on his production, The Beautiful City.

A week previous the picture had been shown in the chapel of the prison, and $100 in cash prizes was offered for the best reviews written by the prisoners. The men were told they could say anything they wanted to about the picture, but they must give their honest opinion.

It was a unique showing, as unique as any ever given a movie. Fifteen hundred convicts, some of them the most notorious in the United States if not the world, sat silently throughout its length. It had a peculiar interest for its audience, as it unfolds a drama of the underworld, and a big pay roll robbery, with the connivance of crooks, as the plot. Most of the scenes were laid in New York's East Side, which hundreds of the Sing Sing men call their home.

More than 300 went back to their cells and labored over reviews of what they had seen. They were from all angles—the crook's viewpoint, chiefly; but also from the viewpoint of the man of literature and culture. They did not spare their criticism of points which did not appeadid not appeal to them, but, strange as it may seem, there not a review that even hinted a dishonest opinion.

The Land-and-Sea Serpent

The latest sea serpent story comes from Australia. Side by side with a log-book entry of the French steamer St. Francis Xavier mentioning that a sea serpent sixty feet long had been sighted off the coast of New South Wales, there is "news of remarkable happenings among the swamps just inland in the same neighborhood. Farmers living among these swamps were puzzled at the frequent disappearances of their cattle and the smashing of their fences. It was assumed that thieves had killed the cattle and taken them away by boat. And yet search revealed no tracks of either men or horses, only a curious wide furrow leading to the beach. Then one night a boy was wakened by dogs barking and went out with his gun, also arousing some farm hands. What the lad saw was "a great dark object, resembling a huge snake, traveling across fences and paddock at a terrific rate. Its head was held high in the air, and in its mouth was a struggling calf." Its trail was followed to the beach, and the creature was seen to enter the water. It seems a good example of the tall story, but it arrives at the wrong time of the year for general consumption in this country. It should have been kept in cold storage until next August.—Manchester Guardian.

SCORE HAVE TAKEN OUT COMBINATION LICENSES

A score of combination hunting and fishing licenses for 1926 have been issued so far by Town Clerk Charles M. Holbrook.

When getting their new licenses sportsmen should take with them their old licenses and a record of the number of game killed in 1925. The combination licenses cost $3.75. Fishing or hunting license single is $2.25.

The new system of licensing hunters and fishermen will go into effect on January 1 in Connecticut. There will be eight different licenses and eight different buttons, the color combination of which will correspond with the license. The eight licenses with the colors for the licensee cards and buttons are:

Resident combination hunting and fishing license will cost $3.75 and the non-resident combination hunting and fishing license will cost $11.25. A resident hunting license alone will cost $2 with a registration fee of 25 cents and a resident angling license will cost the same. Anyone who hunts and fishes will save 75 cents by taking out a combination license. A non-resident hunting license alone will cost $10 with a recording fee of 25 cents and a non-resident angling license will cost $3 with a recording fee of 25 cents. A non-resident who hunts and fishes in Connecticut will save $2.25 by taking out a combination license.

Each town clerk in addition to receiving books of the regular licenses will receive one book of duplicate licenses containing 15 duplicates, five each of hunting, angling and combination, for issuance in cases where license are lost. As the buttons cost the state about four cents apiece the commission cannot furnish town clerks with a supply of duplicate buttons, but they may be had on application to the secretary. Because of the cost of buttons it behooves sportsmen to be careful not to lose them.

The licenses, as heretofore, are not transferable, they confer no rights of trespass, and must be produced for examination on demand of any commissioner of fisheries and game, the superintendent, any warden or other officer authorized to make arrest or the owner or lessee in actual occupancy of any land upon which the hunter or fisherman may be found. The license button must be displayed on the outer garment at all times when hunting or fishing, and licenses must be carried on person at all times when hunting or fishing.

The buttons are attractively designed, durably made, and measure about 1 3-4 inches in circumference. They have heavy safety-pins with which it should be easy to attach them to sporting garments of toughest material.

WEST ENDERS HOLD SECOND NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY

"Forget the '25 troubles and be of good cheer, for tonight is the last, tomorrow's next year," seemed to be the prevailing spirit at the second annual New Year's eve frolic of the West End Community association, held Thursday night at the Elizabeth street school auditorium.

The affair proved one of the most successful ever held by the association and as it was a masquerade affair there was fun aplenty throughout the evening, especially before the time to unmask. For entertainment, besides the many round and square dances, there were vocal and instrumental numbers by members of the association, which met with instant approval.

The programme was opened by President C. E. Carpenter, who welcomed the members and friends to the hall and expressed a desire that they might enjoy an evening of pleasure. Dancing to music furnished by the Mohegan orchestra, Alfred Smith, director, was enjoyed until about 9:30 o'clock, when the grand march took place and the judges, Miss Catherine Mallett, Miss Elizabeth Huntington and Miss Rose Trumbull selected the prize winning costumes.

The prizes were awarded as follows: Men's best costume, Charles N. Palicho; ladies' best costume, Miss Dorothy Holden; men's funniest costume, Charles Parson; ladies' funniest costume, Miss Nellie Nagle; honorable mention, Miss Ruth Mullins; most original costume, Miss Bernice Clark.

For music there was a pleasing violin solo, by Earl Swan, and a delightful solo, by Miss Florence Carpenter, the soloists being accompanied on the piano by Miss Nina Perry. One of the treats of the evening was the performance of Prof. Banfield, whose mystifying tricks held the interest of his audience throughout.

The round and square dances were enjoyed at various times in the evening, prompting for the old fashioned dances being in charge of Charles Burke. Delightful refreshments were served before the close of the programme.

At midnight, when 1925 was on its way into the dim past and the baby 1926 let out its first lusty cry, all joined hands and sang Auld Lang Syne After the usual greetings for a Happy New Year, the frolic came to a close for another year.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Miss Mary Coughlin, chairman; Mrs. Frank L. Royce, Miss Nina Perry and Ralph Marsh.

The association and committee expressed appreciation to the following individuals who so kindly contributed the prizes of the evening: Dr. Charles Solomon, Morris L. Bernstresser, C. F. Carpenter, William D. Hicker and Fred M. Ott.

MOOSE INITIATE 46 NEW YEAR'S EVE

New Year's eve, at the Moose home, Laurel Hill, there was a class of 46 candidates initiated. Jack O'Brien and his "Radio Boys", from Boston, entertained the boys with songs, stories and novelties, including a very unique musical act. Hooker and partner put on a very classy and fast act which no doubt will be seen, in the very near future, in the best theatres in New England. To top the whole show Asst. Steward Charlie "Pop" Korn served one of his famous chowders This initiation concludes the class. Next comes the "D" class, which terminated on the last Saturday in January. The committee has pledged themselves to have at least fifty candidates for class "D". Each and every candidate initiated New Year's eve, pledged himself to bring in at least one candidate for "D" class. Chairman "Benny" Wunderlich has promised to put on a banner entertainment for "D" class, so its up to the newly elected brothers to get busy and go over the top on the last Saturday in January.

The following brothers are the committee with the members to make this class a success: "Benny" Wunderlich, chairman; Alex Kaminisky, Henry Jarvis, Herbert Keeley, William Murdicki, Brownie Polaski, John Merbois, Peter Carolinas, Joseph Tomanio, Carl Pierson, Philip Baumgartner, Joe Keoughan and Charlie Korn.

REENLISTMENTS FOR THE U. S. S. HOLLAND

The navy recruiting officer for the state of Connecticut, with headquarters at 362 Chapel street, New Haven, is in receipt of a letter from the navy department, authorizing the reenlistment of former navy men for the U. S. S. Holland which is soon to commission at the navy yard at Bremerton, Washington. The Holland is the latest submarine tender for the navy, and is equipped with the most modern workshops and devices for the upkeep of our underwater fleet. Transportation by rail will be furnished men reenlisting for the Holland direct to the ship in Bremerton. Skilled ratings, such as machinist's mates, coppersmiths, blacksmiths and boilermakers are particularly desired for this duty. It is expected that the Holland will be ready for service in the fleet by the first of next April.

Commander L. W. Bishop, medical corps, U. S. navy, of the navy recruiting station, New Haven, has been authorized to examine applicants for the citizens military training camps for the summer of 1926. Applicants for these camps upon presenting the proper application forms at the main recruiting office at the aforementioned address will be carefully examined by Commander Bishop with no expense to themselves.

Next summer, it has been definitely announced, the practice cruise of the midshipmen from the naval academy, Annapolis, will be made on board the battleships Wyoming, New York, and the Utah. The cruise will be alone the Atlantic coast of the United States and in West Indian waters. The practice squadron will leave Annapolis about June 4, returning the latter part of August.

The battleships Texas, Arkansas and Florida, of the scouting fleet, which are now under reconstruction in Atlantic coast navy yards, are scheduled to be completed and to join the fleet in the fall. At this time, the Wyoming New York and Utah will go to their home yards for similar reconstruction and modernization.

There has been some discussion concerning a suggestion to offer the naval collier Orion for use as a bombing target for army airplanes but no decision has as yet been reached. The Orion has been at Norfolk since she returned disabled after encountering a gale off the Capes of the Chesapeake, that impaired the strength of her hull and started serious leaks. It is considered more likely that the old skimming board ships will be used for the bombing practices as authorized by current law.

A. L. AUXILIARY ENTERTAINS AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

The patients and staff at Uncas-on-Thames, (Norwich Tuberculosis Sanatorium) were royally entertained Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of Robert O. Fletcher Post No. 4, American Legion.

The entertainment programme consisted of several groups of orchestral selections by the Roamers, the orchestra being repeatedly called upon for encores. Fred Mell of Jewett City, with vocal solos charmed his audience and in his several appearances fixed himself well in the hearts of his audience. For special numbers Scottie Power, in Highlander costume, favored with several Scottish numbers and these were immediate hits, evoking much applause.

One of the features of the programme was the mystifying act of Prof. Banfield, who held rapt attention of his large audience throughout his performance and won applause for the clever manner in which he performed the difficult tricks.

At the conclusion of the programme the patients were presented with apples, the gift of the auxiliary, and, in turn, to show their appreciation for the delightful entertainment, the staff of the institution served hot cocoa and cookies.

The committee in charge of the entertainment comprised Mrs. Grace E. Willey and Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue. Other auxiliary members present were Mrs. Louise Leipold, Mrs. Carrie Kimball, Mrs. John B. Oat and Miss Evon Broadhurst.

LIONS NAME COMMITTEES FOR COMING MONTH

President William A. Anderson presided over the session of the Norwich Lions club, held Thursday noon at the Wauregan house. William R. Frisbie acted as song leader and in the absence of the club pianist Harry Walker was at the piano.

The meeting was for business and numerous committee reports were heard. The show committee, in charge of arrangements for That's That, reported that the show director would arrive in Norwich early in January and that rehearsals would start immediately after his arrival. The play is being presented to raise money for the club charity fund.

The attendance contest prize, a combination spot and flash light, donated by Rudolph Henschel, was awarded to Louis Fontaine. Committee appointments for the month of January were announced by President Anderson as follows: Dr. Clarence Thompson, Dr. Kopland K. Markoff and Louis Fontaine. The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

SPECIAL SERVICE SUNDAY AT METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, announced Thursday evening that stereopticon slides of "The Enemy" will feature the Sunday evening service at the church. In connection with the slides, Rev. Mr. Graham said:

The national study conference on the churches and world peace held in Washington, D. C., in December, prepared a "Message to the Churches" stating, "In every age Christians are compelled not only to voice their protest against the existing order, but to point out precisely what the spirit of Christ demands and to try practically to embody it.

"The church, the body of Christ all-inclusive—transcending race and national traditions—should henceforth oppose war, as a method of settling disputes between nations and groups as contrary to the spirit and principles of Jesus Christ and should declare that it will not as a church sanction war.

"War is the most colossal calamity and scourge of modern life. War is not inevitable. It is the supreme enemy of mankind, its futility is beyond question. Its continuance is the suicide of civilization. We are determined to outlaw the whole war system. Economics and industry, social welfare and progressive civilization, morality and religion, all demand a new international order in which righteousness and justice between nations shall prevail and in which nation shall fear nation no longer, and prepare for war no more. For the attainment of this high ideal the life of the nations must be controlled by the spirit of mutual goodwill made effective through appropriate agencies. War must be outlawed and declared a crime by international agreements. The war spirit and war feelings must be banished and war preparations abandoned. Permanent peace based on equal justice and in fair dealing for all alike, both great and small, must be achieved. The kingdom of God in the relations of nations must be established."

It is interesting to note that one of the most popular plays of recent years has the study of war as its subject. The great question does the commandment "Thou shalt not kill" have reference "only to the retail trade?" is raised, studied and answered in Channing Pollack's "The Enemy."

PHI ALPHA CLASS HAS CHRISTMAS SOCIAL

The Phi Alpha class of the First Baptist Bible school held its Christmas party at the home of Mrs. William Harvey, 353 West Thames St., Wednesday evening. In the room was a beautifully decorated tree with its cheering Christmas lights, red and green. After the business meeting, the hostess, Mrs. Harvey, assisted by Miss Lillian Coumb, served dainty refreshments. Each guest was presented with a Christmas decoration box of candy. The teacher, Mrs. L. A. Hurlburt, was presented a beautiful painting.

TWO WOMEN INJURED WHEN HORSE RAN AWAY

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 31—(AP)—Two women were painfully injured here this afternoon, when a horse hitched to an express wagon became frightened and dashed onto the sidewalk at Hill and Prince streets. Nellie Quinn, of Washington avenue, sustained a cut forehead and an injury to her shoulder. Della Kinnally, of Salem street, received a fracture of the right leg. Both were taken to the New Haven hospital.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS FROM MAYOR WATERS

My earnest wish to the people of Norwich is for a year of health, peace and prosperity; wisdom that will enable us to solve the problems that will confront us; cooperation in making our loved Norwich a better city still; and that the spirit of community service which has shown such a growth during the last year will be extended until we can forget partisanship and any sectional feeling and all work together for Norwich.

MILO R. WATERS,
Mayor of the City of Norwich.

SELLS INTERESTS IN JEWETT CITY TEXTILE NOVELTY CO.

Joseph C. Worth, has sold his interests in the Jewett City Textile Novelty company, relinquishing all of his holdings in the company to Alex and Andrew McNicol of Jewett City, whose father, Archibald McNicol, established the company some years ago.

Mr. Worth has not announced his plans for the future but it is considered likely that he will branch into some line of endeavor within a few months. For a number of years Mr. Worth has been prominent as one of the young men of the city engaged in manufacturing business.

Mr. Worth was president of the company from which he now retires, first president of the Norwich Rotary club in 1920-21, a member and former director of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, past president of the Norwich Golf club, a member of the Arcanum club of this city and of the Thames club of New London.

He was born in Norwich, July 2, 1892 and graduated from the Norwich Free Academy in 1910. For one year he was a clerk in the Dime Savings bank and then went to New York to enter the employ of Charles F. Noyes, the realtor. He remained with Mr. Noyes for about a year then returned to this city and became associated in business with his father, engaged in the wholesale produce business, the firm being known as the J. C. Worth company. On the death of his father, February 15, 1916 Mr. Worth took over the entire business and continued with it then until Dec. 17, 1917 when he sold out to Alexander Jordan, who now conducts the business keeping the same firm name.

After disposing of his business interests in Norwich Mr. Worth became engaged in war work with the War Trade War board in Washington, D. C. Later he was transferred to New York city as an expert on food, in charge of foodstuffs, continuing in this capacity until the close of the war.

Returning to Norwich he purchased an interest in the Jewett City Textile Novelty company of Jewett City, accepting the office of vice president and secretary of the concern. On January 1, 1921 he became president of the company also served as salesmanager.

COURT ODERS SALE OF UNCAS PAPER BOARD CO.

At the short calendar session of the superior court in this city Friday morning, Judge Christopher L. Avery granted an order for the sale of the Uncas Paper Board Co. plant and equipment free of encumbrances, at public auction on Jan. 18th., for not less than $650,000. The order to sell the plant was issued when the short calendar case of H. G. Craig and Co., Ltd., et al., vs. the Uncas Paper Board Co. was heard. An order was entered allowing the receiver Frank W. Browning, compensation from September 12, 1925 to December 12, 1925. An order allowing compensation to the accountants was postponed.

Other matters were disposed of as follows:

For failure to disclose defense, judgment of foreclosure was ordered in the case of Connor against Kuzia, and wife.

Order to reinstate on the docket was granted in the case of the Savings Bank of New London against Sweeney, administrator.

The case of Murphy, and others, against Hastings in which there were two motions for a hearing in damages, went off the list.

The following two cases were continued:

Witchewski against The Falls Co., and other; appeal from compensation commissioner; hearing on defendant's appeal.

Cases have been assigned for trial as follows:

Tuesday, January 5th.—Kelly, trustee, vs. Norwich Savings society, et al; Kendall vs. Lumsden, et al.; Nazaruk, et all., vs. Krwosnik, et al.

Friday, January 8th.—Short calendar, bar meeting and assignment of cases.

EAGLES INITIATED 15 NEW YEAR'S EVE

The New Year was ushered in by Norwich Aerie of Eagles, with a class initiation and smoker held at the home on Cliff street, Thursday evening. The class numbered 15 and the work was full form. Following the initiation, there were brief remarks by State Treasurer William R. Hewitt, who spoke of the bright prospects of another year for the Eagles in Norwich, as well as in the nation. He was followed by Past Presidents Martin Keough, E. J. Mullins and Timothy Fields, all of whom were very optimistic in their predictions for 1926.

After the meeting a smoker was held at which three bang-up good boxing bouts were staged. In the opening bout, Young McCarthy and Kid O'Brien stepped four fast rounds. The second bout was a five-round affair between Irish Billy Glynn and Young Meyers. The main bout of the evening was a fast and hard four-round go between Young Martin Flaherty and Frankie Busch. Both boys fought hard and fast and was the feature of the evening.

Refreshments were served during the evening by the committee in charge of which Timothy Fields was the chairman.

FORMER NORWICH RESIDENT DEAD AT HARTFORD

Word was received in this city Thursday, of the death of a former Norwich resident, Miss Katharyn E. Doyle, at her home in Hartford, that day. Miss Doyle was a resident of this city for a number of years and was the daughter of the late John E., and Catherine Murphy Doyle. She was born in this city Oct. 19, 1897, and is survived by two sisters, Eleanor E. Doyle, and Mrs. George H. Callahan, both of Hartford. Her death will be received with profound sorrow by her friends in this city and their sympathy is extended to the family in their time of sorrow.

Visited Jewett City

The members of the S. S. club of Westerly went to Jewett City, Tuesday evening to attend a Christmas tree festival at the home of Miss Helen McGowan.

JOSEPH PETRONE SUES FOR DAMAGES OF $10,000

Papers have been served by Deputy Sheriff Oscar Main, in a damage suit for $10,000, brought by Joseph Petrone, of this city, against Albert A. Cloutier and Norman Cloutier, both of Norwich, and the sheriff has also placed an attachment on a Nash 1922 touring car in connection with the suit. The action is returnable the first Tuesday in February, 1926, before the superior court.

The defendant, Albert A. Cloutier was at the time herein after referred to the owner of a motor vehicle, and was and is maintained by him for the purpose of his business and his pleasure and for the members of his family, and said motor vehicle was and is bailed or hired by the defendant, Albert A. Cloutier, to others of his family for the purpose of business or pleasure.

On Dec. 18, 1925, at about 10:50 p. m., the plaintiff, while in the exercise of all due care on his part, descended from a trolley car which had stopped on Boswell avenue, Norwich, on trolley tracks westerly of the center of the highway, at a point opposite St. Joseph's cemetery and directly north of a certain crossover maintained by the Conn. Co., for its trolley cars, and while said car had been proceeding in a southerly direction, the said plaintiff, with others having descended from the said trolley and with others, and being about to transfer to another trolley car standing on the tracks easterly of the center of the highway and just northerly of said cross-over and about opposite to the first mentioned trolley car.

At said time and place, the auto belonging to Albert A. Cloutier was being operated northerly along Boswell avenue, by the defendant, Norman Cloutier, a brother, said motor vehicle being operated at the time in the furtherance of the purpose for which it was maintained by the said defendant, Albert A. Cloutier, and as part of the use to which it was customarily and habitually put by the defendant, Albert A. Cloutier, and was being operated for the convenience of the defendant, Albert A. Cloutier by a driver to whom he customarily and habitually intrusted the operation and care of said auto.

Norman Cloutier, while driving said auto passed the second mentioned trolley car on which the plaintiff was about to ascend, at a high, reckless and dangerous rate of speed, in a careless and dangerous manner, and without keeping a proper lookout for pedestrians who might reasonably have been seen by the defendant Norman Cloutier, and who could have seen had he, Norman Cloutier, been in the exercise of due care while pedestrians were on the street at the said time and place.

While thus operating the said motor vehicle on the highway, although it was necessary that he slackened his pace, having met pedestrians in the traveled portion of the highway, said defendant, Norman Cloutier, wholly failed to slacken his pace, and on the contrary proceeded in a reckless and dangerous manner, and although said trolley cars had been stopped to discharge passengers and to take on passengers, the said defendant, Norman Cloutier, wholly failed to wait until said passengers had arrived at a point of safety and while said passengers were still in the traveled portion of the highway operated and drove the said auto at a high dangerous, reckless and unreasonably rate of speed before all passengers had meeting pedestrian walking in the arrived at points of safety, and said Norman Cloutier wholly failed upon meeting pedestrians walking in the highway to give said pedestrians, including the plaintiff, a fair and equal opportunity to use the travelled portion of the said highway, and on the contrary operated the said auto in such a manner and without warning, so negligently in violation of the statutes of the state of Connecticut, as to cause the said motor vehicle to strike the plaintiff a swift and sudden blow knocking him upon and against one of the afore mentioned trolley cars and dragging him a considerable distance along the ground and finally hurling him down and upon the highway, where from the plaintiff received severe injuries.

As a result of being so struck by said motor vehicle operated by the defendant Norman Cloutier, the plaintiff suffered a broken leg, a shattered knee cap, severe cuts and contusions about the head and body; thereby causing the plaintiff severe mental and physical pain and suffering all of which will result in permanent injuries to the plaintiff.

Petrone, who has been a patient at the Backus hospital since the accident, was discharged from that institution Thursday and returned to his home. Authorities state that he has not fully recovered from the injuries he received on December 13th.

NEW YEAR'S EVE FROLIC AT ELKS' HOME

Norwich Elks bade goodbye to the old year and welcomed the new with a New Year's eve frolic in the hall at the Elks' home, which had been transformed for the occasion into a cabaret, with beautifully decorated tables around which the merrymakers were seated. Pennants hung in long streamers across the hall and the guests were gay in paper caps of white trimmed with the Elks' purple. The platform where the orchestra played for the dancing was profusely decorated in palms and potted palms and the tables were decorated poinsettia and other flowers.

A vaudeville programme by the Clement Entertainers, was a feature of the evening. Those to appear were Campbell & Heck, whirlwind dancers, doing the Adagio, Apache and others; Eddie Mahoney, the singing policeman of Hartford; Martin & Storen, accordion artists; Babe Nelson, eccentric dancer; Geraldine Havens, in songs of the day.

An excellent supper menu was served by a New London caterer, and the Elks voted that the lodge committee in charge of the evening had set a new mark for delightful New Year's eve frolics.

HELPING HANDS HELD CHRISTMAS SOCIAL

The Spiritual Academy was the scene of one of the merriest Christmas socials in its history Thursday evening. The social hall was attractively decorated for the occasion in brilliant Christmas colors and novelties. Owing to the fact that the social was held on New Year's eve, the games all partook of the nature of the advent of the coming year. Calendar games, with calendar prizes, good resolution games, with appropriate prizes, and many of the old time games, in which many of the older members and guests entered with the old-time zest.

The committee which so successfully planned and executed the pleasant affair, consisted of Mrs. William Beetham, chairman, assisted by Mrs. James Mackey, Mrs. D. Buddington, Mrs. Frances Slater and Mrs. Leon Hayden. The president of the Union announced the appearance of Mrs. Annette F. Conyers, the noted psychometrist, this Sunday at both services.

A heavily laden Christmas tree held gifts for all present.

CLAIMS THAT FIRPO HAS ACCEPTED DEMPSEY'S OFFER FOR TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—An announcement that Luis Angel Firpo has accepted definitely an offer from Jack Dempsey to fight the heavyweight champion in a title bout at Tia Juana, Mexico, in July, was made today by Tex Douglass, motion picture director upon his return from Buenos Aires.

According to Douglass, who said he had directed a film in which Firpo took a star part, the "wild bull of the Pampas" cabled Dempsey in response to a direct offer from the champion for a return match.

"Firpo already is making plans to return to the United States," Douglass said, "and may do so by next month. He thinks he is in better condition than ever before and that Dempsey is not so good. He is confident he can beat the champion if he has another match."

The assertion that Firpo plans an early visit here conflicts with recent reports that the Argentine fighter had agreed to box Erminio Spalla, of Italy, at Buenos Aires on March 6 but Dempsey himself recently was quoted in Los Angeles as saying he would be willing to meet Firpo again before battling Harry Wills, negro contender. This drew a declaration from Firpo that the time that he would be ready for a fight in July, either at Tia Juana or Los Angeles, but no previous indication has been given that any definite arrangements were being made for such a bout.

DEMPSEY'S FRIENDS SAY NO CHANCE OF BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31—(AP)—Jack Dempsey could not be reached today for comment on reports that Luis Firpo had signed to meet the champion in a title match at Tia Juana in July. Dempsey's representatives expressed themselves as positive that Dempsey would not consent to match a bout being staged in Mexico.

TOE THREAT OF MID-WEST IS DONE IN JUNIOR TENNIS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—The mid-west invasion in quest of National Juvenile Indoor Tennis titles, led by diminutive Warren F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City, was broken and routed today by leading eastern racquets in the semi-final rounds of boys' and junior competition after four strenuous days of brilliant matches at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Coen, the only player entered in both events, fell in the boys test before the hard driving and clever volleying of the two national outdoor champion, Frank Shields of New York, in three vigorously-contested sets, 2-6, 8-1, 6-1, 6-1. In the junior tournament, the Kansas City lad, who has been called upon to play 14 matches, wilted under the severe driving of Julius Seligson of New York and suffered elimination in straight sets by scores of 6-2, 6-0.

The final round in both events tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock will thus mark the end of competition in pitting east against east, for Shields will meet in Walter Thomas of Elizabeth, N. J. the champion for the boys' outdoor title last summer, while Seligson will be pitted against Edward Jacobs of Baltimore, victor in the boys' indoor tournament here a year ago for the junior championship.

WEST POINT REFUSES TO COMMENT ON BIFF JONES

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 31—(AP)—West Point officials refused to comment today on reports that Lawrence McCeney (Biff) Jones of Washington, D. C., had been selected as head football coach to succeed Captain John J. McEwan, who has accepted the post of mentor at the University of Oregon.

Those close to army football believe that Jones has been chosen and that the authorities are awaiting his formal acceptance before making a public announcement. For several years he has been an assistant coach, in the regimes of both Charley Daly and McEwan.

Jones was appointed to the military academy from the District of Columbia and played on the football teams of 1914-15-16. He was elected captain for 1917, but the war interfered with football, his class being graduated a year ahead of time. He was a tackle and guard.

MISS WILLS FOR TOUR OF EUROPEAN COURTS

BERKELEY, Calif., Dec. 31—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills, national women's tennis champion, with her mother departed today for an eight months' tour of Europe, on which Miss Wills expects to meet Miss Suzanne Lenglen, noted French player.

Miss Wills and her mother will leave New York Jan. 6 and arrive at Havre Jan. 15. The champion expects to take part in a number of foreign tennis tournaments in the spring and summer, including the tennis classics at Wimbledon.

YALE AND WILLIAMS PLAY TIE HOCKEY GAME

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Dec. 31—(AP)—The Williams and Yale hockey teams played a one to one tie today in the third game of the practice series at the Lake Placid club. Williams took the first game 3 to 1 and yesterday Yale evened the series with a 3 to 2 victory. The deciding game will be played tomorrow.

Bib Cutler, football star, made his first appearance with the Yale team which was handicapped by the loss of Stout and Cole, who received minor injuries yesterday. Harry Watkins, Williams captain and center, left the game after a fall in the second period but returned to the game in the last period.

YALE AND PENN OPEN COLLEGE BASKETBALL LEAGUE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Yale and Pennsylvania will open the Intercollegiate Basketball league at Philadelphia tomorrow in the first game of a season that promises to witness an exceedingly keen battle for title honors.

It will mark Yale's debut under the new coaching regime of George Taylor, who succeeded the late Joe Fogarty, and the Elis are confident of making a strong bid for the championship now held by Princeton's quintet.

BASKETBALL
—TODAY—
Parish Hall, Taftville
At 3:15 o'Clock.
TAFTVILLE FIVE, vs.
WEBSTER KACEYS
Preliminary.

TAFTVILLE PLAYS WEBSTER KACEYS THIS AFTERNOON

A special holiday basketball attraction has been arranged for the entertainment of the fans of Norwich and vicinity, when the Webster council, K. of C., of Webster, Mass., meets the fast Taftville five in the Parish hall, this afternoon.

The Kacey quintet, champions of the city of Webster for two years and reputed to be one of the leading aggregations in the Bay state, will present in their lineup, an array of chalked court performers that rank with the top notchers of the game and feel certain that they will give the local lads a stiff battle. Cavorting in the forward berths for the visitors will be "Billy" Forand, formerly of the Worcester Collegians, and "Dud" White, high scorer in the Interscholastic league, last season; LaChance or "Slim" Malone, former Webster town star, will jump with Capt. Joe Lonergan and Braniff, stars of Bartlett High as guards. L. Lonergan and Bartholemi will act as reserves.

The management of the local team has spared no expense in booking games with teams of the highest calibre for the sole purpose of giving the fans a run for their money and the fans that attended the games this season particularly the latter three, will agree that each game was a closely contested battle to the end. This afternoon's struggle has every indication of being one of the hair-raising variety and a stiff battle is anticipated.

The locals will line up as follows: "Mondi" Normandin and "Rabbit" Gauthier, will hold down the forward berths; "Eddie" Murphy will be in the pivot position, with "Jim" Murphy and Tom Coleman as guards. Bus Murphy will be in reserve.

In the preliminary game the Celtics will meet the Plainfield Buddies in the second game of the series, the first encounter going to the Buddies by the slim margin of one point.

JEWETT CITY AND PLAINFIELD CLASH ON FLOOR TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Dec. 31—Fresh from a victory over the Hartford Crescents, the Jewett City Pros invade Plainfield New Year's night, confident of taking that far-famed team into camp. Plainfield has been sailing along in smooth water all during the season without once crashing on the rocks of defeat. Jewett City, however, may prove to be a rock, but at any rate, Plainfield is due for a rough trip Friday night.

Manager Faber was unable to secure the team that he first intended but his lineup will not be a weak one by any means and looks fully as good as the Plainfield team. Faber will have Benjamin and Angelica in the forward berths with Mills in the center position. The guards will be Pickett, Jester, Barry and Blake. With this team Jewett City is confident of taking the measure of the Plainfield club.

BERLENBACH TO TAKE UP WRESTLING AFTER RING

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Paul Berlenbach, world's lightheavyweight champion, will go back to the headlock and scissors when the punch leaves his powerful left hand.

Originally a wrestler and an Olympic mat champion in 1920, Paul never has lost his interest in the grappling sport, despite his unusual success with the gloves.

"When I quit the ring," he was quoted as saying today, "I will surely go back to wrestling. The beauty of that sport is a man is never too old to wrestle and a good man can earn more money wrestling than fighting."

CHIP DUGAS SAYS HE WILL ROLL NEXT WEEK OR NEVER

Chip Dugas, challenger of Frankie Barber, seemed surprised that he should be asked to meet Barber at the Aetna alleys next Wednesday, to arrange for a match. He said Thursday night, that Barber had said he would bowl Dugas "any time, any place and for any amount," and that now when Dugas names the place, time and amount, Barber wants a meeting to arrange matters. Dugas said he thought there was no need of arranging anything as he was doing just as Barber asked him to in his letter. "I'll roll next week or not at all," said Dugas, in closing.

International Schedule Meeting

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Schedule makers of the International league will meet here Saturday to draft the playing program for the 1926 season. The committee, consisting of President John Conway Toole, Jack Dunn of Baltimore, Michael Kelly of Syracuse and Lawrence Solomon of Toronto, will draw up two schedules which will be submitted to the league at a special meeting in Toronto, February 15.

Stonington High Has Good Year In Sports

Although not winning titles in any of the eastern Connecticut interscholastic sports except in the cross country events, Stonington High had what might be considered a good year in sports. The football team made a good showing, winning three games on a nine-game schedule, losing three and tying three. The Stonington High team had the distinctive honor of tying Windham High, the state champions: the score being 0 to 0. Stonington also held the Academy to a scoreless tie and then beat Westerly leaders in the E. C. Interscholastic league in the first game and then held them to a 6 to 6 tie in the second encounter.

Stonington had a team of strong players who were well coached by Bill O'Brien, former Connecticut Aggie player. He produced a team that at times showed remarkable driving power and defensive work. This was especially true in the three tie games when Stonington's defense was almost solid and the gains were slight.

The season's record follows:

Stonington		Opponents
0	Windham	0
7	Bulkeley	2
0	Chapman	0
0	N. F. A.	0
7	Chapman	20
12	East Greenwich	6
16	Westerly	17
6	Westerly	6
60		60

Baseball

The baseball season saw Stonington winning a scant majority of games getting a little better than an even break in a nine game schedule. Out of nine games played Stonington won 5 and lost 4, but scored 20 more runs than their opponents, the last two agmes played giving them 53 runs. In the league competition Stonington won only two games and these from Chapman Tech and Westerly. Coach Gallagher worked hard with his charges but his pitching staff was weak the burden falling on Emmett, who was unable to stand up under the strain. The prospects for the 1926 season are much brighter as a number of promising candidates entered with the freshman class last fall.

Those who upheld the honor of Stonington on the diamond were: Coach, J. Gallagher; manager, C. Schmidt; varsity players, R. Emmett p.; M. Foote, c.; R. Cragan, 1b.; A. Stowell, 2b.; R. E. McCaffrey, ss.; C. Burnham, 3b; H. Cragan, lf.; J. Levanti, cf.; W. Main, rf.

The season's record follows:

Stonington		Opponents
4	Norwich	11
4	Chapman Tech	8
8	Westerly	5
4	Norwich	5
4	Chapman Tech	8
10	South Killingly	4
25	Killingly	3
29	Bacon Academy	3
90		70

Basketball

The basketball season at Stonington High was more or less of a disappointment as out of a schedule of 10 games the Stonington team won but three. However there was a remarkable number of close scores the widest margin by which a team won was 16 points, all other games being won by less than four baskets. There were four games that were decided by a single point. The varsity team was: R. E. McCaffrey, lf.; A. Stowell, rf; Le-Coffey, c.; M. Foote, rg.; A. P. Kenyon, lf. W. T. Tweedell, coach; Anderson, manager.

The season's record is as follows:

Stonington		Opponents
25	Windham	32
30	Killingly	21
16	Westerly	28
26	Chapman Tech	36
31	Bacon Academy	23
24	Windham	34
24	Westerly	25
26	Chapman Tech	30
32	South Kingston	34

TRACK

In the two interscholastic meets Stonington High track team placed second in each meet, the R. I. State Interscholastic meet and the Eastern Connecticut League meet at New London. The members of the track team were: Coach, N. Stickney, manager, W. Hill; captain, A. P. Kenyon, W. Maggs, L. Coffey, T. Anderson, R. E. McCaffery, K. Burdick, H. Dobson, W. Main, W. Brier, E. Adams, J. Levanti, G. Cowan and H. Smith.

Windham Team Claims State Football Title

Windham High school had the outstanding football team in the state during the 1925 season and their claim for state honors is undisputed. Windham not only has a marvelous seasonal record but can boast of playing through three seasons with but one defeat. This defeat came in a post-season game in 1924, with Drury High at North Adams, Mass., in which the North Adams team won 6 to 0, on a field ankle deep in mud.

Few high schools can boast of such a record. Windham's schedules were by no means easy ones, especially the 1925 slate on which appeared Hartford High, Wilby High, Crosby High, and many other of the larger high schools in the state.

TWO COLLEGES TIED IN WINTER SPORTS FOR THE HARDING TROPHY

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Dec. 31—(AP)—The University of New Hampshire and the University of Wisconsin were tied with 13 points each tonight at the end of the first day's competition for the President Harding trophy in the week of college winter sports at the Lake Placid club.

McGill university and Williams college were tied for second place with six points each. Other point winners were: Syracuse university, 5; Dartmouth, 3; Deerfield, 3; University of Maine, 3; University of Ottawa, 2, and University of Montreal, 2.

Sixty-three representatives from fourten colleges took part in the five events on today's schedule. Snow fell heavily through the day, making perfect skiing and snowshoeing weather.

The ski efficiency test and the ski jump will be run off tomorrow. Points won in the ski jump, a new event in the competition will be included in the total for the Harding cup. Among the entries for the jump are Stewart Weston, University of New Hampshire, last year's winner; Gunnar Michelson, University of New Hampshire; Andrews Edison, Harvard Graduate school; Gordon Brown, Williams; F. T. Proctor, Dartmouth, and Knut Dahl and Stone, Norwegian skiiers of the University of Wisconsin.

Today's summaries:

Seven-mile cross-country ski race: Knut Dahl, Wisconsin, first; Hans Troy, Wisconsin, second; T. B. Farrell, Dartmouth, third; Fred Taylor, McGill, fourth. Time 1:01:44.

Speedskating, one half mile: Leon Emmert, Wisconsin, first; Clarence Petty, Syracuse, second; Ronald Tetley, New Hampshire, third. Time 1:26 4-5.

100-yard snowshoe dash: Stewart L. Crofts, Williams, first; A. D. Van Alstine, New Hampshire, second; Morse Gendron, Montreal, third time 12 3-5 seconds.

Three-mile snowshoe race: Fred W. Peaslee, New Hampshire, first; Robert E. Turner, University of Maine, second; Ralph B. Littlefield, New Hampshire, third. Time 25:32.

Aggie Football Squad Has Mediocre Season

STORRS, Conn., Dec. 31—With a record of three victories, five defeats and one scoreless tie, the football season of the Connecticut Aggies this year has been disappointing to followers of the Storrs eleven.

Starting the season with eleven lettermen from last year's squad, which went undefeated, prospects looked bright at the state college for another successful year. A serious lack of experienced reserve material, coupled with the fact that the Aggies were tackling the toughest schedule ever attempted by a Storrs eleven, proved too much of a handicap, however, and early season predictions were not fulfilled.

The football squads at Connecticut Agricultural college have never been large in numbers, and this year the Aggies squad was even smaller than usual. At no time did Coach Dole have more than 25 men on his squad, and except for his starting lineup, most of the men had experienced but little intercollegiate competition.

After opening with a 7-3 victory over Wesleyan at Middletown, the Aggies played New York University, Maine, Massachusetts Aggies and Tufts on four successive Saturdays. The team was not in the best of shape when N. Y. U. was faced in New York, for the Wesleyan contest had left several of the squad with injuries. The New Yorkers decisively defeated Connecticut 28-9, and in this contest injuries were suffered that seriously affected the performance of several of the men for the rest of the season. Games were dropped to Maine and Massachusetts Aggies, and not until Tufts was played at Medford, Mass., were the Aggies able to break into the victory column again. The only breathing spell in the entire schedule was furnished by the Manhattan game the following Saturday, Connecticut winning 19-0.

The Aggies, though losing to New Hampshire 17-3, played their best game of the year in this contest, and until the final quarter were leading 3-0. A scoreless tie with Rhode Island followed a week later, and the Aggies finished their season against Rensselaer, losing 12-7 the final game of the season.

Coach Dole will be hard hit by graduation this year, losing 14 of his squad of 25 in June. Just how much material will be forthcoming from this season's freshman squad is impossible to say at this time, but as the situation shapes up at the present time, Dole will be faced with a real task in moulding a winning team in 1926.

Baseball in Norwich A Success in 1925

Baseball in 1925 came into its own once more in Eastern Connecticut. Never in recent years has so much interest been shown in the national pastime as during the last summer, everyone talked baseball and thought baseball. There are apparently many contributing causes for the renewed interest in the sport.

One of the chief reasons was the keen struggle for first place honors in the National, American and Eastern leagues. Baseball was a topic of conversation wherever red-blooded Americans met, a great interest in the game was created. Then locally the Norwich Academy produced a real baseball team. Bulkeley won the state baseball title. Interest ran high in the school games. This was reflected in the semi-pro game in the various towns in Eastern Conenticut.

The Taftville A. A. put on a team of youngsters that cleaned up in their class and their season was a huge success, one of the few in many seasons.

Riverview with Tony West on the mound played the principal semi-pro teams of the state and when the series with the Submarine Base was scheduled interest was at a high pitch. The Riverview team came through with the championship. Riverview played 29 games during the season winning 17, losing 11 and one resulted in a tie score.

The J. E. Martin team played throughout the season with almost a purely local lineup and its record was very good. The financial returns were also better than a year ago.

The Norwich Twilight league, sponsored by the Duwell A. C., was a decided success both from a financial standpoint and from the viewpoint of the spectator. The league started in June and continued through the summer up to the middle of September, the pennant being won by the Centrals, a team practically made up of players from the Taftville A. A. Interest held up all during the league and many good games were played. The revenue from the league is to be put back into the playing field and it expected that this year a first class baseball diamond will be in use on the East Side.

Sunday baseball was played in several of the smaller towns in eastern Connecticut, but the success of these undertakings was not very satisfying. Moosup put on a baseball team early in the season and then abandoned it until late season when Lew Salisbury took over the club. Some fast baseball resulted but it was not a financial success. Jewett City played Sunday ball late in the season and here the financial returns were better.

Taken as a whole the baseball season in eastern Connecticut was what might betermed a success and if the interest is as keen in 1926 another good season may be anticipated.

Fifteen Ends To Lead College Teams in 1926

The major football teams throughout the country, in selecting captains for the 1926 campaign, divided their selection among star players at the end positions and halfback posts. Eighteen institutions will be led by halfbacks and fifteen ends will pilot elevens into battle. Many of the collegiate grid leaders have not been named for next year.

In the east, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Syracuse, Brown, Columbia, Rutgers, Colby, Wesleyan, Mannattan, Providence and St. Stephen's will be captained by ends, while the middle west Illinois, Iowa State and Missouri have chosen wingmen, and Vanderbilt, in the south, also selected an end for captain.

Eastern halfbacks were honored at Lafayette, Army, Georgetown, Union, Rochester University, St. Joseph's, Fordham, Temple and Bowdoin, while in the middle west, Northwestern, Chicago, Notre Dame, with a halfback and a quarterback, and Creighton selected halfbacks, and Alabama, Auburn, Kentucky and Transylvania were the Dixie elevens to choose half backs.

Quarterback came in, as usual, with a good quota of captains, nine institutions honoring signal-caller for the captaincy. Yale, Colgate, Villanova and Boston college will be led by quarterbacks in the east. In the middle west, Michigan, Wisconsin, Drake and Notre Dame, with an alternating half and quarterback, have named signal-callers to lead their teams. In the south, Mississippi College elected a quarterback as captain for next year.

Nine guards, five in the east and four in the south, received the vote for captaincy. Cornell, Princeton, City college of New York, Hamilton and Middlebury are the eastern grid machines to elect the center flanks as leaders, and the University of Virginia, North Carolina, West Virginia Wesleyan, Southern institutions, chose guards.

Of the sixty-nine captains announced for next year, only one was drawn from tackle ranks, the Naval Academy electing Frank Wickhorst, stellar forward.

Fullbacks and centers shared honors with eight each. Williams, Gettysburg, Arkansas, Centenary, Hobart, Georgia Tech, Swarthmore, Connecticut Aggies and the University of Southern California will be led by the pivot man while fullbacks at Dartmouth, Washington and Jefferson, Amherst, New York University, St. John's, Ohio State, Missouri and Haverford will lead their teams in action when the grid season of 1926 rolls around.

The names, teams and postions of the captains follow:

(Ends)

George Thayer, Pennsylvania; Harold Broda, Brown; Victor Hanson, Syracuse; Kenneth Weston, Penn State; Lester Hanf, Rutgers; Kenneth Steele, Wesleyan; John Harding, St. Stephens; John Murphy, Providence; Thomas O'Donnell, Colby, and Frank L. CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

The cross country team fared the best, winning first place in the league meet and taking first place from Bulkley in a dual meet. The members of this winning team were W. Maggs, captain H. Dobson, K. Burdick, A. P. Kenyon, H. Smith, N. Stickney, catch, W. Hill, manager.

KING TUT'S COFFIN IS REMOVED FROM TOMB

LONDON, Dec. 31—(AP)—After having lain undisturbed for 3,500 years, the golden shell of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's coffin, the coffin lid and the golden royal mask were removed from his tomb today for shipment to Cairo, says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Luxor, Egypt.

The coffin was born on the shoulders of eight workmen through clouds of dust down the rocky way from the valley of the king and arriving at the river Nile it was placed aboard a felucca and taken to Luxor. There it was placed in a special aboard sal was placed in a special saloon of the ordinary train for Cairo with an armed guard about it.

The mummy remains in the tomb, which will be opened to the public on Saturday. Howard Carter, chief of the execavators at the tomb, estimates the intrinsic value of the gold contents of the tomb at 40,000 pounds (about $200,000).

NEW LONDON, NEEDING MORE WORK, STILL MAKES MERRY AS YEAR ENDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 31.—The old year passes on with the people of this city enjoying health and prosperity. If there were a greater abundance of work there would be willing hands to perform the labor.

This evening there are many house parties and there is much merry-making throughout the city, something that would be impossible but for the prosperity that has attended the labors of the toilers and their liberal expenditure of money in the various channels of trade. The theatres were well patronized and just before midnight a new year frolic was inaugurated at the Capitol. At the Mohican hotel society assembled for dancing and at other hotels there were many gatherings.

FIRST ICE-CUTTING MISHAP OF THE SEASON THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Dec. 31.—Leslie Hewitt, 32 Phillips street, was painfully injured this morning when his left ankle was lacerated while Hewitt was engaged in harvesting ice at the pond of the New London Ice company, Waterford. The patient is now at Lawrence hospital where he will be under treatment indefinitely. Hewitt and other laborers were engaged in the work of marking the ice which is to be harvested within the next two or three days and was struck by a pick in the hands of another worker. The wound inflicted bled profusely and the man was rushed to the hospital where the wound was dressed.

The condition of Miss Mary McCarthy, nurse at Lawrence hospital, who has been critically ill at the institution with pneumonia, is now reported as being so greatly improved that the patient is on the road to recovery.

Abraham Bronstein, formerly of New London, has returned to his home in New York, having spent several days with friends in this city.

Police Sergeant Samuel Hick was unable to perform duty today for shortly before he was to take charge of the patrolmen at 3 o'clock, he caused Captain Charles A. Pinney to be notified that the sergeant was ill at his home, Blydenburg avenue.

Mabel Price had a load she couldn't carry by the police station, when she made that hospitable asylum, about midnight, last night. She hailed Policeman Frank Philopena and to him she told a story to the effect that she needed protection. She received what she needed by being assigned to a cell where she had the benefit of an abundance of heat. This morning she was in the police court to tell her story to the judge. She said she resided on John street and that she had paid rent there during eight years. She declared that she was married and was living with her husband. "Yes," asked Judge Prince, "but how about that 'protection story?' How did it happen that you were drunk in the street last night?" That was a puzzler for Mabel, but she finally expressed the opinion that she had drank too much. "I guess you are right," responded the judge. "I am wondering whether you are accustomed to load up," he continued, "and whether it is best to commit you? You go home and let booze alone," was his admonition. Then he suspended judgment.

A very little increase in traffic sequent upon the advent of the new year occasioned congestion on Bank street this afternoon and for some fifteen minutes neither automobiles nor trolley cars could make their way along that street. Finally Policeman John Courtney straightened out things and the vehicles leaked away.

Judge Christopher L. Avery is spending the end of the old year at his home in Groton.

Bolton A. Copp, president of the Whaling bank, has recovered from injuries sustained a fortnight ago when he was run down by an automobile on the Thames river highway bridge.

Many automobiles appeared on the streets today with the new markers of 1926 attached to them. The pleasure car numbers are black letters on yellow ground.

Frank Duffy, brother of Mrs. Willis A. Jones, of 8 Ocean avenue, this city, died last night at his home in Waterbury following an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Radway of Broad street extension complained to the police last night that while her automobile was parked on Washington street, earlier in the evening, a thief stole a motor meter. Automobile accessory thieves have made a practice for a long time of stealing from machines while their owners are attending performances at the Lyceum theatre.

Mrs. John Connors and infant son, of 256 Huntington street, and Ralph Bernstein, 33 Montauk avenue, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Charles E. Reed, of Niantic, where he is employed at Dickinson's garage was taken into custody here last night charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was in the police court this morning, but the case was not tried, being continued to Saturday forenoon and the accused furnished a bond for his appearance at the later date. Reed was operating his machine in a southerly direction on Huntington street and as the car approached Stony Hill another car, owned by the New London Fruit & Produce company, and driven by Alfred Rogers, an employe and in which another employe, Irving Lipton, Huntington street, was a passenger, Reed lost control of the steering wheel just as the two cars were about to pass, with the result that his machine crashed against the produce company's car causing damage to both cars. The police were notified and Patrolmen Edward Riordan Frank Philopena and Henry Sylvia, who were dispatched to the location of the crash, quickly decided that Reed was intoxicated and placed him under arrest.

The celebration of the advent of the new year was made doubly possible at many places because of the abundance of liquor provided by the celebrators and to observe the display of "glassware" no one would believe that prohibition prevailed. The largest gatherings were at the Hotel Mohican and Elks' club. At the hotel about 150 couples assembled for dancing and feasting.

At the Elks' club a crowd of about 300 gathered for the dancing and feast, and the merry-making was not concluded until the late hours of the night.

Members of P. L. Allen Hook and Ladder company celebrated the event by a watch meeting at the company's clubhouse at Riverside park, the affair being enjoyed by about 100. A bountiful repast was served and a musical program provided.

At the quarters of the Pequot Independent Mess company, Lower Boulevard, the company's annual supper took place, the affair being highly enjoyable; the company had as its guests members of the city council and city officials.

With the entrance of the new year there was considerable noise but only for a brief time. Whistles on river craft and locomotives in the railroad yards sounded for five minutes, while some of the celebrators at the Mohican and Elks' club appeared in the open and added to the prevailing merriment.

A miscellaneous shower for Miss Harriet Russell was given by Queen Esther circle of the Methodist church in the church parlors recently in anticipation of her marriage with Elmer E. Richmond, of Westerly. Miss Russell has been treasurer of the circle for eight years. Miss Kathryn Clark, president of the circle, arranged the affair. Refreshments were served.

An automobile owned and driven by Arthur B. Dorr, 29 Denison avenue, struck and slightly injured Mildred MacGarrah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank MacGarrah, 28 Ann street, late this afternoon. The child was at the corner of Willetts avenue and Shaw street and in attempting to run to the opposite side of the street, the girl ran directly in front of Dorr's car. Before the operators could bring the machine to a stop the girl was struck by the fender and knocked down. Dorr had the child taken to her home, where it was found that she had sustained injuries no more serious than bruises.

Automobilists were angry this evening and they had just cause to be for some one, probably starting to celebrate the new year early caused several bottles to be broken in the highway on Main street, at the corner of Masonic street, the glass being fragments of bottles that were were hurled to the pavements. The glass was of such size that passing automobiles suffered torn tires. It was then that the existence of the glass in the street was reported to the police and an officer was assigned to sweep the glass from the highway to the gutter.

Miss Dorothea Gamber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gamber, Fort street, Groton, a student at Philadelphia Art school, is spending the holiday with her parents.

Mrs. Mildred Needham has returned to her home, Harris building after having spent several days as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles Rogers, Bridgeport.

Mrs. W. S. Douglas has returned to her home on Squire street, after a brief visit with her sister, a resident of Providence.

Mrs. Ellen J. Brown, 76, widow of Harrison Brown, died early this morning at a private hospital on Vauxhall street, where she had been under treatment five weeks, although prior to having been admitted to the hospital, Mrs. Brown had been a patient at Lawrence hospital a long time. Mrs. Brown is survived by a daughter, Mrs. A. L. Wright of Ocean Beach, and by two sisters, Mrs. Oakten K. Hoyt and Mrs. C. C. Coleman, both of Ilion, N. Y.

Commander William F. Newton, commanding officer of U. S. S. Camden, stationed at the submarine base, and Miss Harriet Saulnier, daughter of the late Kelton Saulnier, of Philadelphia, were married in New York this week. The ceremony took place at Grace church and was performed by Rev. W. Russell Boine. Commander and Mrs. Newton will spend the remainder of the winter in Panama.

Fred L. Newton, principal of Nathan Hale grammar school and Mrs. Newton have returned to their home on Morgan street, after having visited with relatives in Boston several days.

Mr. and Mrs. William Keane and daughter, Cornelia have returned to their home in New York, after having spent several days with relatives in this city.

Miss Eleanor Cowhey, employed in New York, has concluded a visit with her mother, Mrs. Ellen Cowhey, of South Ledyard street.

Mrs. Ernest Richards, has returned to her home in Groton after having been under treatment at the hospital several days.

Edwin Bump, of Newark, N. J., has concluded a visit with his mother, Mrs Marie Bump.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

In The Lucky Horseshoe, which opened yesterday at the Breed theater, Tom Mix, popular star of William Fox films, supplies one of the reasons for his unprecedented favor among devotees of screenland. The production is unquestionably one of the best ever made by the western star, both in elaborate production values and good picture entertainment.

The film opens with such a lively tempo and sustains the intensity of plot so well, that after you are brought to the edge of your seat at the beginning, you are so absorbed in what is taking place on the screen that attention to personal comfort is entirely forgotten, and the edge of the seat is just as comfortable as an easy chair.

The Spanish sequence, wherein Tom Mix imagines himself the reincarnation of Don Juan, gives The Lucky Horseshoe a decidedly different twang and marks a forward step in the production of western films. The star's reckless daring and surprising agility are brought to a full peak by the unusual feats he performs while in the character of the colorful and romantic legendary hero of old Spain.

Billie Dove, winsome and sweet, plays the leading role opposite Tom Mix and her quiet and graceful bearing fits perfectly with the dashing, spirited work of the western star.

J. Farrell MacDonald and J. Gunnis Davis, both actors of wide renown, the former being an outstanding star of The Iron Horse, vie with each other for comedy honors with the winning flag going to J. Farrell, whose comical make-up and flexible eyebrows bring many chuckles. Malcolm Waite, sleek and suave, schemes and connives for the downfall of Tom with great success until the final reels. The actor gives a good performance of his thankless role.

Ann Pennington, former star of the Ziegfeld Follies and other celebrated New York productions, dances her way into the hearts of the audience in the role of a Sanish senorita.

J. G. Blystone, maker of Teeth, Oh, You Tony, Dick Turpin, and other Tom Mix photoplays, directed The Lucky Horseshoe.

Palace Theatre

A vaudeville bill that is a sensation from the opening act until the final curtain. The Four Casting Aces, with the flying queen opens the show and leaves the audience gasping for breath. The opening trick is where most other acts of this kind leave off. Thrill after thrill follows and if there is any trick that is possible to do on the fly here's one team that does it and makes it look easy. Frank Jerome is next on the programme and it doesn't seem as though any bill could keep up the fast pace that the first two acts set. Jerome showed the audience something new in acrobatic dancing. Several original tricks that were astounding. His impersonations are exceedingly well done and he has a fine line of new stories. The Mandell Sisters follow and here is as clever a pair of entertainers as Norwich has seen in some time. Good voices, very fine dancing and beautiful gowns. It's vaudeville in every sense of the word. Then the fun begins when Kramer and Griffin step out of the wings. Here's a pair with a fast line of nonsense that know how to sell it and sell it they do. It seemed as though the audience must laugh themselves out but at the end of fifteen minutes, the uproar was just as great and when they left the stage the audience didn't seem to have enough if one can judge by the applause. Up to here the show was one hundred per cent., and then the management showed mighty good business judgment, by closing the show with one of the best dressed and talented revues that we feel safe in saying, is the best that has ever been in this city. The wardrobe is nothing short of gorgeous. The dancing supreme and with it all excellent voices. If this isn't the best bill of vaudeville we have seen at this theatre, there must have been some wonderful bills that we missed. William S. Hart in Tumbleweeds, is the best Hart picture we have ever seen. The stampede near the end of the picture, one of the most realistically thrilling scenes we have ever seen in the movies and it's safe to say that if it hit the rest of the audience like it did us, they will be more than just a juvenile audience at the Palace today and tomorrow. If this bill is a forerunner of the managements policy for 1926, we'll say that they have made a very auspicious start and they are bound to be rewarded through the box office.

Broadway Theatre

A picture that is certain to appeal to both sexes for its dramatic presentation of a unique situation of domestic life comes in the form of "Lying Wives," to the Broadway Theatre, for four days, starting Sunday. This screen production is from an original script by Ivan Abramson and also personally directed by Mr. Abramson.

"Lying Wives" is illuminated by a brilliant array of cinema stars that will bring delight to the hearts of the movie fans. Among the popular favorites featured in the cast are Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Edna Murphy, Niles Welch, and J. Barney Sherry.

The theme of "Lying Wives" deals with the weaknesses of the fairer sex and there are many big emotional moments that will set the average movie goer agog. The story deals with the subtle lies and cunning deceit of a married woman who leaves no stone unturned in her unsuccessful fight for the man she loves.

The second feature is a fast action story of the great outdoors featuring Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "On the Go." An augmented orchestra, comedy and kinograms completes the bill.

Remember the New Year's show today. Five great acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville and James Oliver Curwood's "The Gold Hunters." Today's program will be continuous from 1:30 to 10:30.

JEWISH WOMEN'S COUNCIL TO CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

Hail 1926 as the greatest year in council history, says a letter received by the Council of Jewish Women of Bozrahville from the National Council of Jewish Women. The letter reads as follows:

The year of 1926 is hailed as the greatest in the history of the National Council of Jewish Women, in a statement made by its president, Miss Rose Brenner of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Although the National Council of Jewish Women has many significant achievements to its credit during the past 32 years," declared Miss Brenner, "I greet the year 1926 with the prediction that it will mark the greatest expansion that has been attained by our organization in any single year. Our women have caught the enthusiasm of their national officers and have assumed a larger number of responsibilities than in any previous season of their Section's work. They are determined to go to the Eleventh Triennial Convention at Washington, D. C., in November, 1926, with every plan successfully completed."

In a supplementary statement, Mrs. Estelle M. Sternberger of New York city, executive secretary of the National Council of Jewish Women, announced that the sections had voted an expansion fund of $35,000 to widen the scope of the council's national and international work.

"This special fund," stated Mrs. Sternberger, "which will be contributed by our sections during the month of January, 1926, will make it possible for us to carry out the program adopted by our Board of Managers at its annual meeting in November, which provided for a budget of $165,265.68.

"We are enlarging not only our field of service, but also the influence of the council's message. At this very moment, we are engaged in an extension campaign, which reaches into every state of the union. Every city that has not yet had an opportunity to establish a council section, is being visited by our national and state officers, in order to ascertain the possibility of introducing our program. The goal of this extension effort is 'One more section in every state of the union.' Simultaneously, an extension drive is being conducted in Canada. It is estimated that this extension appeal will increase the number of Council Sections to 275."

It was furthermore announced that a special membership campaign will be directed by Mrs. Max D. Margolis of Philadelphia, a director of the national council. Each section will appoint a special committee on membership campaign to participate in this nation wide effort.

Among other plans for the year 1926 are an exhibit at the Sesquicentennial exposition at Philadelphia; regional conferences to foster interest in education for citizenship, under the direction of the council's department of immigrant aid; the organization of a large number of women's leagues in the rural communities by the council's department of farm and rural work; an extension campaign to introduce the council's quarterly, "The Jewish Woman," into the home of every council member.

HOUSE OF SORROW TO BECOME CATHOLIC SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MILLERSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 31 (AP)—Joy and grief have followed each other through the luxurious corridors of Laurel Hall, once the palatial country seat of Stoughton A. Fletcher, Indianapolis capitalist, which soon is to become a school for girls.

The pretentious home and 220 acres of the estate have been purchased by the Sisters of Providence, a Catholic order, who will convert it into an academy.

Fletcher, once one of the wealthiest men in Indiana, built the home and laid out the estate in 1916 at a cost of more than $2,000,000. For several years it was the scene of many social functions.

In 1921 Mrs. Fletcher, because of ill health, took her life in Laurel Hall. Her mother died the same night, either from drinking accidentally of the same draught which killed her daughter, or purposely from grief when she found her daughter's body.

Three years later, Fletcher became a bankrupt, through poor investments and speculation, and Laurel Hall passed to his creditors.

At one time, Fletcher had a pretentious stable of thoroughbred horses, and among the animals was "Peter the Great" famous trotter for which the banker paid $50,000.

Suspended sentence of six months in jail were given by Judge Dickenson in criminal superior court Bridgeport in the cases of James Riccio, 21, and Angelo Pavalo, 35, Bridgeport, who were charged with thefts of brake linings from the plant of the Bayberted company.

Johnny Chuck Explains

What puzzles you another may explain and make as plain as day. —Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit wasn't kept a prisoner in Johnny Chuck's house so very long, after all. You see, Bowser the Hound happened to wander over that way, and Reddy Fox didn't wait. As soon as Peter heard Bowser's great voice as he started off on Reddy's trail he knew that it was safe to go out, and out he went in a hurry.

Once safely back in the dear Old Briar Patch his curiosity became greater than ever. How did it happen that there was a closed door just a little way from the entrance to Johnny Chuck's house? Who had put it there, and what for? What had happened to Johnny and Polly Chuck asleep way down below? Would he ever see them again, or had they been smothered as they slept?

Peter asked all his friends, but none of them knew anything about that closed door in Johnny Chuck's house. Some of them didn't even believe that there was such a closed door. And so all Peter could do was sit patiently to wait for the coming of spring, when Jack Frost would leave and he, Peter, could dig through that door of earth and find out what was behind it. That is what he had made up his mind to do.

But he didn't have to. One day in March he happened over that way and there sat Johnny Chuck on his doorstep. Never had Peter been more glad to see him.

"Oh, Johnny," he cried, "I was afraid I never would see you alive again!"

"Oh, Johnny!" he cried. "I was afraid I never would see you alive again!"

Johnny looked surprised. "Why?" he demanded.

"Because some one, I don't know who, filled up your hall so that no air could get down to you and Polly," explained Peter.

"How do you know?" demanded Johnny suspiciously.

Peter hung his head for a moment. Then he confessed. "I was in there," said he, and told how he had gone in to get away from Reddy Fox, and how he had bumped his nose against that closed door, and then found that he was barely out of reach of Reddy's black paws. He was quite honest in telling how great had been his curiosity ever since.

Johnny Chuck chuckled. He chuckled and chuckled. "I closed that door myself," said he.

You should have seen the look of surprise on Peter's face. "When and what for?" he cried.

"After Polly and I had gone in for the winter," replied Johnny. "Did you suppose we would go to sleep for the winter with the door wide open?"

"I never supposed anything about it," confessed Peter. "I—I still don't understand it."

"There isn't much to understand," replied Johnny. "I simply closed that door by packing in earth from the inside. I knew that it would freeze solid when Jack Frost came. Polly and I don't need much air when we are asleep for the winter, and there was plenty down there for our needs. With that door shut we knew that we were not likely to have any unpleasant visitors. This morning when I decided to come out all I had to do was to dig that earth out and so open the door. I knew that Reddy Fox couldn't get in on account of those rocks at the entrance, but with the door open there would have been nothing to prevent Shadow the Weasel from coming in and killing us as we slept. So I simply closed the door. That is all there was to it."

"Oh," said Peter, "that is all."

Johnny Chuck nodded.

LEGION OF HONOR PALACE NEW HOME OF ART LOVERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31 (AP)—California's Palace of the Legion of Honor, completed a year ago and dedicated to men of the state who gave their lives in the World war, has become a mecca for art lovers of this region and a new point on the itinerary of all tourists.

Its situation is superb. From one of the highest points in the city it looks down on the Golden Gate. It commands a panorama that stretches far out to sea, reveals the wide expanse of San Francisco Bay, the towering brown hills of Marin county, topped by Mt. Tamalpais, and, in the other direction, sections of the city scattered like countless rows of toy houses. The scene might have inspired some of the old masters whose paintings are hung in the Palace.

The architectural style is French Renaissance of the period of Louis XVI. The Triumphal Arch, surrounded by colonnades, provides the entrance, and behind it extends the spacious Court of Honor, attended by Ionic columns. White stone and steel were used in the construction.

At its opening the Palace housed a collection of French antiques, paintings and sculpturings lent by the French government and taken from the Louvre. Among the permanent possessions, however, are many classic examples, including several original Rodins. Lately the exhibits have featured a notable collection lent by T. B. Walker of Minneapolis. This collection numbers originals by Rembrandt, Turner, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Corot and other masters.

Other transient exhibits of pictures and bronze come and go, attracting the interest of the local art colony. California artists have had a chance to display their work on several occasions.

There is a restful, esthetic atmosphere about the interior of the Palace. The galleries are connected by courts with fountains, the walls of the courts bearing such objects as miniature copies of the doors of famous cathedrals, sacred statues and other examples of medieval art.

In a central room an organ has been installed, and at the daily concerts the mellow notes penetrate to every part of the buildings. Benches are scattered about, that one may sit before a favorite picture, listen to the music and meditate.

In the Triumphal Arch there are chimes and a fanfare of trumpets. Played at certain times, they are heard far over the city and several miles out at sea.

The Palace was presented to the city by the late Adolph B. Spreckels and his wife, Alma de Bretteville Spreckles, with the motto, "Honor the dead while serving the living." The museum was built above the Lincoln Park on ground provided by the municipality.

MARKET WAS BUOYANT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(By The A. P.)—A wild outburst of bullish enthusiasm in the stock market, which carried over two scores issued up 1 to nearly 7 points above yesterday's final quotations brought to a dramatic close the biggest and most spectacular year in Wall street's history. Total sales again crossed the two million mark, with the average of 20 leading railroad issues elevated to a new record high level and the average of 20 leading industrial shares advanced to within half a point of the record top touched a few days ago.

Speculators for the advance, taking advantage of the widespread prediction of business prosperity in 1926 bid up their favorites in spectacular fashion, being aided by a large volume of investment buying for the high rates and 'cash sales" for the purpose of establishing income tax losses, which were much smaller than usual, were rewarded by th broad upward sweep of prices.

Commodity markets, which closed today for a triple holiday, were dull with price fluctuations generally reflecting the evening up of speculative accounts. Wheat futures closed -8 to 1 1-2 lower after an early period of strength, cotton contracts showed net advances of 9 to 25 points, and coffee futures ranged 10 to 23 points. Sugar prices held firm.

Oils, which have attracted a large speculative following because of the nearly merger reports in circulation, gave one of the most impressive demonstrations of group strength. General Petroleum, which has been mentioned as likely to combine with the Marland or Union Oil Company of California, was bid up over 3 points to 9 1-8, the highest quotation of the year. Barnsdall A and B and Simms which are expected to join with Mexico Fuel'ops in another combination, also broke through their previous maximum prices of the year, as did Skelly Oil.

Buoyancy again developed in some of the high priced industrial issues. American Can soared nearly 7 points to a record top at 297 3-8 and then lost all but 1 3-4 points of its gain on profit-taking. Chrysler (new stock), Sears Roebuck, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, South Porto Rican Sugar, United Drug, and Ward Baking A closed 3 to 6 1-2 points higher. American Smelting moved up nearly 5 points to 144 1-2, the highest since 1907.

Rails moved upward under the leadership of Delaware and Hudson, which bounced over six points to 160 1-2, the highest since 1923. Other outstanding strong spots in that group included "Katy" preferred, "Nickel Plate", Norfolk and Western preferred and St. Louis Western.

Call money held steady at six per cent., the prevailing rate of the last week. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits with tradings of the usual pre-holiday character. Demand sterling eased slightly to $4.84 3-4 and French francs were slightly firmer around 3.74 cents. Other changes were largely nominal.

CURB MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(By The A. P.)—The New York curb market today brought to a close the most prosperous year in its history by witnessing a bullish demonstration in stocks, with the oils as the feature. While the gains in the petroleum issues were not large, trading was on a broad scale as the result of widespread merger reports affecting several of the popular companies. Vacuum, Humble, Carib Syndicate and Reiter-Foster closed 1 to 2 points higher, with the Lago issues active and strong in anticipation of a formal announcement of the acquisition of those companies by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport.

Glen Alden Coal jumped 6 1-2 points to another new record high at 168 in anticipation of an early agreement for the resumption of anthracite mining. Electrical Refrigeration issues continued to react on profit taking, although the volume of trading was relatively small. Revival of activity and strength in Trans-Lux followed reports that new banking interests had become indentified with the company. Raddin took on a new lease of life with Grimes and Dubilier each closing about a point higher. Stutz Motors jumped nearly 3 points to 37 1-4, and Continental Baking B moved up 3 3-4 to 30.

Spare advances took place in a number of public utilities, Lehigh Power securities standing out with a net gain of over 8 points at 191. Commonwealth Power, National Power and Light, American Gas and Electric and American Power and Light moved up 1 to 3 points.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Copper quiet. Electrolytic, spot and futures 14 1-8 asked. Tin firm. Spot and near-by 63.75; futures 63.00. Iron steady; prices unchanged. Lead steady. Spot 9.25. Zinc steady. East St. Louis, spot 8?0@8.75; futures 8.50@8?5. Antimony spot 25.00.

BOND MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The bond market today rode out the old year on the crest of a buying wave which carried prices up to around the highest levels of 1925. Confidence in the outlook for satisfactory money conditions throughout the early part of 1926 contributed to the broadening demand for railroad and industrial issues, many of which were accumulated in anticipation of attracting January reinvestment orders.

Seldom have year-end readjustments caused less unsettlement in bond trading. Liquidation of a few speculative accounts developed early in the week, but the selling was quickly absorbed and was more than offset by today's flood of buying orders. Selling to establish "tax losses" was reduced to a minimum, even in the case of the so-called "receivership" issues.

Railroad liens today assumed the leadership of the upward movement, in which they have played so conspicuous a part throughout 1925. With the carriers closing the best year since the war, from the standpoint of earnings and traffic as well as freedom from restrictive legislation, buying of investment rail bonds was revived on a large scale.

In the face of an operating deficit for November reported by the Delaware and Hudson, the company's convertible 6 per cent. bonds spurted up more than a point to a new high record for the year, with buying apparently promoted by favorable prospects for termination of the anthracite strike. St. Paul issues were strengthened by the announcement that the road's re-organization plan had received the assent of 76 per cent. of the bonds affected. Other strong points in the railroad group included Seaboard, Northern Pacific, Western Maryland, Des Moines and Fort Dodge and Florida East Coast obligations.

The demand for industrial bonds centered largely on oil, sugar, and copper company issues. The deluge of merger reports in the petroleum industry stirred up fresh enthusiasm for Skelly, Pan-American, and Sinclair convertibles with gains running as high as 2 points for the Sinclair 6s. Warner Sugar Refunding 7s added 3 points to yesterday's advance and fractional gains in Andes Copper 7s and Chile Copper 5s reflected the rising tendency in the copper group. Lackawanna Steel 5s jumped 4 points to a new top price at 99 on a few sales.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—(By The A. P.)—With a triple holiday ahead and with no sustained demand in evidence, wheat values declined today, especially during the last part of the board of trade session. Settlement of December contracts was reflected without flurry, although the December wheat price showed at one stage a setback of six cents from the day's top figures.

Wheat closed unsettled 3-8c to 3c net lower, new style, December $1.85 1-2 to $1.86 and May $1.79 to $1.79 1-4. Corn finished at 1 1-8c loss to 3-4c gain, oats 1-4c to 3-8c off, and provisions varying from 12c decline to 20c advance.

Closing out of December holdings of wheat today began early, the stimulus to sell being the fact that the December opening quotation, $1.90 a bushel, was 1-2c of the top price record for the season.

Corn and oats were influenced by wheat weakness and also by good weather for corn shelling and for the movement of the corn crop.

Lard declined with hogs and corn, but investment buying gave a lift to meats.

NORWICH TOWN

Today (Friday) ew Year's day, there will be open house at the First Congregational church for everyone in the parish. The pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, on an interesting little leaflet, recently distributed among the members of the parish, suggested that everyone who could do so, plan to give up this afternoon and evening to the church family gathering.

The order of exercises will begin with the church meeting usually held New Year's afternoon, at three o'clock. At five o'clock, the church organist, Herbert L. Yerrington, will give his 46th annual recital. This is a remarkable record, of which this church is proud. The programme contains interesting compositions of modern, as well as ancient masters of the instrument. Frederick H. Wyant, of Town street, is to assist Organist Yerrington, as tenor soloist. Following the recital, the parish supper, served by the Home Missionary society of the church, will take place. At this, the re-union of members and friends especially those from out of town, will furnish a happy meeting in sociability for at least two hours.

The Congregational hand books for 1926, which have several new and interesting features, are ready for distribution. Especially helpful are the four pages of brief and definite prayers for special times and people. The prayer meeting topics for the midweek service are to be found in this booklet. Much useful information is packed in this little book of sixty-four pages, so that if one went no further than to study he would be a fairly well informed Congregationalist. In the devotional meetings of the First Congregational church, which are held Thursday evenings, it is planned to make a study of one great hymn a month during 1926.

James (Charlie) Costules, of 20 Town street, returned to Norwich Town Thursday morning, having been the guest for several days this week, of Mr. and Mrs. Habeeb Abbood, of Moosup. Miss Sally Arremony, assistant to Mr. Costules, who was the guest over Christmas, at the home of her cousin, Miss Sadie Abbood, of Moosup, has returned.

TAFTVILLE

Funeral services for James Anderson were conducted by Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church, at the late home of the deceased, on North Third avenue, Thursday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, followed by a service at the church at 2 o'clock. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and the floral tributes were numerous. The bearers were William Liptrott, William Leach, Fred Knowles and David Murphy. Burial was in Maplewood cemetery where Rev. Mr. Crowdis read the committal service. Undertaker George G. Grant was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Singleton of Providence, R. I., are holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hindle and family of North Third avenue.

NEW YEAR'S RECITATION AT THE "Y" TONIGHT

This Friday evening the annual New Year reception will be held at the local Young Men's Christian association for all the contributors, the senior and intermediate members and their lady and gentlemen friends and members of the Women's Auxiliary. The reception program will begin at eight and close at ten o'clock. Swahn's orchestra will dispense their usual fine music in several popular selections.

A moving picture feature entitled "Hurricane" will be shown. This is a dramatic exposition of the belief that a noble heritage never wholly lost. Befriended by an indigent tragedian, Jit unconsciously displays his inherent manhood, and when the big moment comes makes good the old mans belief in his potentialities. He is finally reunited with his own people who had long thought him dead. Physical Director E. J. Fritz will put on some lively gymnastics. Refreshments will be served to all. The evening promises to be one of genuine enjoyment.

TWO CHECKS FOR POLICE PENSION FUND

The Merchants National bank, in appreciation of the services rendered by the police department during the past year has sent to Chief George Linton of the Norwich police force a check for $50, which sum is to be added to the police pension fund. Annually about this time the Merchants National bank, makes a substantial check to be added to the fund.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS HOLD ANNUAL NEW YEAR'S EVE FROLIC

Over 400 members of Wauregan Lodge No. 6 Knights of Pythias and their guests welcomed the year 1926 with the din of h[illegible], and all kinds of noise makers, when the second annual New Year's frolic was held at Olympic hall Thursday night. Everything possible was done for the comfort of the guests and besides entertainment a delightful dance program was given under the auspices of Thumm's orchestra, many novel numbers being worked in during the evening and early hours of Friday morning.

The tables were filled early in the evening and the hall was beautifully decorated in bunting, streamers and other decorations. The many beautiful floor lamps, loaned by local furniture houses set them off to best advantage.

The entertainment during the evening was entirely on the cabaret style with 22 entertainers from the Palace theatre, secured through the efforts of Manager Edward L. McEvoy. These numbers were given in individual acts including those of Joseph Cannelose, sensational six year old accordionist; Carson & Kane Revue, three girls and two men in a singing and dancing act of unusual character; Cramer and Griffin, two peppy comedians in song and story telling; the Bandell Sisters, direct from Club Alabam, New York, in songs and dances and Frank Jerome, comedy monologuist. At the conclusion of individual acts the troupes staged a delightful cabaret show which lasted well into the morning.

Toasts were made by several of the officers of Wauregan lodge and there were speeches from several of the prominent guests. Surprise features were sprung as the year 1926 was ushered in and from then on "eat, drink and be merry" was the slogan which all in all meant a bang-up real good time.

The success of the affair was due to the co-operation of many Norwich business houses and to the untiring work of the committee in charge, comprising, George Schiller, chairman; Abner Schwartz, treasurer; Dr. S. M. Goldberg, secretary; Max Hanover and Alex Pasnik, publicity; Sydney Shabecoff, reservations; Joseph Lahn, decorations; Samuel Ableman, Joseph Friedman and Rudolph Henschel, floor.

CHRISTMAS TREE AND PARTY FOR OCCUM BABIES

The Christmas party of the Rock Nook Well Babies conference was held recently in Richard's hall, Occum. Seventy-eight mothers and babies attended this party, fifty of the guests being children under five.

The mothers have been taking their babies for weighing and for physical examination to the conference held monthly at the Totoket club house, which is furnished, heated, and lighted by the Totoket company. Not only are the babies at the conference weighed and examined physically but advice is given the mothers as to their babies' diet; and, if any defects are discovered, recommendations are made for medical attention by the family physician to whom the defects are referred.

The party was a great success. There was a tree for the babies and a gift for each. Refreshments were served to all the guests.

In charge of the party was Mrs. Philip T. Welles. She was assisted by Mrs. Albert H. Chase, Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, and Mrs. Edward D. Fuller.

The public health nursing department has expressed its gratitude for all the courtesies shown by the Totoket company, for their assistance in arranging for the party, and for their generous interest and help in the clinic work.

ENTERTAINED NEARLY 200 CHILDREN AND MOTHERS

Over 190 children and mothers, attendants at the Rock Nook Childrens' clinic of the Public Health Nursing department, were entertained at the United Workers' headquarters Thursday afternoon. Delightful refreshments were served by the committee to both young and old and the nurses on the staff were in charge of distributing the presents among the children.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Mrs. Philip A. Welles, chairman; Mrs. Albert A. Chase, Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs, Miss Alif Stevens and Miss Edith Young.

LOCAL RESERVOIRS ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

According to Superintendent William H. Callahan, the two Norwich reservoirs are now in excellent condition, having a sufficient supply of water to carry the city through the winter. The amount of water in storage is not as great as it was two years ago but there is water enough to supply the city without resorting to the use of the pumping station at Trading Cove. Fairview reservoir is now down four feet and Stony Brook is down 13 feet, 6 inches.

The strainer at Trading Cove has been removed to prevent its being frozen in during the winter, when the pump is not in use.

Speaking of complaints in New London where the water is alleged to taste the vegetable matter, Superintendent Callahan reports that the basin of Fairview reservoir is exceptionally clear of leaves and vegetation. This same condition prevails at Stony Brook reservoir, no leaves having been noticed near the dam.

HEALTH NURSING DEPT. APPRECIATES ASSISTANCE

The public health nursing department of the United Workers acknowledges its debt of gratitude to the following firms who have assisted the department in many ways throughout the year:

The Lee and Osgood Co., The Cranston Co., Porteous and Mitchell Co., The Eaton Chase Co., Scott and Clark Corp., Irving Bogue Corp. Williams Tire and Supply Co., The Providence Bakery.

The department has also expressed its appreciation to all other organizations and individuals who have rendered service or made contributions of various articles during the year. The donations were toys for children, blankets and layettes for babies, wash cloths, books, magazines, flowers, jelly, and concert tickets for the nurses.

The list of donors is as follows: Park Church Campfire girls, Comfort Circle of King's Daughters, Norwich Playground association, Family Welfare Dept. of United Workers, Glee Club of the Norwich Free Academy, Junior Auxiliary of Christ church, Needlework Guild of Nogwich.

The Misses Rudd, Mrs. Mary Lillibridge, Mrs. William H. Oat, Miss Catherine Kent, Mrs. Albert Chase, Mrs. Charles T. Bard, Miss Alif Stephens, Mrs. Thomas Hahlam, Mrs. George E. Johnson, Mrs. Frederick T. Sayles, Mrs. W. T. Driscoll, Mrs. Charles Gilbert, Miss Mary Richards, Miss Ella Norton, Mrs. Charles D. White, Mrs. Maria Wharmby, Miss Lillian Randall, Miss Grace Kinnan, Mrs. Wallace Allis, Mrs. Samuel Smiley.

The public health nursing department acknowledges its appreciation and gratitude to all the doctors of Norwich, to Dr. O'Brien of Seaside, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Uncas-on-Thames, and Dr. Paul P. Swett of Hartford for their generosity in giving their time and advice whenever needed, and for their unfailing assistance and co-operation, and the W. W. Backus hospital which has done all the sterilizing for the department since its organization, and has thus proved of untold assistance in the work.

BRINGS SUIT AGAINST NEW LONDON MEN

Lieberman Sharaf and Harry J. Sharaf, both of New London, are made defendants in a damage suit brought in the superior court for New London county by The Brunswick Balke Collendar Co., of New York. The plaintiff concern alleges that on March 9, 1923, the plaintiff recovered a judgment in the superior court against Leiberman Sharaf for $2,349.41, with costs of $166.66. The plaintiff took out and gave to Deputy Sheriff Manuel J. Martin, papers for service and execution, it is alleged, by virtue of which said sheriff sold or levied on property belonging to the defendant, by virtue of the original attachment, in the case, realizing from the sale $1,701.75 and incurring expenses of $369.99.

It is also alleged that judgment liens were placed on three parcels of land in New London and East Lyme. The complaint further alleges that the defendant, Harry J. Sharaf, claims to have a blanket mortgage on the property in East Lyme but it is alleged that no consideration was ever in fact given by Harry J. Sharaf to Lieberman Sharaf, and that said mortgage is not a bona-fide mortgage and was placed upon the property for the purpose of concealing the assets of the defendant, Liebermen Sharaf.

The plaintiff seeks to have a judgment declaring said mortgage in favor of Harry J. Sharaf [illegible] and invalid and to have the judgment liens against the defendants and also judgment for possession of the property.

WOMEN OF MOOSEHEART HAVE HOLIDAY SOCIAL

The last meeting for 1925 of Norwich Chapter No. 125, Women of Mooseheart Legion, was held at Moose Home Tuesday evening, with the senior regent, Mrs. Mary Hunter presiding.

Regular routine of business was transacted. After the meeting, a social was enjoyed by the members, with a Christmas tree and gifts for all the members present.

Master Kenneth Sterry recited a Christmas poem, and others who took part in entertaining with poetry were, Mrs. Iva G. Hatch and Mrs. Bessie Phillips.

Mrs. Emma Beaver presented Mrs. Anna Crowe, the retiring past regent, a linen table cloth and napkins as a token of esteem from the members.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served under the direction of Mrs. Nora Willett.

The first meeting of the New Year will be held January 14th.

To err is human, to forgive divine—but it's useless to mention it to the police justice.

SHEEP BREEDERS TO MEET IN HARTFORD

The Connecticut Sheep Breeders' Association is planning to face the future of the sheep industry in the east at their annual meeting on January 27th at the Hotel Garde, Hartford, when J. E. Watson of Springfield, Mass., will speak on the subject "A Forward Look into the Sheep Industry of New England." This association, together with several other agricultural organizations in the state, is co-operating with the state department of agriculture in fostering the union agricultural meeting and banquet to be held Thursday evening, January 28th, at the Hotel Garde.

President F. S. Chapman will call the meeting to order at 10:30 a. m. Secretary H. L. Garrigus and Treasurer B. C. Batterson will give their reports which will be followed by the annual election of officers. Charles L. Gold president of the Connecticut Wool Growers' association, will talk at the morning session on "Results Attained by the 1925 Wool Pool."

Professor R. B. Hinman of Ithaca, N. Y., will talk on "Greater Profits for the Eastern Sheep Man." The day's program will be brought to a close with short talks and suggestions on plans for 1926.

Although the sheep breeders' meeting is brought to a close the day before the union agricultural meeting, many have already signified their intentions of remaining in Hartford for this noteworthy event.

Business In Eastern Connecticut Makes Encouraging Gain In 19

NEW LONDON AND WINDHAM COUNTIES RECORDED TOTAL OF $1,207,553,154

EXCEEDING 1924 BY $37,055,859

Eastern Connecticut Territory Fulfilled Expectations for Better Business Than a Year Ago—Business Transactions in New London County Were $892,480,044—Windham County Showed $315,073,110—National Bank Transactions Higher Than Last Year's and Savings Banks Made Gains in Deposits—Textile Mills in Two Counties Experienced Generally Good Business Year—Building Figures Close to Total of a Year Ago—Confident Spirit for Good Business in 1926.

After the twelve months of 1924, in which the general volume of business in manufacturing, banking and building lines in Eastern Connecticut was less than normal, this territory hit a stride in 1925 that carried it beyond the figures for the preceding year. There was a period of depression in the middle of the summer in the cotton and woolen mills, but silk mills had an active year all the way, and the general result made a fairly good business year in New London and Windham counties.

The general business total for the two counties in 1925 was $1,207,553,154, where it had been $1,170,497,295 in 1924, a gain for the past year of $37,055,859.

Towards the general total New London county contributed $892,480,044 in 1925, in contrast to $848,380,676 in 1924, while Windham county's figure was $315,073,110 in 1925, which was less than the 1924 total of $322,116,619.

In wages the New London county disbursements were $19,938,700 in 1925, where they had been $19,443,281 in 1924, while the Windham county wage disbursement was $8,710,722 for 1925 as compared with $8,625,946 in 1924. Total wages recorded a gain from $28,069,227 in 1924 to $28,648,822 in 1925, and the total volume of manufacturing business increased from $179,998,808 to $201,934,-[illegible] for 1925.

Total banking in the two counties reached the figure of $967,313,-[illegible] to which New London county gave $741,503,652 and Windham county $225,809,802. In the previous year total banking was $953,-[illegible] 167, consisting of $704,764,968 in New London county and $248,-[illegible],519 in Windham county.

The year 1924 set a high record mark in building with a total of $4,935,752 to which New London county gave $3,585,752 and Windham county $1,350,000, but this was not reached in 1925. For the 1924 year the building total was $4,841,145 of which $3,378,175 was in New London county and $1,462,970 in Windham county.

A general feeling of confidence for the year that is opening is expressed by business men in Eastern Connecticut, who feel that the indications are for a satisfactory period of business activity in manufacturing, banking and building lines that should make 1926 a year of progress and achievement for the business interests of New London and Windham counties.

Slightly Smaller Year In Norwich Manufacturing

The manufacturing industries of Norwich gave employment to 7,964 men and women, disbursing $8,837,024 in wages and turning out product to the value of $32,015,418 which compared with the figures of 1924 which were 8,336 employes, $9,116,929 in wages, and $32,492,061 in product values. Slackened manufacturing operations in several lines accounted for the somewhat smaller wage total than a year ago.

There were periods in the year when the lines of textiles, the cotton mills and the woolen mills, were running on short time schedules, making a material difference in the payroll distributions for the year. In the cotton mills the wage disbursement for the year was $2,134,000 with product valued at $5,955,000 and employes numbering 2,360 in contrast to $2,630,000 in wages, $5,673,000 in product and 2,405 employes in 1924. The woolen mills showed 1,562 hands employed with wages of $1,644,560 and product of $7,547,203, as against 1,780 employes, $2,005,000 in wages and $8,200,000 in product in 1924.

Paper and belting lines did a smaller business than the preceding year. These mills gave employment to 432 with wages of $565,521 and product value of $3,078,333, in comparison with the preceding year when 443 were employed, the wages were $632,293 and the product was $3,075,664.

Silk and velvet mills did about the same business as a year ago, which was indicated when their wages are shown at $1,357,293, product at $6,583,-378 and employes 1,101 which contrasted with the 1924 figures of $1,295,-221 in wages, $7,491,276 in product and 1,188 employed.

Foundry and iron work recorded decreased business in the year, having given employment to 225 with wages of $379,500 and product value of $927,-200. In the year before there were 273 employed in these lines, the wages were $456,144 and the value of production $794,791.

In the manufacture of metal goods and cordage there was employment for 323 with wages of $259,258 and product value of $894,000, which compared with the 1924 figures of 216 employes, wages of $240,500, and product of $693,000. In firearms and cutlery the year's figures were something below those of a year ago. There was a wage distribution of $442,000 with 301 employes and product of $809,000, as compared with 392 hands employed in 1924, wages of $529,900 and product of $905,000.

In a miscellaneous line of manufactures the year improved over the preceding, showing employment for 1,561, wages of $2,054,282 and product value of $4,221,215, as compared with 1,061 employes, $1,706,171 in wages and $3,200,000 in product in 1924.

Good Twelve Months In Danielson Manufacturing

A year ago this morning The Bulletin, in reviewing Danielson's and Killingly's manufacturing and other industrial activities for 1924, recorded that the year was the most disappointing in a decade, but forecasted better things for 1925. That prediction, happily, came true.

This morning Danielson and all of Killingly looks back over the months of 1925 and contemplates with great satisfaction that it was more than an average good year for thousands who work in manufacturing plants or are engaged in other industrial enterprises.

The year 1925 found no such depression for Killingly's textile manufacturers and employes as was experienced in 1924, a year in which the big plant of the Quinebaug company was closed for 13 weeks and other plants here and hereabouts not running too steadily. The past twelve months have been months of practically steady employment for mill workers. While southern competition with New England's cotton manufacturing plants continues very keen, this area has experienced an advancement to a better and apparently stronger position. This may be largely accounted for by the ability of northern mills, particularly those in the town of Killingly, to produce very beautiful and useful fancy cotton materials not so largely produced in the south and for which there is a good market.

Four mills here are now engaged in manufacturing what are known as "fancy" cottons, including the amazingly handsome "Rayon" productions. These products were shown to eastern Connecticut people by the manufacturers of this territory and for the first time in such a display at the Eastern Connecticut Mills Textile Exhibit at the state armory in Danielson last June and created a sensation. Such products as these are being specialized upon by Killingly's mills at this time, with not so much attention being given to the plain goods market, and in this seems to be the answer to the continued operation of the plants concerned. The same is true of mills in the town of Plainfield, out of which come some of the finest and most elaborately designed cotton textiles produced in America.

Other mills in Killingly devoting energy to the production of motor tire fabrics have gone along splendidly in 1925. Both the Connecticut mills here in Danielson and the Goodyear Mills at Goodyear have run steadily, keeping some departments going day and night. The popularity of the balloon tire has been a factor largely contributing to the steady operation of these plants and the greater expansion of the motor car industry has naturally increased the demand for tire fabrics. The Goodyear Mills, carried along in the great recovery made by its parent company, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, has been exceptionally busy and is again as valuable an asset to Killingly as in the wonderful busy years of the World war.

In the woolen and worsted industries of Killingly 1925 also has been a very good year, if steady operation and output make it such. That remarkably managed mill—The Assawaga company plant—at Dayville has hummed along right through 1925, as it has with the regularity of the working of a high-priced watch for years past. It has employed approximately 350 people at good wages all through the year and, as 1926 opens, goes on with the same splendid pace. Killingly Worsted at Elmville and Westfield Textile at Danielson have also done remarkably well during 1925, and rate high in the industrial assets of the town.

An outstanding success was achieved during 1925 by the Paco Manufacturing company, operating two mills in Danielson and also the Powdrell-Alexander plant in Putnam. This concern now has 400 employes in its Danielson plants and runs them day and night.

It manufacturers curtains, beginning with the raw cotton and through every process to the finished article. Nor does it stop here. It has its own sales organization, selling direct to the trade and its products go to about every land that buys any goods from the United States. At the present time in its Main street plant in Danielson it is turning out 48,000 pairs of curtains every week, and that is not near the total the concern expects to reach during 1926.

During 1926 the Paco company installed a bleachery in its Main street plant here and developed its curtain department. Making its own yarn, weaving its own fancy and beautiful curtain cloths, bleaching them, manufacturing them into curtains, boxing them, and shipping them through its sales department, the Paco company is doing something that charms one with the possibilities in the manufacturing and commercial field.

Rivaling in lustre the silks of the Orient, the Rayon products of the Westfield Textile company, a comparatively new Danielson manufacturing concern, point another way to New England success in the textile field. This concern is doing splendidly and operating on a full time schedule. Its product is taken as fast as manufactured and much of it goes into the making of handsome bed spreads, over draperies, etc.

Another thing that delighted Killingly during 1925 was the resumption of operations the past fall at the Whitestone Mills of the American Woolen company at Elmville. This plant had been closed for more than a year. It is not a large plant, but, an asset to the town that cannot be overlooked. The Davis and Brown plant at East Killingly and the Aseptic Products company plant in the same community also have added to Killingly's prosperity during 1925, as have the mills of the Attawaugan company, one of the oldest manufacturing concerns in this part of the state.

Killingly can look with a great degree of satisfaction on its manufacturing successes during 1925. It will state, as years ago, as a good twelve months.

Putnam Manufacturing Exceeded Last Year

In comparison with 1924, the manufacturing industries of Putnam showed a considerably larger business total in 1925, recording a wage disbursement of $1,669,000 and product value of $6,560,000, which in 1924 were $662,000 and $3,751,000 respectively.

Among the cotton mills in this territory, the payrolls totalled approximately $1,009,000 and value of product was $2,525,000 in 1925, which in the preceding year were $244,000 in wages and $1,230,000 in product, while silk mills had a wage distribution of $103,-000 and product value of $900,000 in 1925 as compared with $92,000 in wages and $720,000 in value of product in 1924.

Manufacturing industries in miscellaneous lines recorded $348,000 in wages and $2,070,000 in value of product for 1925 in contrast with $115,000 in wages and $700,000 value of product in 1924.

Manufacturing Gained In Year in New London

For the year of 1925 in New London manufacturing lines a generally good twelve months were shown with figures which exceeded the preceding year. The industries of the city gave employment to approximately 4,543 hands, for whom the wage disbursement was $5,268,760 and the product value was $15,512,715 as compared with the corresponding figures for 1924 which were $5,197,453 in wages, $15,-320,119 in product, and 4,631 in number of employes.

In the manufacture of boilers and iron work, the two years were about the same. For the past year there were 95 employed, $95,410 in wages and $240,000 in value of product, which contrasted with the 1924 mark of 90 employes, $77,727 in wages and $182,-000 in product. Machinery and marine work for 1925 showed 1,675 employes, $2,420,993 in wages and $2,826,835 in product, which was a decrease from the year before when the employes numbered 1,915 the wages were $2,-550,641 and the product value $4,325,-000. In metal and iron work the year showed a gain, having 380 employes, $497,000 in wages and $1,480,000 in product value as compared with wages of $485,000, product value of $1,390,-000 and 367 employes in 1924.

In the line of silk goods manufacturing there was a substantial increase, which is indicated by the figures of 1,587 employes, $1,428,023 in wages, and $7,464,000 in product value, as against the 1924 showing of 1,526 employes, $1,332,547 in wages and $7,109,023 in product. Cotton mills showed increased business, having 175 employes, $190,000 in wages, and $750,-000 in product to contrast with 100 employes, $117,203 in wages and $500,-000 in product in 1924. In the miscellaneous lines of manufacture there was a centrally good showing with the employment of 631 wages of $637,-634 and product of $1,751,880, in comparison with the 1924 figures of 643 employes, $633,335 in wages and $1,-797,091 in product value.

Willimantic Manufacturing Shows Lesser Volume

In Willimantic manufacturing lines the total for the past year shows smaller than a year ago. Their wage disbursements were $2,342,323, employes numbered 2,360 and product value was $9,937,250 as compared with the 1924 mark of $3,252,346 in wages, 3,159 employes and $11,049,845 in value of product. A strike of several months duration in the largest manufacturing plant in the city naturally diminished the volume of business in the city to a material extent.

With the cotton mills the wage distribution was $175,000, product value $327,250, which contrasted with $195,-128 in wages and $354,757 in product value in 1924, while silk and velvet mills recorded a larger business total, having $460,000 in wages and $2,500,-000 in value of product which were respectively $425,000 and $2,180,000 in 1924. Machinery and foundry work showed a 1925 total of $181,000 in wages and $370,000 in value of product as against the 1924 mark of $249,182 in wages and $490,065 in product value. In miscellaneous lines of manufacture there was a total of $1,-526,323 in wages and $6,740,000 in product as compared with $2,482,035 in wages and $3,125,000 in product in 1924.

SPIRIT OF CONFIDENCE RULES AS BUSINESS MEN ENTER NEW YEAR

Always keenly alive to the business conditions of the Eastern Connecticut communities, the Chambers of Commerce and other civic organizations find in the past year, a period in which real progress has been recorded in Norwich, New London, Willimantic, Putnam and Danielson along commercial, civic and social lines, which contribute to make these communities and their adjacent territory inviting places in which to live and do business.

What has been accomplished in the past year will serve as stepping-stones to new points of advance in the future along economic, social and political lines, in which effort the officers and members of these organizations will cooperate. That 1926 will prove to be a year of prosperous business conditions for Eastern Connecticut is the belief expressed by the leading men of the communities, who are prepared to do their part to achieve all that is best and most desirable.

Year of Healthy Growth Recorded In Norwich

In spite of certain unfavorable conditions there has been an optimistic spirit manifested in the various lines of industrial and business activities and a healthy and consistent growth has been recorded.

Our banks and corporations have paid dividends to their depositors and stockholders, and practically no curtailment in production has been recorded.

The slogan recently adopted by the chamber—"The World Uses What Norwich Produces" is literally true, for our products are sent to the very ends of the earth, and our sons and daughters are serving others in every land under the sun.

Norwich has naturally been the largest trading center in eastern Connecticut, and our merchants are deservedly proud of the fact.

Transportation facilities are an important asset to any community and we are highly favored by the connections we have between our city and our neighboring towns and communities. Better facilities are constantly being offered and new lines added to new localities.

The favorable report and recommendations of the United States Board of Army Engineers should make possible the long cherished desire for the deepening and widening of the Thames river channel and it is a source of real gratification to know that the fulfillment of this important project will make possible a large increase in our water transportation.

The past year has witnessed the beginning of an enlarged water system which, when completed, will supply a pressing need, and the reduction in the charges for both gas and electricity greatly extend the usefulness of these important factors in business development and household efficiency.

The chamber entered heartily into every important movement for civic betterment during 1925, and it is already planning for a larger program for 1926.

The development of a real and sincere "Community Spirit" is greatly to be desired, for Norwich has had a past of which we may well be justly proud, but the future will be exactly what we, and those who follow us, make it.

Shall we not, therefore, enter 1926 with gratitude for past blessings and a firm determination to build a bigger and better city upon the solid foundation of worthy achievements and accomplishments? If we do, the new year will be one long to be remembered by each and every citizen. And so may it be.

New London Moves Forward With Optimistic Spirit

New London is closing a year of unusual elements. A year of prosperous activities in industry, trade and commerce, building trades and allied developments. A prosperous and contented citizenry look back with satisfaction on a year of fruitful endeavor and substantial growth and possessed of increasing faith in New London's assured future.

Many varying elements have entered into this happy condition. Chief among which may be enumerated the uniformly splendid health of some 60,000 people making up the metropolitan and neighboring districts of this community. There has been a total absence from any measure of epidemic or dangerous contagion. The vigilance of local health units, coupled with an unsurpassed municipal water supply, plus adequate and sanitary collection and disposal of waste matters, have been important factors in giving New London a rating far in the lead of many other Connecticut communities by the state health authorities.

The past year has seen the establishment of an important government activity in New London, namely, the chief New England base of the U. S. Coast Guard Patrol Service, engaged in the suppression of liquor smuggling. Some 70 U. S. Coast Guard vessels, varying from the small 35 foot speed boats up to the large destroyers manned by a crew of 100 officers and men, are permanently berthed at the big state pier, engaging the service of a thousand and more men of the U. S. Coast Guard Service. This large unit of federal control is officered by capable and courteous officers, who, with their families have become an active and welcome element in the social life of our community. The Coast Guard Service, with rare exceptions, is composed of a splendid type of young men, giving of their best to a branch of our government fraught with unusual danger and exceptional hazards. Viewing the establishment of this branch of the service from a purely financial angle it has proved of inestimable value to New London. An estimated pay roll of a million dollars annually comes into New London through this source, in addition to expenditures of many hundreds of thousands of dollars in the purchase of supplies, materials, equipment, and repairs. This large and splendid arm of the federal service is constantly being increased in number and in power, under the vigilant and experienced direction of the staff of officers in charge. Then our U. S. Submarine Base ,Coast Guard Training Academy, the nearby island forts and other governmental activities, all form a welcome and increasing beneficial force here.

New London, during the year just closing, has witnessed some very remarkable strides in building. There are now under construction a dozen new store buildings, office buildings, theaters, automobile show rooms, etc., in addition to a quite considerable building of residences and homes. Some of our large landed estates possessing many acres of idle land have been purchased by local interests and are being developed into splendid residence sections. One notable instance being that of the well-known Guthrie estate. This large estate of many acres has been subdivided and placed on the market and enjoyed the phenomenal sale of about 100 lots within 24 hours to New London citizens seeking building sites for year-round-homes on beautiful Long Island sound.

Our community is now actively engaged in the promotion and establishment of a Community Chest, comprehending some 19 participating agencies. This movement of correlating all the various welfare, recreational and charitable activities of a community into one concerted, co-operating organization functioning under adequate central leadership and control has proved eminently successful in some 200 different towns and cities throughout the country. It is growing in favor and in usefulness, and it is confidently expected to prove a tremendous advantage in ultimate results, as well as conservor of time, effort and funds to the advantage of New London as compared with the methods previously obtaining. This big and all inclusive movement, like that of our change of charter providing more modern business methods in municipal government through establishment of the Council-City Manager form of government, and enactment of modern zoning regulations, are the direct outcome of initiative and direction of the New London Chamber of Commerce.

New London, as the chief seaport of southern New England, registers an appreciable increase in maritime activities, with apparent future growth.

We live in a city that offers unusual privileges and opportunities; a city that is steadily prosperous, a city in which relations between employers and employes are good and growing better; a city of good homes and churches and schools; a city whose people respond generously to any genuine need of money or service; a city in which there is much of the Christmas spirit the year round.

New London is ever eager and alert to share its bounteous blessings with others. We believe that we grow and prosper in such measure as we help others to grow and prosper. We appreciate the seizing of every opportunity to offer beneficial cooperation with any Connecticut community for the common good of the commonwealth. May we register here and now our kindliest neighborly feelings and good wishes for our sister city Norwich and bespeak for Norwich a prosperous and a happy New Year, as the year, and through the years to come.

WALTER S. GARDE, President.
New London Chamber of Commerce.

BULLETIN'S SOUVENIR CALENDAR SHOWS FIRST PAPER MILL IN STATE

This old mill was erected on the Yantic river in 1766 by Col. Christopher Leffingwell and stood for over 100 years before it was eventually torn down and dismantled, so that the only traces now remaining of it are sections of the foundations of the building and the anchorages for the dam that stretched across the river at a point about 500 feet northerly from the so-called Canada bridge.

The mill stood on the west, or Canada, side of the river, about opposite the present Clifford residence, No. 480 Asylum street, with a ledge of rocks close by. It is within the recollection of Norwich men of the present day, who grew up as boys at the Falls in the '70's or about then, that the deserted mill, empty of machinery, was still standing in their time and was their playground, sagging down over the wheelpit as shown in the calendar illustration. A low stone dam, with a wooden top, formed the pond for the mill, being built across the Yantic river from the "sandy lot" on the east side to the rocky bank on the west, and part of the mill building extended out over the water. In the bed of the river at the present time can be seen a ledge of rocks from which protrude the irons that were set into the rock to fasten the foundations at the angle point in the dam.

First in Connecticut

Thirty three years before Col. Leffingwell built this mill on the Yantic, a paper mill had been built in Milton, Mass., the first in New England, but the Leffingwell mill at the Falls was the first paper mill in Connecticut. Norwich was one of the first towns in the young colony to make experiments in manufactures, and the Leffingwell mill was erected in a period of great business activity in the town. For probably about 100 years it was the only mill and dam above the Falls, although there were other mills below the Falls, including the Elderkin grist mill on the Yantic flats, which for many years was the landing place for boats bringing supplies for the Norwich Town community. Col. Christopher Leffingwell, who was born in 1734, and lived at Norwich Town, where he conducted a general store, was one of the foremost and most enterprising business men of the community. He also ran a chocolate mill and a stockings factory. During the Revolution, he commanded a company of troops that was more than once summoned to the aid of New London, when attacks by the British were feared, and it is recorded in the annals of those days that none of the troops coming to the defense of New London were better disciplined or equipped than those under the command of Col. Leffingwell.

Near "No-Man's Acre"

The Leffingwell paper mill on the west side of the Yantic was across the river from a tract known in the early days as "No-Man's Acre." In a short time after it was built it was producing various kinds of paper for wrapping, writing, printing, cartridges and sheathing. The Connecticut Gazette was issued in December, 1766, from paper made at the Leffingwell mill. The quantity annually turned out was estimated at 1,300 reams, the prices varying from 4s. 6d. to 48s. per ream. Ten or twelve hands were employed. At the outset of the undertaking, a small bounty was granted by the government to continue for three years, but this was not renewed. Paper machines were unknown at this time and the new mill at the Falls excited much public interest. In Miss Calkins' history of Norwich, she records in a footnote upon the Leffingwell mill that a private letter written in October, 1767, says of it: "The paper mill at Norwich is plentifully supplied with rags, and has full demand for its paper. Mr. Throop tells me he has viewed it when at work: that it is a curiosity; that they mould and make ready for the press about ten sheets per minute by the watch."

The Hubbard Ownership

Col. Leffingwell died in 1810 and a year later the executors of his estate sold the mill to Russell Hubbard and two others, since which time the paper mill business at the Falls has been exclusively connected with the name of Hubbard, this family becoming the legitimate successor of Col. Leffingwell the first paper maker in Connecticut, and also of Andrew Huntington who began paper making below the Falls in 1790.

Mr. Hubbard and his partners continued the paper business in the old mill and in 1815 he bought out the interest of his partners. In 1818 Amos H. Hubbard bought of Andrew Huntington the paper mill below the Falls, and in 1829 he placed and operated the first Fourdrinier machine made in America. Paper had previously been made by hand, a sheet at a time.

Makes The City Boundary

When in May 1827 the general assembly of the state of Connecticut cut off Norwich Town and East Great Plain from the city of Norwich, the north end of Russell Hubbard's paper mill was made one of the bounds of the new city line and it still so remains.

About this time a period of great manufacturing activity ensued at the Falls, and in 1833 a large cotton mill, two paper mills, an iron foundry, nail factory and rolling mill were reported in successful operation in that section.

Hubbards Unite

After the land adjoining each of the Hubbard mills had been increased by further purchase, in 1837, the brothers, Russell and Amos H. Hubbard, each conveyed their several mills to the firm then formed to be known as H. & A. H. Hubbard. This partnership and ownership continued for 20 years, and until the death of Russell Hubbard, whose executors conveyed his share in all the mills to Amos H. Hubbard. In 1860 Amos Hubbard bought of the Norwich Water Power company land in Greeneville to which the business was moved. In 1861 he sold the mills at the Falls to the Falls Co., cotton goods manufacturers, under whose ownership the old Leffingwell mill eventually passed out of existence.

The Hubbard paper mill business was continued at Greeneville after the death of Amos H. Hubbard in 1865 by his son, James L. Hubbard, and then by the latter's son, the late Charles L. Hubbard, under whom the A. H. Hubbard Co. was incorporated in 1892, with capital stock of $100,000. Charles L. Hubbard president and treasurer, A. S. Comstock secretary. The corporation continued business till the first of April, 1915, when it sold the property to the Norwich Paper Mills Co., of which the officers were Frank L. Briggs, Norwich, president; Clark J. Bush, Hackensack, N. J., treasurer; and Darwin D. Briggs, Norwich, secretary.

A few years later the paper making industry at this mill ceased, when the Norwich Paper Mills Co., sold the buildings and site to the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., manufacturers of pyralin and kindred products, and that business is at present continued there by the Du Pont Viscoloid Co.

VOTE OF THANKS FOR BOY SCOUTS

At the December meeting of the Family Welfare Department of the United Workers it was voted to extend a vote of thanks to the Broadway, St. Patrick's and Norwich Town scouts, who so ably assisted the committee in the distribution of the Thanksgiving baskets.

Haven, Conn., a [illegible] New Haven club [illegible] governor of the 26th district Rotary International. It is a deal of pride that the 26th district can boast

J. NELSON WEYMOUTH
President Norwich Rotary Club

dency of an organization the size of Rotary International.

The clubs in Connecticut, that part of Massachusetts west of Worcester county and Vermont, form the 26th Rotary district. The first club to be organized in this district was the Hartford club which on Tuesday evening, December 29th, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary. The present governor of the 26th district is Rev. John A. Allison, past president of the Holyoke, Mass., club.

The Norwich Rotary club, No. 876, was organized and affiliated with Rotary International in March 1920 following a survey made by members of the New London club. In turn clubs were established in Willimantic by the Norwich club and in Putnam by the Willimantic club. The Putnam club has now a child—a male child—for his name is Daniel—son.

Since organization, the Norwich Rotary club has doubled in membership having today in excess of sixty members. They have lost through death Dr. John S. Blackmar, James L. Crawford, Arthur G. Jenkins and Logan A. Wheeler.

The past presidents in order of their service are Joseph C. Worth., Lucius Briggs, William G. Park, Charles A. Saxton and Dr. Hugh B. Campbell.

The present officers for the year 1925-26 are: President, J. Nelson Weymouth; vice president, Edwin A. Harris; secretary, Edward W. Jewett; treasurer, Clarence A. Spear; sergeant-at-arms, Herbert J. Ferguson.

The present board of directors are: Judge Nelson J. Ayling, E. LaRue Bliven, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, Herbert B. Cary, Edwin A. Harris, Edward W. Jewett, John J. O'Rourke, Clarence A. Spear, J. Nelson Weymouth.

The aim of Rotary has been described as follows:

"The aim of Rotary is to make each member a better man because he is a Rotarian; to help him think right, be right, do right; to make his business a pleasure; to make truthfulness and quality the prime elements of business; to make him love his neighbor, even if he is a competitor; to look on the sunny side and smile; to supplant sorrow with joy; to seek that which is good in all men, and to serve mankind, cheerfully, faithfully, honestly and unselfishly."

The six objects of Rotary are to encourage and foster—

1. The idea of Service as the basis of all worthy enterprises.
2. High ethical standards in business and professions.
3. The application of the ideal of Service by every Rotarian to his personal business and community life.
4. The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service.
5. The recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his occupation as an opportunity to serve society.
6. The advancement of understanding, good will and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the Rotary ideal of service.

Rotarians throughout the world are urged this coming year to make Service the basis of all worthy enterprises; to raise ever higher its ideal in personal business and community activities the standards of business and professional ethics; to advance understanding, good will and international peace.

J. NELSON WEYMOUTH, President
Rotary Club of Norwich.

Give Service to City, State and Country

To Service Clubs, everywhere, people on earth have more cause to be grateful than ours, as we have been blessed with the conditions which have enabled us to enjoy a large measure of well-being and happiness. It is our duty to do good to all, as far as in our abilities; it is our duty to labor for the education of all, that no child may grow through life with an enfeebled mind or a darkened mind, or a callous heart or a perverted conscience. This is the greatest service we can do to humanity in to give the right education, physical, intellectual, moral and religious.

Men are ranked by their vision, in a very real sense, vision makes the man. It gives him his reach and his power. One man sees nothing more than the materials of life and work and he becomes a drone. Another sees an engine in a kettle, a hero in a child, people in a multitude, and he becomes a inventor, a prophet, a statesman. I commend to you the cultivation of

In securing the figures herewith The Bulletin is indebted to the custodians of the accounts, and thank them for their prompt and obliging responses. Except in a few instances there was a ready response from those approached for information, but where estimates had to be made, they were carefully figured.

The greater part of the figures were based upon amounts actually taken from the books of the business houses. The promise to disclose no business secrets will explain why in a number of instances it has been necessary to assemble several lines into one sum. The immense figures reached must be a surprise to all as it is to The Bulletin, and the residents of the cities and towns of the two counties can well feel a pardonable pride in the magnitude of their business interests as here shown.

a spirit that will enable you to take a healthy, sound and cheerful view of the struggles and movements of society, of law, and of government in the coming year, believing that their tendency is toward improvement, not deterioration I wish you to realize and appreciate the humane direction in which recent reforms have been progressing.

I urge you not to strive exclusively for the pecuniary rewards of life, but look forward to a life of influence and usefulness that shall include your neighborhood your state and your country.

Let us invoke the choicest and richest blessings of heaven on those who shall do most in all time to come to preserve our beloved country in unity, peace and concord. Let us not be slandered from our duty, nor frightened by menaces of destruction. Let us have faith that right makes might and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.

Real Economy Keynote In Willimantic Government

We begin the year with a new official family, whose first and greatest business is to see that the administration of city affairs is carried out in a manner to provide the greatest return for the money expended.

Real improvement, however, must come, not from additional curtailment of expenses, but by a more intelligent, more ordered spending.

Our economy must be constructive. While we should avoid as far as possible increases in permanent current expenditures, oftentimes a capital outlay like internal improvements will result in actual constructive saving. That I believe is economy in its best sense.

During the early months of last year, we experienced our first real industrial trouble, which for some time threatened to be serious, both for the employers and employees and resulted in a curtailment of business during the summer months, which is still felt to some degree.

However, the general feeling with the coming of the new year is one of optimism and faith that industrial conditions will continue to improve, and that the experiences of the past year will result in a broader viewpoint and an appreciation of the advantages of co-operation between employer and employe.

We have been remarkably favored with a year of freedom from contagious diseases, the general health of the community being good.

The greatest task that confronts us this year, is the building of an ample and sure supply of water for the city. Our present system was of the best when it was installed about thirty-five years ago, and is still, under normal conditions, but is not adequate when greater demands are made. The work has been surveyed and plans made, which, if carried out, will insure an abundant supply of water for the city, and a much better quality for drinking purposes.

With the construction of our $300,000 school building to replace the one recently burned, we will be able to care for all school children for the immediate future.

No disastrous conflagrations have visited us during the past year, and that this is so is due very largely to the efficiency of our fire department, in their promptness in arriving, and in their courage and ability to subdue the flames before great headway is made.

In reviewing the past year I feel that we have much to be thankful for, and that with a united determination for a better Willimantic, and a finer Community Spirit, we can do much throughout the coming year.

That this prosperity may continue, and that each may have a Happy New Year is my wish.

JOHN C. TRACY,
Mayor of Willimantic.

Make The Golden Rule Guide For Current Year

As a new year is borne to us we strive ever to dispel all the despairs, moroseness, in fact, all the material and mental depressions of the past, retaining only pleasant memories of kindness and achievement. With a moment's pause while we reflect on the past and apply ourselves to profit by experience, let us in stentorian voice greet the new year which we will make happy by living with all our might while we live, and in making every moment a profitable one, learn to love, obey and exemplify the golden rule.

And in living the great altruistic code of Service above Self let us resolve to pledge our equal contribution to good fellowship, happiness of our home, the demands of our church and business, the welfare of our community and in so generously living become an inspiration for emulation by our neighbors.

JOHN F. AHERN, President,
Willimantic Rotary Club.

Build for Greater and Better Willimantic

Today, an old year, with all its burdens and cares, closes its portals forever and a bright New Year, with all its opportunities, its promises and its optimism, dawns upon us and offers us new incentives. Though we respect and silently mark the passing of time, yet as merchants and citizens it is not with unanimous regret that we watch the waning of 1925, for to many it has meant a period of strife and unrest to our fellow people But the year and its depression and anguish was not, however, without beneficial lessons. It has taught us all, as no other experience could, the value of cooperation and good fellowship in business and socially.

The coming of a new year is like the sound of the gavel for us to rally our forces and ply our trowels to rebuild with lasting material, the foundation for a greater and better Willimantic.

With a stronger faith in ourselves and our neighbor, we go forth on this New Year in unison to blaze the trail for a bigger and better business in Willimantic, which will make of it an attractive trading center. And in so pressing onward let it be our resolution to kindle new friendships and cement old ones by conducting our affairs in conformity with the highest code of ethics and service. Wishing a Happy New Year to our many loyal friends,

J. FRANCIS KEON,
President,
Willimantic Business Men's Association.

Willimantic Progressed In the Past Year

It is again the privilege of the Willimantic Chamber of Commerce to ex-

It is also its duty at this time to formulate new resolutions and renew old ones, so that its endeavors in 1926 will bring about increased improvement in civic matters and spread wide goodwill and peace among men.

Let us resolve on this New Year not only to believe, to repent and to laud our motto—Unity for Progress—but to live it every day of our lives. In our aim for betterment let us learn to know Unity and Progress as synonyms one essential unto the other and both for our mutual benefit. And may our progress mean not solely pecuniary reward but rather those invaluable gifts imparted by having faith in each other and working unselfishly for the good of all.

In its broad scope of activities the Chamber of Commerce looks upon the closing year as a gratifying example, for through months of strife and bitterness, Willimantic's business weathered the storm nobly and displayed a remarkable solidity which it had never before known to exist.

Even in the darkest days of 1925 when labor troubles strained our very fibre, the moral firmness remained unbroken and the city progressed. There can be no better inducement to continued and additional effort for the community welfare than a glance at such monuments of perserverance which arose during 1925 as two large additions to the Rossie Velvet company plant, the new Capitol theatre, the Elks home and additions to the Southern New England Telephone company and a modern community hotel now under construction. In addition to this the electors met in October and voted to construct a new $300,000 school building.

It is by these activities that Willimantic has demonstrated optimism for the future and to all its faith in a growing city by investing of its own money under trying circumstances. With the New Year is born a new Willimantic, which promises well to enjoy a healthy industrial growth and a greater prosperity and the banner Unity for Progress will wave over it forever.

A. LINN WEATHERHEAD,
President,
Willimantic Chamber of Commerce.

SEE PROSPECTS FOR CONTINUING GOOD BUSINESS AS 1926 OPENS

Business Generally More Active Now Than at Close of 1924—Gains In Most Lines Have Been Fairly Regular—Industrial Output and Volume of Trade Have Recovered From Decline During Spring and Summer—Conditions Point To Employment Plenty At Good Wages.

Continuing good business for the immediate future is the outlook at the beginning of 1926, according to the current issue of the "Guaranty Survey," published by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

"The end of the year," the "Survey" states, "finds business as a whole considerably more active than at the close of 1924. The gains in most lines have not been striking, but they have been fairly regular. As in each of the two years preceding, there was a distinct recession in industrial output and in the volume of trade during the spring and summer. The decline was by no means so sharp, however, as that of last year; and, with the substantial recovery of the last few months, nearly all branches of business will be able to report satisfactory results from the year's operations, and to look forward at the beginning of 1926 with the expectation of continuing good business in the immediate future.

The Industrial Situation

"Basic industrial output reached its peak in the month of January, which marked the culmination of the sharp recovery from the depression of 1924. The trend during the first half of this year was distinctly, though not violently, downward. After a temporary recovery in July a new low point for the year was reached in August. This figure was followed by two marked upward movements, bringing the index for October to the highest point recorded since April. Under these conditions it is natural that employment should be large and wages high.

Wholesale and Retail Trade

"An encouraging aspect of the situation this year is the fact that large industrial output has been balanced by an active movement of goods through distributing channels. It appears that both wholesale and retail trade in many lines will establish new high annual records. Not since the days of the post-war prices inflation have sales of consumers' goods been so large as this year.

Such general business indices as loadings of railway freight cars and payment by check, as well as the more direct evidence of sales by wholesale and retail dealers, agree in pointing to a record-breaking volume of general trade.

"The total amount of payments by check, as evidenced by debits to individual accounts by banks reporting weekly to the Federal Reserve Board, have run consistently above last year's totals. In the first eleven months of 1925, debits by banks outside of New York City were 12 per cent larger than a year ago.

"A large volume of retail trade is clearly indicated by sales of department stores and mail-order houses. Sales of 359 department stores throughout the country were about 4 per cent larger in the first ten months of this year than in the corresponding period last year. A similar comparison shows a gain of 15 per cent in sales of the two leading mail-order houses, which are more largely dependent than retail establishments in general upon farmers' purchasing power.

Well Balanced Commodity Markets

"It is clear from these and other indications of the activity of distribution that the general tendency this year has been for goods to move rapidly into consumption, and not to accumulate in the hands of manufacturers or dealers. This is perfectly natural in view of the high level of purchasing power enjoyed by nearly all groups of consumers as a result of active industrial operations, with large employment, high wages and generally adequate margins of profit.

"Such a situation provides firm ground for anticipation of continued high levels of industrial and commercial activity in the early part, at least, of the new year. General conditions in the commodity markets justify an optimistic attitude as a year ago. And the marked improvement in some of the basic industries which have only recently emerged from depression is an additional source of confidence.

"Indeed some students of the situation express the thought that present conditions are so good generally speaking that it is not reasonable to expect their unbroken continuance and have the feeling that security values based on this high level of business cannot be maintained indefinitely. Factors offsetting this view are cited by others, such as the fundamental soundness of business and banking conditions and the favorable economic position which this country occupies, as presenting assurance for the continuance of commodity and security markets at or near present levels, at least for the early part of 1926.

"It is only in a few directions that a tendency toward over-expansion has appeared, rendering the situation as a whole perhaps less reassuring than that which prevailed at the end of last year. These possible sources of danger represent a certain relaxation in some lines in the conservative attitude which has characterized the policies of business men in recent years. As long as the present abnormal situation in international finance persists, the maintenance of this attitude will be essential to orderly progress."

New Industries Bring Busy Times in Putnam

Entering 1925 as a year of hope, Putnam reviews it as a year of progress. In the background and steadily fading from the picture is the great banking disaster the city experienced in 1924 through the wrecking of the old First National bank with a loss aggregating upwards of a million dollars, one way and another.

The year just closed has witnessed the upbuilding of Putnam's two new banking institutions—The Citizens' National, replacing the defunct First National and occupying the home of the wrecked bank—and the Cargill Trust company. Both of these primarily commercial banks have had a good year and before them opportunities for further growth that are certain to be realized during 1926.

As it has risen triumphant from its financial difficulties, so, too, has Putnam made progress during 1925 in rebuilding its shattered manufacturing structure. Loss of old textile concerns has been partially compensated for during 1925 by the acquisition of new concerns and the expansion of others comparatively recently established in this city. And in the closing days of 1925, there was evidence that further growth of Putnam's silk, cotton and rhea industries is to be expected in 1926. All through 1925 the woolen and worsted concerns of the city have been stable industrially and have contributed materially to the payrolls distributed in Putnam.

Much greater activity at the Beachmont mills in Mechanicsville and at the plants of the Grosvenordale company have been other factors contributing to more normal conditions in Putnam's business life, for these centres largely make Putnam their shopping Mecca.

There was a far greater confidence and well warranted confidence in Putnam and its future at the end of 1925 than many thought possible of attainment at the end of 1924. There has been active and effective work through banking institutions and through a working chamber of commerce to get new industries. This effort has met with success.

Mills sold at auction when the Nightingale-Morse corporation was dissolved are now active again. In one of them is the Perkins Stronsman Corporation, manufacturing a splendid line of fancy cotton textiles that are finding a ready market. This concern, now employing about 100 people, is reported as doing so well that an addition to their plant is reported contemplated for 1926.

In the big Powhattan plant of the old Nightingale-Morse organization the H. K. H. Silk company is installed. This plant is one that is included in the $20,000,000 silk merger about which there has been so much publicity within the past fortnight.

Almost in the same yard with the H. K. company plant is the mill formerly occupied by the Putnam Manufacturing company and from which the cotton manufacturing machinery has been sold. This plant has been taken over during the year by the Edward Bloom company, manufacturers of silk.

The Bloom company is an especially promising one. It already has some units in operation and the management is exerting itself to the utmost to hurry the installation of additional machinery that more operatives may be employed and the output of the plant increased.

The Powdrell-Alexander company, occupying one of the plants formerly owned by the dissolved Manhasset Manufacturing company has had a good year. This concern is an ally of the Paco Manufacturing company of Danielson and is engaged in manufacturing yarn used in the mills there. This concern is a splendid asset to Putnam, as it is invariably busy and there is every indication that it will continue to be so, as it is part of a marvelously effective organization manufacturing and selling its products.

In another of the old Manhasset plants the National Rhea company has gone along well during 1925 and has done its bit to contribute to Putnam's industrial revival.

Specializing as Putnam's industries now are on fancy cotton materials and in silks, the city is not likely to hear so much in the future about the difficulties created here especially in cotton goods, by southern competition as has been heard in the past.

Another instance of Putnam's changing over from plain cottons and tire fabrics to cotton specialties is seen in the products of the Adams Manufacturing company which began operations in Putnam in 1924, took one of the mills formerly owned by the Nightingale-Morse company, built additions and started to do business, having removed here after many successful years of operation in North Scituate, R. I. This company is operating steadily, having a good market for its output.

With the Putnam Woolen company and the Waterman Worsted company, and other smaller manufacturing concerns, Putnam again has a good line of manufacturing enterprises, a number of them promising good growth as the years go by. Putnam's outlook has brightened materially in the past twelve months.

During the year the Putnam company, formerly the Putnam Foundry and Machine company, has largely expanded its plant and operations. It has an increased number of employes, is getting much business and seems destined to develop into one of the city's most valuable industrial assets.

Considering many things, Putnam has a great deal to be thankful for industrially as it enters 1926.

FARM BUREAU FOLLOWED HELPFUL WORK IN MANY LINES WITH FARMERS OF NEW LONDON COUNTY

Gave Directions And Aid In Dairying, Poultry, Potatoes, Fruit and Farm Management—Placed 47 Pure Bred Bulls and 14 Pure Bred Females In Past Year—Orchard Demonstrations Involving 3,600 Trees—Seven County Juniors Showed Their Animals At Three Fairs—Co-operative Buying Pools Effected Saving of $5,350.

A number of different lines of aid to the farmers were carried out by the New London County Farm and Home Bureau in the 1925 programme under the active direction of County Agent Walter T. Clark, bringing benefit to many communities, while the work in the homes was efficiently guided by Miss Gladys Stratton, home demonstration agent.

At the annual meeting in December, at which Imbert E. Fellows of Norwich was reelected to the presidency of the bureau, a programme was announced and adopted for the year ahead which will largely follow up that of 1925. As a help to the dairy industry special emphasis will be placed upon the importance of growing clover and alfalfa.

County Agent Clark Makes Annual Report

In part the report of County Agent Walter T. Clark for the past year is given as follows:

Officers for 1925

The officers for 1925 were the following: President, Imbert Fellows, Norwich; vice president, E. L. Waterman, Lebanon; 2nd. vice president, Mrs. E. M. Woods, Stonington; secretary, Arthur H. Davis, Waterford; treasurer, W. W. Service, Norwich; executive committee, Mrs. E. L. Waterman, Lebanon; Milton Beckwith, Franklin; Mrs. F. L. Kanahan, Norwich; Mrs. H. H. Leland, Waterford.

Special committees on projects were appointed by President Fellows as follows:

Poultry committee—Chairman, Mrs.

IMBERT E. FELLOWS
Farm Bureau President

H. R. Whitman, Waterford; F. L. Kanahan, Lisbon; Arthur Fellows, Norwich. Horse sales—E. L. Waterman, Lebanon; J. L. Raymond, Lyme; G. G. Grant, Norwich.

Programme Accomplished

The program selected and accomplished is as follows:

Poultry

6 culling demonstrations.
3 poultry calendars.
3 better stock.
4 quarterly poultry meetings.
16 aided in disease control.

Potatoes

18 strains.
1 spray and dust demonstration, 48 bushels in favor of spray.

Legumes

35 soil tests made.
13 alfalfa demonstrations, 3 started last year. Yield as high as 4 tons. Average 3 1-2.
11 farmers shown how to inoculate.
6 clover demonstrations.
2 ton increase yield.
40 plant improved seed.

Dairying

47 pure bred sires placed.
1 feeding school for grain dealers and co-operative managers.
14 pure bred females placed.
100 milk sheets placed on 12 farms.
3 farms running contagious abortion tests.

Junior Work

1 Junior club (county).
1 boy placed on state judging team.
7 boys show 10 animals at Middlesex, Hartford and Norwich fairs.

Vegetables

2 asparagus demonstrations involving 6 acres.
3 management demonstrations.
1 vegetable club meeting each month
21 received aid in disease and insect control.

Fruit

12 pruning demonstrations, 210 present.
24 nitrating demonstrations.
8 orchard management demonstrations, which involved 3,600 trees.
2 grape pruning demonstrations, held a fruit tour to three farms. 43 present.
3 young orchard plans made.

Farm Management

1 young farmers club, 18 members.
34 farm account books.
11 summarizing accounts.
1 field trip.
11 farmers change farming scheme as result of accounts.

Co-Operative

Fertilizer pool 500 tons saving	$4,000
Lime pool 1,000 tons saving	1,000
Spray material pool $3,000 saving	350
Total saving	$5,350

1 horse sale.

Agricultural Engineering

2 drainage ditches blasted.
1 tile drain put in, involves 90 acres.
2 farm water systems.
2 barns remodeled plans furnished.
7 laying house blue prints.
11 brooder house blue prints.
6 acres land cleared by dynamite.

To accomplish this work there were: 448 farm visits made, 490 office calls, 419 phone calls, 607 personal letters, 59 circular letters, (11,727 copies), 91 meetings, 3,393 attendance, 92 days in office, 155 days in field.

Soils

In this project the large part of the time has been given to soil testing and promoting the use of lime stone. This has been, however, in close connection with our clover and alfalfa campaign of the crops project. Many farmers have asked to have soil tested. The test generally used has been the Soiltex method which is put out by The This tester is a very simple affair and Soiltex Company of Lansing, Michigan. This tester is a very simple affair and can easily be used by the man without experience. During the spring a half dozen of these testers were obtained and sold to farmers at cost. They are very handy to the farmer who buys lime. There are sixteen farmers who bought lime for the first time this year. This, however, may not be accurate as there may have been more whom we know nothing of. This lime was used in seeding for clover and alfalfa. Among market gardeners and potato growers the practice of cover cropping in the fall by seeding rye or timothy is increasing. This is true particularly where stable manure is not easily available. The increased use of home mixed fertilizers was not so great this year as formerly as the fertilizer pool in the past few years has pretty well covered the county. There are many, however, who will always use mixed goods because of the simplicity in handling.

Farm Crops

The work in farm crops has been divided into the following: Silage corn, clover, alfalfa, potatoes, pastures.

The silage corn project has been confined this year to stressing the importance of using varieties which will give the best weight per acre and at the same time give a high yield of dry matter or digestable food value. The varieties of silage corn which have given the best results in this county from the above standpoint are West Branch Sweepstakes and Ohio Improved Leaming. However, due to the poor seed corn which was harvested a year ago only a limited amount of these two varieties could be obtained. As a consequence another variety known as Lancaster Sure Crop was used. This compares very favorably with the Sweepstakes in yield and maturity. It has also impressed many farmers, that probably this next spring will find more Sure crop planted.

Clover

The clover work this year has been carried along with the alfalfa campaign to a large degree. Much stress has been put on the importance of using northern grown domestic seed when sowing clover. There were six demonstrations conducted showing the comparison of native, South American and European seed. Without exception the plots showing the largest percentage of clover were plots sown with clover grown in Northern United States. The European seed plots were sown to French and Italian seed. The French plots contained about a 45 per cent. stand while the Italian was about 35 per cent. However, the plots sown to Agricultural seed have in some cases no sign of clover plants. The best plot sown to this seed had about a 10 per cent. stand. Farmers who have seen these plots have been impressed with the difference and surely will buy nothing but the certified northern grown clover seed. About three thousand pounds of this was brought in by the co-operative exchanges the past year. One of the large dealers in the county has made an effort to obtain seed of this sort. It is encouraging to learn that seedsmen take this progressive attitude.

When farmers use seed of this type and also use lime they are sure of receiving a good crop of clover and are encouraged to grow more. Failures, as the result of poor seed retard progress greatly. The use of improved seed has been growing rapidly each year. It is estimated about 200 new acres were sown last year, not all to clear clover however. About 60 per cent. was sown with a grass mixture.

Alfalfa

The alfalfa project this past year has been very encouraging and the results obtained should tend to interest more farmers in this valuable crop. As with clover the limiting factors in raising alfalfa are the use of a sufficient amount of lime, northern grown native seed, but with the addition of inoculation.

A rather intensive campaign was launched during the winter months to encourage the seeding of alfalfa. This was done by means of meetings in thirteen communities with a total attendance of about 350. At these meetings talks were given by the crop specialist or dairy specialist and the county agent. These talks were supported by lantern slides or charts. A special effort was made to encourage men in the various towns who were already successful with clover to sow some alfalfa. In about six cases this interested neighbors and townsmen to sow some. This is probably the most effective way of encouraging the raising of alfalfa. When a farmer sees his neighbor enjoying success with a crop he is quite apt to feel that he can do the same stunt.

Besides the meetings publicity about alfalfa was sent out to the local press at intervals and also letters were sent to the dairy mailing list. There is a growing interest in this crop and many farmers state that they intend to increase acreage or start some for the first time.

The yield received by farmers harvesting their first crop this summer has varied from 3 1-2 tons to 6 tons with an average of 3.3 tons. This is about 2.3 tons more than the average grass hay yield and many times more valuable from a feeding standpoint. As a result of the yield of about four tons per acre from his first alfalfa seeding, Court B. York of Stonington, is planning to seed approximately ten acres this coming spring.

It is also encouraging to find men putting three or four pounds of alfalfa seed in their regular grass seeding. It indicates that people are becoming interested.

About 1,000 tons of lime were brought into the county by the county lime pool managed by A. E. Shedd of Preston. A large part of this was used for clover and alfalfa seeding. This is more than ever was brought in before. In addition to this several farmers bought cars individually which has been quite uncommon. Along with the clover and alfalfa work two farmers became interested in sowing sweet clover for pasture, this totals about thirteen acres. This work, however, has not been greatly encouraged as yet.

Potatoes

The potato work this year has been confined to encouraging the greater use of certified seed. The amount brought into the county by the co-operative exchanges and local concerns is increasing each year. The annual potato seed trials held on Preston Plains each year have to a large extent encouraged growers to use certified seed. A demonstration seed source trial was conducted again this year. At the meeting held at the field that day over a hundred were present. A potato chowder was served by Mr. and Mrs. Dawley, the owners, and a potato picking contest was conducted while the trial potatoes were being taken from the field to the grading shed.

Pastures

There has been little effort expended on pasture improvement except to keep them along. During the early summer Mr. Morgan, soil expert of the New Haven Experiment Station, took several samples of soil from six pasture demonstrations to analyze chemically. This was for the purpose of seeing what action had taken place as a result of fertilizer treatment.

Horticulture—Fruit

The fruit program in New London county during the past year has dealt largely with apples. There has been quite a demand for pruning work. Twelve pruning demonstrations have been conducted with a total attendance of about 230. This has resulted in two or three farmers doing quite a business in pruning work, during the winter and spring, for farmers who had more of such work than they could handle. In the demonstration work orchards were selected which contained quite a variation in age and growth. In this way the people attending could obtain an idea of how young and old trees were pruned.

Some time has also been given to personal assistance in controlling diseases and insects.

There are three spray rings operating at present which are quite successful and are largely responsible for the good fruit that is being produced in their localities. The rings doing the most effective work are the Norwich and Lebanon rings. These are managed very efficiently, by Irving Bushnell and A. R. Randall, respectively.

Thirty-two nitrating demonstrations were started last spring. The nitrate was furnished either by the farmer or by the educational department of the nitrate agencies or sulphate of ammonia by the Barrett company of New York city. It is surprising to note how many people who are really trying to obtain something from their apple trees, use some form of nitrate. A fruit tour was held on Aug. 24, but was poorly attended because of a heavy rain that day. There were 43 present where 150 were expected if it had been pleasant. Three places were visited; Kitemaug orchards, owned by F. W. Browning, and the orchards of Simeon Brewster, of Griswold, and E. J. Grahame, of Lebanon. All three are successful growers who are growing some very fine fruit.

Vegetables

There have been only vegetable management demonstrations, two in number, conducted this year. The Norwich Vegetable club has met each month with Prof. A. E. Wilson, the specialist in vegetable growing. As a means of diversity six farmers have added vegetables to their cropping scheme. There have been two asparagus demonstrations, one of these comprising four acres. This is a very successful demonstration but will not be cut at all until next spring. Twenty-seven growers have applied for personal assistance either from the vegetable specialist or the county agent.

Dairy

The pure bred sire work has been continued this year. There were forty-seven animals placed bringing the total to about 170 as near as can be reckoned. There has been no intensive work carried on as there was last year. The list of prospects that was used in 1924 was kept in mind and many approached. It was increasingly harder to place animals because the animals were harder to obtain from breeders as other counties in the state were doing the same work and thus had the same demand. Also the remaining prospects were harder to convince than those during the first year of the campaign. There has been, however, an increased interest among men who obtain pure bred sires in 1924 in getting pure bred or high grade females for foundation stock. This work will be emphasized more for the 1926 dairy program. A man in Waterford, who formerly kept grade stock of average quality became interested in pure breds through the Pure Bred Sire campaign and now has a fine Holstein herd of eighteen animals and making more milk than he sold from 30 or more grades. The purebreds were acquired by careful buying. His son was also interested in dairy club work and is now intensely interested in the pure bred herd.

Junior Work

There was a Junior Dairy club of 17 members in the county this year. These boys owned 23 animals which were either purebreds or high grades. Seven of the boys showed ten animals at the Middlesex county 4-H fair, the Connetieut state fair, at Hartford, and the New London county fair, at Norwich. Although the boys did not take as many prizes as they might have they learned a great deal and came home determined to do better next year. The animals were transported to the fairs by the kindness of the Yantic Grain company, who used one of their large trucks. They were returned by the Schwartz Grain company, of New London.

The boys had a dairy judging team that placed three among the ten highest at the state fair and one of these three was chosen a member of the state team which judged at the national dairy show. The boys from this county who placed high at Hartford are: George E. Wood, Waterford; Everett Wade, Sprague; Sylvester Wade Sprague; in order of standing.

Poultry

There were three culling demonstrations in the county this past year. Two of these were conducted by the county agent and one by R. E. Jones, poultry specialist. These were on farms having but little culling before. There were four quarterly meetings held with a total attendance of 230. Programs were given that included a number of local men who talked on methods of management which they used. These meetings started at 10:30 and lasted until 3 o'clock with a basket lunch at noon. This seems to be the most interesting form of poultry meeting which we have had. Farmers like to hear local mens' experiences. There have been no few calls in regard to diseases and their control this year. This phase of the poultry project seems to be becoming increasingly important so much so that most of our time will be put on it next year.

There were about eight poultry calendars distributed this year.

One Junior Poultry club was organized in Waterford, but it is doubtful that it will survive another year because of the lack of interest. The interest of

Programme For 1926 By Farm Bureau

During 1926 a similar programme will be carried out as has been during 1925. There will be special emphasis put on the importance of clover and alfalfa growing as a help for the dairy industry of the county.

The dairy programme will be varied somewhat to include the forming of breed associations for th purpose of studying constructive breeding of a particular breed and not particularly for the promotion of their stock.

Following is an outline of the proposed agricultural programme for New London county:

Agricultural Engineering.

One large drainage ditch to be blasted.

Poultry.

Sanitation.
Clean range.
Clean water.
Control of disease, insects, parasites.
Urge use of healthy stock.
Co-operation.
Organize.
Fertilizer, lime and spray material pool.

Dairy.

Continue Pure Bred Sire Work.
Urge constructive breeding work with owners of P. B. Sires by records, culling, selection through breed clubs.
Increase members in Junior work.
More pure bred stock but emphasize production.

Fruit.

Continue orchard demonstrations.
Twelve pruning demonstrations.
Encourage more lime spray.

Vegetables.

One new vegetable club.
Disease and insect control.
Marketing.
Emphasize grading and standardizing.

Farm Management.

One more Young Farmers' club.
Continue present one.
Place 50 account books that will be completed.

Crops.

Increase production of alfalfa and clover to 500 acres.
Increase use of improved seeds.
Increase use of lime.

HOME DEMONSTRATION GIVES HELP IN NEW LONDON COUNTY FARM HOMES

Programmes in Various Lines Were Carried Out in 37 Communities—Under Direction of Miss Gladys Stratton With Assistance of 45 Local Leaders—Women Who Are Aided Pass Along The Lessons They have Learned.

Thirty-seven communities with an organized programme had the helpful services and direction of the home demonstration department of the New London County Home and Farm Bureau during 1925, with 45 directors and local leaders assisting Miss Gladys Stratton, the home demonstration agent, in carrying out the various projects.

The home demonstration work is far reaching and cumulative in that the women who experience its help pass on the lessons they have learned and the influence of the work goes far beyond the limits to which the statistics of an annual report are confined.

Annual Report

In the home demonstration department of the county farm bureau the work for 1925 was reported by Miss Gladys Stratton, home demonstration agent, in part as follows:

Organization Project

We had thirty-seven communities with organized program in 1925. Forty-five directors and local leaders assisted in the organization and carrying out project work in their communities. An effort was made at the beginning of the year to make out programs for the year's work with the various groups. Sixteen groups made out and carried through a program. Other groups selected single projects and as these were completed chose others to work on. There were groups organized in Hadlyme, Old Lyme, Bean Hill, Preston City, Stonington Village, Bozrah, Pleasant Valley Groton, and Poquonock Bridge which were new groups this year.

Annual Field Day

More people turned out to the annual field day which is held in August than to any other one meeting held during the year. Around four hundred attended. The day is spent having a good time. There are organized sports for men, women and children, swimming, base-ball, barn yard golf, picnic lunch and a few speeches.

Home Marketing

Home Marketing is not a project in this county but where individual requests come in they are taken care of when possible. Seven women are marketing canned fruits and vegetables using the price list gotten out by Massachusetts Agricultural college as a standard. Four groups of women are making and selling baskets on order, using prices suggested by the home demonstration agent. Two groups are making a business of marketing home woven rugs, and eleven women are using the same price scale in charging for reseating different types of chairs.

Foods

The groups taking the food preparation project in the county this year have all chosen to work on vegetable preparation. This project included preparation of vegetables as the main dish for meal, various ways of serving common vegetables and uses of vegetables in salads.

The results from this work are apparent to one following these demonstration meetings when meeting the group on other work. As most of our meetings are all day meetings lunch is served at noon. Vegetable dishes and salads as taught by the nutrition specialist are brought for these lunches right along. They are not just trying them out on me. They have tried them at home and because they like them they bring them to the meetings. I get frequent requests for the typed material on the project by women who have attended the meetings as they know some one else who did not attend but would like the material.

Ninety-one women signed up as home demonstrators and have been following information given. Those reporting give from one to four members of family who have increased the use of vegetables in the diet, from one to three increasing the use of milk and almost all report improved health in the family. Nearly 200 have adopted improved practices in meal preparation this year and nearly 300 have adopted improved practices in food preparation.

Food Preservation

This is no longer a county project but individual help has been given where requested. Six people have been assisted with vegetable or fruit canning and fourteen with preservation of meats.

Nutrition

The nutrition project has been presented to six groups with 72 present. The number acting as home demonstrators and the projects represented follow:

33 demonstrators—use of more vegetables in diet, 14 demonstrators—in weight increase, 23 demonstrators—in reducing weight, 23 demonstrators—in eliminating constipation, 15 demonstrators—using a pint of milk per day in diet, 8 demonstrators—using a quart of milk per day in diet, 11 demonstrators—following instructions for food for children.

Rural Engineering

With Mr. Knipe, the agricultural engineer, from the State college, seven home visits were made in three towns. At one place suggestions were given on installing water and electricity in house, tenant house and barn. The water system is under construction. Other homes included water systems, septic tanks, kitchen drains, electricity, installation of pump to bring water from well into kitchen and further suggestions for another place where the water system was under way.

Since the main reason in most cases for delay in installation of water, heat and lights is expense there is not a general program for this project throughout the county. The work is taken up with individuals here and there interested and ready at that time. The people are glad to talk over plans with some one who is not interested in selling them something. Some one who knows something of what the cost ought to be, etc. These visits usually result in something being done. Five water systems are installed or under way, two sewage systems, one septic tank and two lighting systems.

Clothing Project

The clothing project is still one of the popular projects with the women of the county. This year the project included renovation of garments, pattern making, construction of garments, color and design in clothing, tailored finishes, children's clothing and dress forms. Work has been started in teaching groups the use of machine attachments.

With tailored finishes and selection of clothing the work is uniform and usually the groups are larger. Number of women taught:

Improved practices in selection and construction 624, improved practices in renovation 539, improved practices in selection and design 46, improved practices in finishes 302, to make dress forms 98, forms made 33, number of dresses and coats made or remodled 699, number of undergarments made, 316.

The following communities had some part in the clothing project: Cider Hill, Stonington Village, Groton, Jewett City, Occum, Bozrah, North Plain, Goshen, Norwich Town, Gales Ferry, Uncasville, Mystic, Norwich, Franklin, Lebanon, North Stonington, Wequetequock, Poquonock Bridge, Colchester and Sprague.

There were thirty-four meetings with 336 women in attendance.

Work on "Use of Machine Attachments" has just been started in the county with two meetings in Norwich which were attended by thirty-one leaders representing fourteen communities. It is intended that this project be continued in these communities in 1926.

Millinery

In January four groups were met for a talk on selection of millinery with reference to the type of face and figure. These same groups were given a demonstration on how to renovate felt and straw hats, velvets, ribbons, trimmings.

In construction of hats both fall and spring work has been given in the county the past year and eighteen groups were met in the following communities; Franklin, Poquonock Bridge, North Stonington, Leffingwell, Voluntown (spring), Groton, Cider Hill, Bozrah, Baltic, Goshen, Norwich Town, Gales Ferry, Uncasville, Quaker Hill, Waterford, Poquetanuck, Hanover, Voluntown (fall).

Attendance 816, hats made 271, cost $654.83, estimated value $1,886.75, estimated saving $1,231.92, number of women taught improved methods in millinery 347, number of girls taught improved methods in millinery 34.

Home Management

The home management project this year includes making of fireless cookers, improved kitchens, utensils and equipment.

There has been considerable interest in fireless cookers during the year though no great stress has been put on this subject. After talking over the materials needed for the cookers on reading instruction sheets to the leader, those wishing to make a cooker assemble material ready for putting together.

One group completed seven and had five under way at a half-day demonstration. The women use what they can find suitable for outside containers, a bee hive made a fine container for one cooker, a metal trunk into which wells of sheet tin were fitted looks just as good as a commercial cooker and costs far less.

Kitchen Improvement

Twenty-one women have done something toward improvement of their kitchens the past year. While two meetings were held where this project was discussed with the group most of the work has necessarily been individual as each kitchen has its own problems. Home visits were made and plans worked out with many for arranging for convenience. In some cases after talking it over with a few suggestions the housewife sent ahead and made her own plans for making the room and equipment better serve her purpose.

Utensils and Equipment

An exhibit of labor saving equipment was assembled for use with groups during the year. This has been used in connection with talks with groups and as an exhibit at fairs.

With no effort having been made to gain reports on this project several have reported purchasing similar equipment and other pieces which would assist and make less labor.

Equipment or utensils reported are: 7 power washing machines, 4 kitchen sinks, 7 set wish bowls for kitchen, 9 vacuum cleaners, 1 gasoline iron, 13 knife sharpeners, 7 canners, 6 longhandled dust pans, 2 racks to raise pans in kitchen sinks, 14 stainless steel kitchen knives.

Home Furnishing

The work considered under this project is chair seating and rug weaving. Both projects are popular. Most homes have some chairs needing seats and many Connecticut homes have fine old frames put away in the attic which when refinished and reseated make the ordinary person quite envious of the owner.

While the project on reseating chairs has been running now for three or four years, about the same number of groups are met each year thus far. There was a total of 258 chairs reseated at a cost of $130.16, an estimated value of $670.60, and an estimated saving of $550.84.

Rug Weaving

Most homes have rags which can be worked up into rugs. The college owns a loom which is loaned to the counties. In the counties arrangements are made with the groups wishing to use the loom and the women begin to prepare their rags. Care is taken in sewing them that there be no bunches to spoil the loks of the weaving and that colorless rags be dyed interesting colors adapted to use on the floor.

This year the loom was loaned to four communities in the county.

Community	Dem.	Rugs	Yards
Griswold	2	20	40
Groton	2	14	28
Goshen	1	48	96
Lebanon	1	100	150
	6	186	314

About seventy-six women made use of the loom and wove 186 rugs which averaged 41c. per rug which would mean a saving of $6.00 to $7.00 each.

The communities, Goshen and Lebanon, have purchased looms since using the loom this year and in Griswold the loom has been purchased by an individual, the group to have the use of the loom by paying for warp and a small amount per yard, this to cover care of wear and tear on the loom. All of these communities have kept their loms busy since obtaining them.

There are now eleven looms in use in the country as a result of the use of the loom during the past four years.

Home Health

Lectures and demonstrations have been given in health subjects to nine groups during 1925.

Following are the communities where health work has been given and the subjects taken up:

Cider Hill—A Winter Without Colds.
First Aid and Bandaging.
Old Lyme—First Aid and Bandaging.

Home Demonstration Programme For 1926

There will be no great change in program of work for 1926. Emphasis will be placed on the home management project, stressing more conveniences in the home. The nutrition project will continue its work along increased use of vegetables and will put more emphasis on fruits in the diet. With our clothing project, it is planned to give more help on children's clothing, and on use of machine attachments as well as continuing the work with construction, selection and renovation of clothing. The millinery groups will be continued in construction of hats and those having had two or more construction classes will have more assistance no trimmings where wanted. The health project remains much the same as given in former years, but since this covers many subjects, project. ... ... no group has yet exhausted the project.

MUCH HIGHWAY WORK IN THREE EASTERN CONNECTICUT COUNTRIES

Expenditures Were Approximately $1,138,497 over 39.6 Miles of Roads—Nearly All Concrete or Macadam Construction—Memorial Bridge At Putnam—New Bridge At Five Mile River in Killingly—Two Big $200,000 Contracts Begun Which Will Be Finished in 1926.

Highway work that covered the three counties of eastern Connecticut has been carried on by the state department in the past year over approximately 39.6 miles of road at an approximate total expenditure of $1,138,497.42, which was a somewhat smaller figure than the year before when the total was $1,582,974, with about 41.16 miles of construction work.

Concrete and macadam predominated in the types of road building, while two new bridges were built in Windham county, the Putnam memorial bridge at an approximate cost of $40,000 and the Five Mile River bridge in Killingly at a cost of $6,000.

In New London county about 28 miles of highway were in the improvements at an expenditure of $679,-990.95, in which the largest pieces of work were between three and four miles of macadam on the Raymond hill road in Montville and over four miles of macadam on the Norwich-Hadlyme road in the towns of Lyme and East Haddam.

In Windham county, the work covered 7.28 miles, besides the two bridges already mentioned, at an approximate expenditure of $367,096.70, and included the completion of the macadam highway in the town of Plainfield on the Norwich-Putnam road, which was begun in the preceding year. This finishes another fine stretch of road on the much used north and south highway in this end of the state.

Two important contracts which will be completed next year have been begun this fall. These are the concrete pavement contracts on the Norwich-Willimantic road in Franklin and the Norwich-New London road in Norwich and Montville, which will cost approximately $200,000 each. The road in Franklin will extend for 2 1-2 miles northerly from Smith's corner to reach the concrete at the Lebanon road corner, and the improvement on the Norwich-New London road will run from the Norwich city line to a point about halfway up Mohegan hill. This includes a great improvement in the road at Trading Cove hill as to grades, curves, and width.

Division Engineer John Smith, from his headquarters in Norwich, has general charge and oversight of all the work which is doing so much for the comfort and convenience of the local traveling public and the constant stream of visitors and tourists from other sections and states who use the eastern Connecticut highways.

A summary of the work in the past year is given in the accompanying table:

BANKS OF EASTERN CONNECTICUT DID INCREASING BUSINESS IN 1925

Transactions of National Banks in New London and Windham Counties Exceeded Busine of 1924—Saving Bank Deposits and Number of Depositors Are Greater Than a Year Ago—Thrift Habits Taught to the Rising Generation by Bank Clubs for Savings.

An increase in the banking business, both national and savings, for 1925 in Eastern Connecticut is recorded by the strong financial institutions whose resources furnish the sinews of trade for this busy territory. The national banks have done a profitable business with a volume that is ahead of 1924, while the savings banks have found their deposits increased by the thrifty habits of their customers.

Total transactions of the New London and Windham county banks in 1925 were $967,313,454, which exceeded the 1924 total of $953,388,487.

The savings banks of the two counties recorded total deposits on hand at the end of 1925 amounting to $83,535,192, which bettered the total deposits of $79,729,100 at the end of 1924. To the 1925 total the New London county banks gave $67,608,566 and the Windham county banks $15,926,626. In the previous year the New London county banks had savings deposits of $65,014,361 and the Windham county banks $14,714,838.

Norwich Banks Experienced Greater Business Year

The strength and stability of the Norwich banks, national and savings, which have combined resources of close to $50,000,000, have continued to serve adequately the financial needs of this community and its tributary territory during the year just closed and all report a business year that was an improvement over a year ago. The three national banks, the

REUBEN S. BARTLETT

Thames, Uncas and Merchants, had a profitable business year, which was notably active in the last six months. The rate on accomodation paper has been 5 1-2 per cent and on secured paper 5 per cent, the demand for money has been active and the total national bank transactions have increased from $350,866,025.23 in 1924 to $373,740,938.94 in 1925.

All the savings banks reports an increase in the number of depositors and the amount on deposit. The total in savings deposits increased from $37,-254,761 in 1924 to $38,321,500 in 1925 and the number of depositors from 48,551 to 49,203.

There was a consistently steady call for loans on real estate from the savings banks to finance the erection of new residence property, but it is expected that there may be a slackening in this line in 1926.

To Build New Bank

In March the Dime Savings bank elected Reuben S. Bartlett president to fill the vacancy that had been made by the death of Judge Cardiner Greene and at the same time John H. Perkins was elected a director. Later in the year the bank took a notable step with an eye to the future in buying from Moses Klingon the so called Shields property, 33-39 Broadway, where a new banking house will be built. The officers of the bank are already engaged in having preliminary plans drawn and it is probable that the construction will be started some time during the present year. The location is admirably suited to the requirements of the bank, the lot is of large size and the erection of a fine bank building there in place of the present structures on it will be a substantial improvement on one of the main business streets of the city. The Dime bank had a good business year, recording an increase in deposits from $4,092,264.22 to $4,100,294.90.

Savings Deposits Increase

Savings deposits were likewise on the increase in the Norwich Savings society, which in October initiated the plan of crediting interest quarterly on savings deposits. The helpful lessons in thrift taught to the younger generation were continued with excellent results in the maintenance of the automatic teller system in the schools which enables the school children to have their pennies and become bank book holders, thereby establishing a habit that will bear fruit in later years. Savings deposits in the bank grew from $20,699,042.28 in 1924 to $20,868,236.60 in 1925.

At the Chelsea Savings bank the gain in deposits was higher than the general New England average as computed by the federal reserve bank in Boston and real estate loans reached their peak in the history of the bank. School savings clubs have been maintained in 134 schools, thrift clubs have been encouraged in industrial plants and the Christmas and vacation clubs have been continued with much success. This year the Christmis club distribution was approximately $50,000, a gain of about 25 per cent over a year ago. The savings deposits in the bank increased from $12,230,354.46 in 1924 to $13,118,189.90 in 1925.

The Bankers Trust company has enjoyed its most successful business year and in December declared a dividend to its stockholders. Deposits in its savings department increased from $220,202.35 to $234,778.64, and the commercial department did a substantially larger business, all making the fourth year of the bank a tribute to the management of its capable officials. Christmas and vacation clubs were maintained by the bank.

New London Banks Had Substantial Business Gains

Perhaps the year 1925 did not meet all our expectation, but it has been on the whole a fairly good year businesswise for New London. There has been a large improvement in industrial employment, the silk mills being particularly active. The result of better employment of labor has been better business for the merchants and good business for the banks.

There have been few changes during the year in banking circles. In May, Chester L. Harris, treasurer of the Winthrop Trust Company, resigned to accept a position as assistant to the president of the First National Bank of Quincy, Mass. Mr. Harris came to the Winthrop Trust Company from the Merchants National Bank of Boston. Edward S. Huntley was elected treasurer to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Harris.

Early in the year the Union Bank & Trust Company occupied its very handsome addition to its banking quarters, and during the summer the Mariners Saving Bank bought from the D. S. Marsh family the building adjoining the Mariners Savings bank on State street. Ultimately the bank will use this property for a much needed addition to its present banking rooms.

The growth of the two savings banks during the past year is approximately one and a half millions of dollars and there has also been a substantial gain in assets in all commercial banks.

There are well-founded rumors of at least one, and possibly two new industries of some importance which may be located at New London during the coming year and if these future materialize, it will undoubtedly have the effect of making 1926 the best year New London has seen for a long time.

The Christmas club distribution this year was the largest ever, amounting to over a quarter of a million dollars.

It is believed that much money has been saved to New London investors through the nationally known detective agency maintained jointly by several of the banks.

The largest real estate transaction during the year was the sale of the Harris building by the trustees of the Harris estate to Dr. Hugh F. Lena. Other large real estate transfers were the Marsh property on lower State street sold to Ward T. Alling and the sale by the Marsh family to the Mariners Savings bank above mentioned. Ward T. Alling was also the purchaser of the property on State street adjoining the Crocker House formerly owned by the Wetherill estate. At the present time Mr. Alling is probably the largest owner of business property in New London.

Early in the year the upper part of the Crocker House was badly burned which resulted in the rebuilding and renovation of the entire property much to the improvement of its appearance and value.

The banks have been very active lenders of money on mortgage loans, a large part of which was used for building purposes. There is some competition from the savings banks in Norwich which evidently do not find sufficient building activity in their own town to employ their funds. At the present time there are few vacant tenements or houses in New London and should there be any large influx of population the housing situation would at once be acute.

The Mariners Savings bank has announced another innovation in that it is to install the "Bank at any time" system whereby a customer of the bank can deposit money through a special compartment constructed on the front of the building at any time, day or night, including Sundays and holidays. This plan is one which is creating great attention all over the country and its adoption emphasizes the desire of the banking institutions to give the greatest possible service to their depositors.

Danielson Has Become Great Banking Center

Those who have watched the growth of Danielson's banking institutions during the past decade have, year by year, been regularly surprised at the expansion accomplished. Indeed the steady and unusual growth has been a surprise to the bankers themselves.

No greater surprise as relates to this has been given the public in any recent year than will be contained in the statement that may be made here this morning that the total assets of Danielson's three banks are now pressing close upon the $11,000,000 mark, the greatest held in any community in Windham county.

Much of this increase in assets is represented in surplus accounts, making the banks stronger than ever before, and strength has been the pride of all of them for years.

One finds the Brooklyn Savings bank, doing business in Danielson for more than a decade, with assets in excess of $5,000,000 and a surplus and profit account of $350,000 on this first day of 1926. The deposits of this bank have increased $200,000 during 1925. In that period this bank paid dividends of $195,039.39, and added $50,000 to its surplus account. The profit and loss account for the year is shown at $287,-560.

Incorporated in 1872, and for many years having its banking headquarters in Brooklyn, the Brooklyn Savings bank has grown and grown and grown until, today its strength and position ranks it with the very finest institutions of its rank in Connecticut.

The Windham County National bank, 103 years of service to its credit and fifth oldest bank in Connecticut, has had the greatest year in all its history, as more fully set forth elsewhere in this issue. Its earnings have been exceptionally gratifying and its administration up to the very high standard for which it long has been noted. Strong as it has been in the past, it has greater strength and more dollar for dollar security entering 1926, than ever before.

The junior bank of Danielson, the Danielson Trust company, established in 1914, has gone along to new and enlarged successes during the past year and has grown to the point where operations are being undertaken as 1926 opens to materially enlarge its banking rooms, to embrace practically the entire street level floor of the bank's building.

The bank's end of the year statement shows assets in excess of $2,000,-000 of which more than a $1,000,000 is in its savings department, established a little more than three years ago. This week the directors of the bank declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent, and a special dividend of 1 per cent, to its stockholders.

Much of the growth of Danielson's banking institutions is attributed to the keenness with which they seek business. They use more publicity through the press, the mails and special window displays than any other group of banks in Eastern Connecticut, and they make it pay returns. The money in Danielson's banks is representative of practically every community in Eastern Connecticut. Evidence of the special things Danielson's banks do to be of service to their patrons is the Christmas club organizations they maintain, nearly $120,000 being paid out early in December of 1925.

Now firmly entrenched in strong positions, Danielson bankers are looking forward to the making during the next few years of greater gains than ever before. They have earned and deserved the confidence of the public. They have made Danielson a greater banking center than it was expected to be for many years to come. This is a distinct advantage as a whole and the fact is not overlooked in the borough.

Made Remarkable Record in Putnam Banking

The recent announcement in The Bulletin, of the declaration of a regular 5 1-2 per cent. dividend, and a special one of 1-2 per cent., to stockholders of The Cargill Trust Company of Putnam, calls to mind that this trust company, one of Connecticut's youngest, if not the youngest, banking institutions, has made remarkable progress since it was organized in November, 1924.

The incorporators, citizens of Putnam and surrounding towns, felt that the community was in need of a bank supervised by the state, through Bank Commissioner Byrne's well organized department, and primarily to give efficient and safe banking service to a community crushed by one bank failure, and badly hand capped by uncertain industrial conditions. A charter was obtained, and a representative group of directors chosen, numbering men successful in every line of business endeavor,—banking, dry goods, drugs, law, manufacturing, furniture, real estate, insurance, wholesaling, public service, farming. This board has worked earnestly and harmoniously together, and has been rewarded in seeing the public responde to their efforts —more than 2,200 accounts on the books at present.

Realizing early that Putnam must have new industries to rehabilitate the city, the bank has been in constant touch with the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, and has already had the satisfaction of securing one good industry for Putnam with others interested. Incidentally Putnam is ideally situated for manufacturing with splendid railroad facilities, nearness to large cities where raw materials may be obtained, beautiful climate, a well equipped power company—a unite in the recently organized Connecticut Iectric Service company—a good supply of trained mill operatives, a superior type of dwelling, and an active and progressive chamber of commerce.

The Cargill Trust company has every department of modern banking, checking, savings, Christmas and vacation clubs, safe deposit boxes, trust department—for handling estates, executing wills, etc. Through well-informed directors, it is able to give sound advice on investments, execute promptly orders on the stock market, assist in planning business operations, even supervising the erection of dwellings and business blocks.

The officials of the bank are especially well pleased with the large number of depositors enrolled in its 1926 Christmas club—more than three times as many so far as the entire 1925 club. This form of systematic saving is becoming increasingly popular both with the general public and the merchants who are especially helped at Christmas-time by the cash-sales made possible by the issuing of Christmas club checks.

Much assistance has been given worthy applicants in erecting homes, financing farm produce, temporary financing of raw material purchases by manufacturing plants. No person, worthy of credit, whether a customer or not, is refused. The clerical force of the bank is courteous, obliging and prompt in attendance on the bank's patrons.

The bank has paid 4 1-2 per cent. from the start on savings deposits, 4 per cent. to Christmas clubs, 5 1-2 per cent. for the year 1925 to its stockholders,—an unusual dividend for any bank to be able to pay in its first year's existence—paid off its entire organization expenses, and shows an earned profit and loss account of more than $10,000.

Putnam is well on the road to rapid recovery from its ills, and is destined to become the banking and trading center for a large part of Windham county, and The Cargill Trust Company is well equipped to share in this prosperity, and to assist in making the city more prosperous.

WINDHAM COUNTY NATIONAL BANK

WINDHAM COUNTY NAT'L BANK IN DANIELSON ROUNDS OUT 103 YEARS

Few towns or cities in Connecticut (or any other state) can boast of an institution with a record dating back over one hundred years, yet located in the borough of Danielson, right within our midst, is an institution which received its original charter from the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut in May, 1822, and was known as the Windham County Bank. Continuing as a state bank until 1865, its officers were quick to perceive the benefits to be derived from a national charter, provision for which was made by the Congress of the United States in that year by passing "The National Bank Act." Converting into a national bank in 1865 it has since been known as The Windham County National bank.

Of all the financial institutions in Connecticut which were doing business when the Windham County bank began its career, only four continue to the present day, the Windham County being counted as the fifth oldest bank in Connecticut.

That the institution would be successful from its inception was a foregone conclusion, but if the original directors could but gather in the directors' room today to consider the regular routine of business, they would awake to the realization that the foundation which they made for the institution in 1822 was now carrying a financial structure which ranks as one of the very best in the state of Connecticut.

The year now drawing to a close has been the best which the bank has experienced in its 103 years of business.

New records have been made in every one of its various departments, and at times its total assets has been pressing very close to the four million dollar mark. The outstanding feature of the year's business, however, has been the remarkable growth in the bank's surplus. This is intensely interesting to every one, for it is not only a fine compliment to its officers and directors, but it insures to the public greater dollar protection for their interests than has heretofore been given by any commercial bank in Danielson.

Great credit is due its present officers and directors, for though they may be few in numbers, measured by the result attained, there is the demonstration that their quality and business judgment is of the very highest.

Looking forward to the coming year and future years, it is self evident that the institution will continue to be a dominant factor in the upbuilding of Eastern Connecticut's industrial and financial business, and because of its able management and years of successful operations, will command the highest regard of all of Connecticut's citizens, as well as those of adjoining states.

HENNESSEY STARS IN OTHER SPORTS AS WELL AS TENNIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 31 (AP)—Johnny Hennessey, one of the few ranking American tennis players who stars in other fields of athletics, has laid aside his racquet for a basketball. He will play again this season with an amateur team of Indianapolis.

Hennessey plays football and baseball with the same facility which makes him oustanding in tennis and basketball. He has to earn his own way and has had little coaching at any sport.

Unlike most tennis stars Hennessey plays but little during the winter. Occasionally he works out on the cement indoor court in Indianapolis, but only to keep in condition.

The international program of G. Zinovieff, president of the communist international, was placed before the communist party congress in Moscow, but failed to gain unanimous approval.

County Farm Bureau Did Helpful Work

the boys, who are of high school age, is along other lines because of the proximity of the city.

Rural Engineering.

The work in rural engineering is somewhat limited because of an immediate generally high cost. It requires considerable money to drain and blasting is rather expensive, so demonstrations along this line are few. Putting water in the farm buildings is expensive, even done at the lowest cost, but it is the best investment that the farmer can make. However, there have been two tile drainage systems installed and one by blasting a ditch which changed the course of a stream and drained a swamp. Two farmers installed water systems on the advice of the agricultural engineer. There were about 10 calls for blue prints for poultry houses, septic tanks, barns, etc.

Agricultural Economics.

The one outstanding result of this project is the Young Farmers' club of Lebanon. This club was organized last January with eighteen members between the ages of sixteen and thirty. The members are actively engaged in farming for themselves or for their fathers. They meet once a month and discuss their problems with the farm management specialist.

During August one day was spent on a field tour to Middlesex county where a similar club has been organized. Visits were made to some of the outstanding farms of this club. As a result of the Lebanon Young Farmers' club several of the members have already made improvement in their farm practices. There is room for several more of such clubs because they get the farm management idea over in an early and interesting way.

Fifty farm account books were distributed this year, thirty-four of them being kept to completion.

Eleven men changed their farm practices due to keeping farm account books and summarizing them. In all instances they increased their business which was dairying, by adding crops or caring for the fruit trees which they might have had.

Marketing.

As has been stated, pools for fertilizer, lime, seed potatoes, small seed and insecticides were organized. The amount was as follows:

Fertilizer	500 tons	saving $4,000
Lime pool	1000 tons	saving 1,000
Insecticide	pool $2000	saving 350
Total saving		$5,350

The saving was not as great this year as it has been formerly for various reasons. Savings on potato and small seeds cannot be figured accurately because it is quality which is sought rather than price. One horse sale was held which was not a great success. This probably will not be repeated next year.

Summary.

The agricultural work carried on by the New London County Farm Bureau during 1925 has been quite varied.

The dairy and crop work as carried on in the programme have been closely allied. One has depended upon the other. The large problem here as elsewhere in Connecticut is to lower the cost of milk production. There are two equally important facts in doing this which must be considered. One is better cows by using sires of known high producing ancestry and the other is raising more high protein roughages. This has been carried out in our programme by increasing the numbers of pure bred dairy sires and increasing the acreage of clover and alfalfa.

The poultry programme has been limited to encouraging the use of better and healthier stocks and to controlling diseases by better range and housing.

Thirty-two nitrating demonstrations were started and twelve pruning demonstrations held. Ten sight orchard management demonstrations were carried on this year from 1924.

There were two asparagus demonstrations as part of the vegetable programme. Considerable time was spent in giving personal aid for the controlling of disease and insects.

The chief item in the farm management work was the organization of the Lebanon Young Farmers' club.

Fertilizer and seed pools were organized which saved a total of $5,350 to farmers in New London county.

SHOWED BUSY BUILDING YEAR IN 1925 IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT

But Total of $4,841,145 Was Slightly Less Than a Year Ago —New London County Had $3,378,195 and Windham County $1,462,970—Building Expenditures in Norwich and New London Were Less Than in 1924—Willimantic Doubled Figures of Preceding Year.

Building work in Eastern Connecticut for 1925 could not reach the record total which was set in 1924 for New London and Windham counties, when the high mark of $4,965,753 was reached. In 1925 the building total for the two counties was $4,841,145.

In New London county the building total for 1925 was $3,378,195, which was slightly smaller than the figure of $3,585,753 for 1924. Both of the cities, Norwich and New London, showed less building expenditures in 1925 than in 1924, but outside the cities, the building work represented an expenditure of $750,000, as against the preceding years's figure of $450,000.

Building work in Windham county exceeded the figures of 1924, when the total was $1,380,000. In the past year it was $1,462,970. In Putnam the 1925 total was approximately $800,000, which compared with $750,000 for 1924, while in Willimantic the 1925 total showed $637,970, about double the figure of a year ago. In other parts of Windham county the building work for 1925 was represented by $325,000, which was a gain over the 1924 total of $300,000.

Three Large Contracts In Norwich Building

Norwich building figures in 1925 did not reach the record mark of $1,-439,490, which was made for 1924, but Fire Marshall Howard L. Stanton issued more building permits in the city than ever before. The total approximate expenditures for new construction, repairs and alterations in the town and city were $1,873,875.

Fire Marshall Stanton issued 352 building permits in the city which was 74 more than the year before, while Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook, to whom has fallen the duty, since July 1, of issuing building permits in the town, has given out 56 in that time for all classes of work, including 15 new dwellings, garages, minor construction and repairs. New residences erected in the city number 72 and in the town limits, outside the city, about 50. It is reported that there is a surplus of residence propery at the present time so that a decrease in this type of building is to be expected in the year to come. There were 125 new garages built in the city during the year.

Three Large Contracts

The three large items in the Norwich building statistics for the year were a new hospital ward at the Norwich state hospital, costing $255,-000, the new St. Joseph's parochial school to cost about $150,000, and the new building being erected by the United Workers for the Sheltering Arms, a home for the aged, which is to cost approximately $120,000, without furnishing.

Occupied New Buildings At Norwich State Hospital

During the year just closing, construction work has been started at the Norwich state hospital upon a new ward, known as South H ward, for which the appropriation by the legislature is $255,000. This will be for the treatment of acute male patients and will have capacity for 125 patients. The building is about half finished at present.

[illegible] hospital [illegible] the structure for which [illegible] of February awarding. The building will include a modern hotel of 68 sleeping rooms and bath, large lobby, dining room and coffee room and four stores on the ground floor.

The building of dwellings, for the most part attractive one tenement bungalows, was carried on during the year to the amount of $139,500. In October alone dwelling permits to the value of $28,500 were issued. August was the low month with one permit for $2,000.

Forty-four garages representing 152 stalls and an expenditure of $30,650 were built during the year. One hundred stalls in 39 garages were erected in 1924.

All of the garages are for private use and serve to further house Willimantic's population of automobiles which have now increased to considerably over 2,000.

Additions and alterations amount to $176,230, including a $75,000 addition to the Rossi Velvet company plant, a $37,000 addition to the local exchange building of the Southern New England Telephone company building, a $30,-000 alteration and repair permit to the Windham National bank building, gutted by fire recently, and a $20,-000 alteration and repair permit to the First Congregational church. Small mercantile shops and sheds to the value of $4,600 made up the remainder of the total.

Real Estate Transactions

Real estate transactions to the value of $624,500 were conducted during 1925 in the Town of Windham and recorded at the office of Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. Since 1919 when the transfers amounted to over $1,000,000 the exchange of property has steadily decreased in monetary valuation. In 1923 the amount was $980,000 which dropped to $770,000 in 1924. In 1921 the amount was nearly one million. 1922 figured as the odd year with an estimate of $700,000.

Among the more important transactions made during the past year was the sale of the Ada S. Young property on Main street to the Community Hotel Corporation of Willimantic. The property included the old Young Hotel which was torn down to make way for the modern hostelry. Another transaction which involved a considerable amount was the sale of property on Main street, just west of the Elmer Auto company by George S. Elliott to John P. Nellson of Hartford.

Notable residences which exchanged hands were the Howie home sold by Adele B. Howie to Lyndon E. Little; the Remington home purchased by Adele B. Howie from Sarah G. Remington and the Simonds residence sold by Ella S. Simonds to Luke P. and Ovida Allain.

Many building lots and smaller residences figured prominently in the transactions for the year. The majority of the lots were sold to local people who have or plan to build modern outskirts of the city. Land development has taken a spurt in the past few years and new residential sections are rapidly springing up.

In October the electors of the town of Windham voted in favor of the erection of a new school house at an approximate cost of $300,000 to replace the old Windham street school which was destroyed by fire. The building will be started early in the spring and the permit for its erection will be figured in the 1926 estimate.

Uncas-On-Thames To Have Three New Buildings

In the year just opening three long needed building additions are to be erected at Uncas-on-Thames, work on which, it is expected, can be started about the first of March.

Through an appropriation made by the legislature of $150,000 for the buildings and equipment, the sanatorium will have added to it an infirmary for women, a staff house for men, and a combined administration, x-ray and laboratory building. The staff house, which will furnish accomodations for 32 men, will be located on the Morgan property, which has been bought during the past year, as will also the administration building. The new infirmary for women will be of 60-bed capacity, and the whole building programme will be a material addition to the institution which is so ably administered by Dr. Hugh B. Campbell and his corps of assistants.

Storrs is to Have New Men's Dormitory

Construction will be under way in 1926 at Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs upon a new men's dormitory for which the funds have been provided by an appropriation of $168,-000 by the legislature. The contract for the erection of the dormitory has been let for $146,437, the lowest among the ten bidders, with the provision that it shall be finished by Sept. 15, 1926.

The amount of the appropriation will leave a surplus over actual building costs which will be applied for dormitory furnishings, architects' fees, water and sewage connections and other incidentals.

Construction will be of Connecticut Harvard brick throughout, with accomodations for 84 students. The new dormitory will greatly relieve the present congestion in the acommodations for men students at Storrs. According to present plans the favored location of the dormitory is south of the dining hall and west of Koons hall, forming a quadrangle.

A petition from the alumni association has been presented to the board of trustees to name the new dormitory for the late William Henry Hall of South Willington, a former trustee of the college.

Year Sets New Record In Willimantic Building

Despite general and local industrial depressions during 1925 Willimantic forged ahead in growth and the year 1925 closed with all known records of building operations smashed, a total of 120 building permits representing an investment of $637,970, having been issued by Fire Chief and Building Inspector Henry J. Kelley. The 1925 record exceeds the previous high water mark, 1923 estimates, by $37,970 and completely overshadows the 1924 amount of $330,000. There is, however, a wane in the number of permits issued and the year 1923 would have remained in the lead but for the building of the Elks home and a community hotel and the additions to several important buildings. These heavy expenditures brough up the total value. The number of permits of 120 is compared to 125 in 1924 and 146 in 1922. Comparing this number with the building statistics of previous years it is found that it is about three times greater than in 1920, over five greater than in 1919 and only 26 less than in the booming year of 1923. Willimantic, therefore, is enjoying a healthy growth which is remarkable when note is taken of its industrial troubles during the year.

The city now points with pride to the new Capitol theater which is scheduled to open about January 15. The permit for the erection of this theater was issued in 1923. It is one of the finest buildings of its kind in eastern Connecticut. The theater proper will seat about 1200 and is modern in every detail. There are four store and the lobby on the ground floor, office suites on the second and a hall on the third floor.

The Elks home which is being erected in Elks park on Pleasant street by Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. E., at an approximate cost of $87,000, not including furnishings and grading, is of colored limestone material built in the old English style with gabled roof. It is planned to open the home next June and in its present state of partial completion it gives promise of being one of the most beautiful homes in ew England.

The permit for the Community hotel calls for an expenditure of $200,-000. The concrete foundation for this building is now completed and with the arrival of shipments of brick and [illegible] work will start im-

NEW BUILDING FOR SHELTERING ARMS, NORWICH

Jewett City Mills Have Built Additions

Three of the mills in Jewett City have added extensive buildings to their plants during 1925. The Aspinook bleachery has a large brick building, the Ninigret Co., a new weave shed, and the Textile Novelty Co. a new 27 by 54 brick building for copper roller room and box storage. They have also built a 40 by 60 garage and replaced their boilers and all roofing.

Most of the building has been done in the north part of the borough. There are sixteen families in new houses on Russel street, three new houses on East Main street and several more on Brown avenue, Phillips and Belvedere. A double house on School street, two stores and tenements on Ashland street, and a house on Slater avenue, are other new buildings. The railroad yard has a granolithic roadway its entire length and another extensive sidewalk was laid on Main street.

New London Building Had Smaller Year

According to a summary of building operations in New London as shown by the permits issued through the office of Building Inspector Benjamin R. Linicus, the year 1925 fell slightly below 1924 in expenditures but exceeded it in number of permits issued. In 1925 there were 475 permits with an approximate valuation of $1,-255,320, as against 446 permits with a valuation of $1,305,262 in 1924.

There continued to be important building projects in industrial and commercial buildings for which the permits were 69 at a valuation of $328,-475, as compared with 56 permits and $625,127 in value in 1924. The erection of dwellings of a fine class was carried on in a substantial way the permits numbering 81, which which was the same as the year before, but the value was $633,700, which exceeded the figure of $500,850 in the preceding year. There were permits for 195 garages, which was ten more than the year before and the value was about double, being $165,180 in 1925 and $78,600 in 1924. Alterations and additions numbered 130 at the amount of $127,965, both figures exceeding the preceding year, when the permits numbered 124 and the value was $100,685.

Summary

The following summary shows the record for the year:

	Permits	Amount
Industrial and commercial	69	$328,475
Dwellings	81	633,700
Garages	195	165,180
Additions and alterations	130	127,965

Danielson Kept Busy In Building Lines

Nothing very startling in the way of building operations was undertaken in Killingly in 1925. No large construction enterprises were undertaken. Yet a review shows that men in the building trades were as busy as they could be and that the year was as profitable to them as any recent one that has preceded it.

This activity on the part of the artisans is accounted for by the fact that numbers of dwellings were erected in Danielson in 1924. Broad street, Maple street, Westfield avenue, Franklin street, Dyer street and various other streets were scenes of such building activity.

It would appear as though many who had been waiting to build homes for years, hoping that construction costs would be lower, changed their minds about the matter and went ahead with their plans. There has been a housing shortage in Danielson for the past decade, and although enough houses to make a sizeable village has been erected during that period the supply never seemed to equal the demand. The result, of course, has been higher rentals.

While this town undertook no outstanding building operation during 1925, it authorized one that will be undertaken during 1926. At the annual town meeting in October Killingly voted to expend, not in excess of $150,000, for construction of additions to Killingly High school. It had been conclusively shown that the town was in need of greater high school facilities.

Plans for the additions were submitted during December to the state board of education, for any suggestion for betterment of them. Bids will be asked during January for the work to be done and it is anticipated, the contract for the work will probably be let in February or March. Construction will be undertaken early in the spring and it is hoped to have the enlarged structure ready for occupancy when the next school year opens in September. The plans provide not only for the construction of additions, but also for a general re-arrangement of the interior of the present high school structure. The town has voted to issue bonds to cover the construction cost.

Plans are also in the hands of St. James' parish for the erection of a $200,000 school of brick construction and with 18 class rooms. Funds for this building have been accumulating for several years and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that the building will be undertaken in 1926, as the new building is urgently needed to relieve congestion in the present school building.

St. Alban's parish built a parish house on its property on Broad street during 1925, and the church members are delighted with its comfortable appointments and the opportunities it presents for interesting, profitable and otherwise beneficial social gatherings.

NORWICH POST OFFICE WILL BE ADVANCED TO NEXT HIGHER GRADE

Receipts for 1925 Were Over $120,000—Gain of 7 Per Cent. in the Year—Incoming C. O. D. Business Has About Doubled—Increases in Money Order and Registry Business—Improvements Made to Grounds and Building.

The Norwich post office has made a record for work and receipts during the calendar year 1925. With the receipts at over $120,000 the office will be advanced into the next higher grade, commencing with the new fiscal year July 1926.

The receipts for the year increased over $7,000 compared with 1924, or a gain of 7 per cent for the entire year. The last six months showed a 13 per cent. increase, while for the month of December it was 21 per cent., the first six months not coming up to the average, largely due to the changes in rates on certain classes of mail.

The incoming C. O. D. business has about doubled, which has justified the establishment of the C. O. D. station numbered 32022, where money orders for payment of C. O. D. parcels only are issued, and which numbered over 14,000 for the year. The work of making collections on these parcels has greatly increased the labors of the carriers, as very few patrons comply with the instructions issued by the department, that of having the exact amount ready when the carrier presents the C. O. D. parcel, many wishing to give checks instead of cash, which is contrary to the regulations, and can not be accepted by the delivering carrier.

Many improvements to the grounds and building have been made by the Treasury Department. Through the efforts of Postmaster Casper K. Bailey the money order room has been enlarged, and new furniture installed, making it more convenient for the employes, and facilitating the work in that room. The furniture in the work room has been rearranged, so that the distributing cases are at the east end, which gives light from two sides of the building thereby doing away with a large amount of artificial light. The stamp and the parcel post receiving windows, are now at the east end of the main lobby, which places them nearer the distributing tables. The parcel post room in the basement has been enlarged, making it more convenient to handle that class of matter. A new cement walk has been laid on the right of way leading to Cliff street. Another improvement that will be appreciated by many of the patrons, is an iron railing on the front steps leading to the main entrance, and there is to be installed a large writing desk, at the west end of the main lobby, convenient to the money order window.

The amount on deposit in the postal savings division is about the same as for the previous year, as the deposits nearly equal the withdrawals. The money order and registry business show an increase.

REVERSIBLE CLOAK SERVES FOR TRAM, BUS AND OPERA

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP)—The reversible cloak idea imported here from the Riviera has been taken up by the "best people" who cannot afford automobiles.

The London reversible wrap is very gay on one side, suitable for the theater and the ball room, and the other anything but flashy. The dull side is worn in the underground, the buses and trams. The scheme became very popular because so many society women use this means of travel. It enables them to do a quick turn change just before arriving at their destination.

Zion Lace on French Frocks

PARIS, Dec. 31 (AP)—Zion City laces for Paris gowns which Zion City would be far from approving, are the first American-made laces ever to be imported by a dress-maker here. Many of the dresses trimmed with the product of the little Illinois town will go back near home again. A big Chicago store has bought half of them.

Junior Clubs

At one time during the year there were organized clubs in Wequetequock, Jewett City, (2), Voluntown, North Plain, Gales Ferry, Goshen, Pawcatuck and Hanover, making nine in all. Three cooking clubs, four clothing clubs, one room furnishing club and one cooking and sewing club combined. These clubs had an enrollment of 83 girls. Some of the clubs were dropped for one reason or another. The remaining clubs held seventy-five meetings with an attendance of 545. Ten club members and one leader attended the Junior Club Round-Up in Hartford in April and two girls from the county, Sophia Gorski and Ruth Henson, each told some of the things her club had accomplished at the banquet given the first evening. Twenty-one girls from the county attended Junior Short Course at Storrs this year. Many of the girls earned their expenses. The Gales Ferry Cooking club earned their expenses by having a food sale and giving an operetta. Four girls from the club were sent. Two boys in the Goshen Hill club earned part of their expenses by re-seating chairs.

The North Plain clothing club has been very regular in holding meetings and the girls have done splendid work. They have reorganized for the second year's program.

Community Activities

Basketry and the work done on fairs this fall is reported under community activities.

For the past two years requests had been coming in for demonstrations of reed work. So finally it was decided to give it as a year's project and then discontinue it. It was not possible to meet more than thirteen groups and keep up other projects planned so it will be necessary to run this project over into another year to cover all groups that have applied for the work.

Emphasis has been put on useful baskets and a great many such have been made. The groups were met in Poquonock Bridge, Griswold, Bozrah, Head Church District in Stonington, Franklin, Hamburg, Goshen, Lebanon street, Norwich Town, Ledyard, Colchester, Preston City and North Stonington. 40 meetings were held, 543 attendance, 928 articles made in class, 449 articles reported since classwork.

This project has developed more local leadership than any other, as many women are teaching groups how to make baskets in their own as well as other communities. There has been a larger number of younger women attending these classes and usually a larger attendance at meetings.

Fairs

Farm bureau projects were exhibited at five fairs this fall. A good deal of this work was done entirely by local groups who put on splendid exhibits.

Through the year groups were asked if they would exhibit some of their work at the county fair and four groups prepared to do so. The leaders in Poquetanuck, Griswold, Waterford and Bozrah arranged with their groups for the exhibits. It was also arranged that two ladies from each group attend the fair each day to demonstrate the project they were exhibiting. This was done and throughout each day of the three days, two or more demonstrations were going on at one time in the farm bureau tent.

In addition to these exhibits there was an exhibit "Mrs. Everwell and Mrs. Neverwell's Medicine Chest," contrasting the fruits and vegetables and patent medicines. An exhibit of convenient kitchen utensils was also set up. The work at the county fair was more successful this year than some years because the local women were showing their own work and because of the action created by the demonstrations.

Floriculture

A talk and demonstration were given before a group in North Plain by H. H. Patch, horticultural specialist Connecticut Agricultural College, on house plants and their care.

Home Grounds

There are several requests in for more assistance in planning the planting about rural homes. These have not been attended to this year as the landscape specialist has not been available. It is expected that these will be taken care of early in 1926.

The program reported was made possible and more successful through the assistance given by the following women:

Mrs. J. A. Thomas, Goshen; Mrs. George A Kahn, Franklin; Miss Emily Stark, North Plain; Mrs. C. B. Day Hadlyme; Mrs. Wilson Irvine, Hamburg; Mrs. Theo. Tompkins, Old Lyme; Mrs. H. H. Leland, Waterford; Mrs C. F. Radway, Columbia; Mrs. James Lathrop, Montville; Mrs. A. H. Beebe, Leffingwell; Mrs. Harry Morgan, Cider Hill; Mrs. Wm. Loftus, Cider Hill; Mrs. A. B. Brown, Cider Hill; Mrs. Ellsworth Gray, North Stonington; Mrs. J. Silvers, Stonington Village; Mrs. E. M. Woods, Stonington; Mrs. E. R. Barber, Bozrah; Mrs. Porter Hoxie, Pawcatuck; Mrs. Corinne Payne, Mystic; Mrs George Metcalf, Poquonoc Bridge; Mrs. Henry Benker, Occum; Mrs. Wm. Weaver, Norwichtown; Mrs. W. Sisson, Jr., North Plain; Mrs. Wm. Pultz, Lebanon street.

COLD-FILLED ELEPHANT TUSK IS FOUND IN MINING CLAIMS

SEATTLE, Dec. 31 (AP)—An authentic fossil tusk of the wooly elephant of the glacial or postglacial period, with gold filling like a modern tooth, has been presented to the museum of the University of Washington by Edward Squires, who discovered it in a mining claim on Dominion Creek, forty miles from Dawson, Yukon territory.

AIRLIE MILLS OWNERSHIP BY ANGUS PARK HAS BROUGHT RENAISSANCE TO HANOVER SINCE 1899

Millionaire Mill Owner Has Practically Rebuilt Village Along Model Lines—Shares Business Prosperity With Community—Gives Village Water Supply, Fire Protection, Street Improvements and Modern Dwelling Houses for Employes—Erects Fine Community House Adjoining Church—New Model and Modern Mill Property Has Occupied Since 1923—Officer in Norwich and Danielson Banks and Woolen Mills at Dayville and East Glastonbury.

Since 1899 no name has meant more in the history of the pretty little village of Hanover in the town of Sprague than that of Angus Park who established the Airlie mills there at that time. Along with the substantial business success that has come to Mr. Park in the course of years, through the exercise of thrift, scrupulous business integrity, and intimate knowledge of the woolen business in every detail, has run a golden cord of beneficence that has found expression wherever his hand has touched the community life, so that its comfortable modern homes, its model mill property, its well kept village street, all bespeak the guiding influence and the active participation of the mill owner in the last 26 years.

When Angus Park was born 65 years ago in the busy little manufacturing city of Galashiels, near Edinburgh, Scotland, Col. Ethan Allen, then 43, was engaged in the woolen mill business in Hanover with his brother, Samuel C. M. Allen, under the firm name of Allen & Bro. The mill

Old Allen Woolen Mill

Col. Allen, who gained his title from his command in the Third Connecticut National Guards, was a lineal descendant of Samuel Allen who settled at an early day at Hanover, where he built a sawmill. Pratt Allen, a grandson of Samuel, built the original woolen mill at Hanover and was in business there with his son, Ebenezer in 1813, but this mill was destroyed by fire in 1834 and was rebuilt by Ebenezer. Again fire visited the plant and destroyed the mill in 1862. It was rebuilt by Col. Ethan Allen, son of Ebenezer, who had been with his father in the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods ever since he was eight years old, and until the death of his father. Subsequently Col. Allen continued the business with his brother, Elisha M., until 1860 under the firm name of E. & E. M. Allen, then till 1877 with his brother Samuel C. M., under the name of Allen & Bro. Upon the death of Samuel in 1877, Col. Allen took in his original partner and brother, Samuel C. M., continuing the firm name of Allen & Bro.

It is related of Col. Ethan Allen that when he built the new mill in 1862 to replace the one that had burned, he had an elevator installed, said to be the first of its kind in this part of the state. Against the advice of friends, who were skeptical of the new contrivance, Col. Allen insisted that he should have the first ride on the new elevator. It was supposed to have some sort of stops that would prevent accidents in case the elevator fell. All went well until the elevator had nearly reached the top of the shaft, when something happened to the rope, the elevator crashed to the bottom, and Col. Allen was so terribly injured that he never walked again except with crutches, or got about in a wheel-chair.

WILLIAM G. PARK

He continued the active direction of the business until about 1895, when the vicissitudes of business life brought about the failure of the company, and the mill stood idle for about four years.

Angus Park Takes Allen Mill

To the inauguration of a new era in Hanover came Angus Park in the fall of 1899, taking a lease from the Allen family of the mill property and its contents. This original lease dated Aug. 5, 1899 was one of the memories placed under the cornerstone of the new brick erected in 1922 by Mr. Park, which now constitutes the main mill building.

Mr. Park brought to his new enterprise a rich background of practical experience. His native city of Galashiels, a community of about the size of Norwich, had included a number of woolen mills among its manufacturing plants.

The Col. Allen, who went into his [illegible] Park, he was a boy of [illegible] in the [illegible] of ten. In 1872, when he was 12, he came to Canada where his residence continued for 20 years and he continued to be employed in woolen mills.

From Canada he came to Niantic in 1894, where with his uncle and brother the Flanders Manufacturing Co., was organized and where Mr. Park stayed for five years until his ambition led him to branch out for himself and he took the lease of the Allen mill property at Hanover. In admiring remembrance of Wallace, the great Scottish chieftain, he named his new enterprise the Airlie mills, after the ancestral home of the famous Scottish leader.

Increased Water Power

At that time the mill building was a three story frame structure) with a tower, and a small auxiliary building for carding at a short distance farther down the stream. There was a 30 foot dam, but the head derived was only 14 feet, while the canal was crooked and the gates were at the dam so that the water could not be shut off at the mill without flooding the canal. Mr. Park at once set about improving the water power. A new penstock was put in to the head of the dam, which gave the wheel the entire head of 30 feet and the gates were at the mill building where they could be operated without going to the dam.

Parts of the old machinery in the mill were renewed, changes and readjustments were made along efficiency lines, and the mill turned to the manufacture of woolens for ladies' wear, which a few years later was changed to men's wear, continuing in that line to the present time. In the mill that had stood idle for four or five years began the hum of industry that has been continuous ever since and has brought to Hanover the quiet and contentment of steady employment under pleasant living and working conditions and under a guidance whose aim has been to make possible all these things that are most desirable in life. After a year and a half under the lease Mr. Park bought the mill property, which included the water rights and the village site.

Erected New Mill Building

In 1922 the company erected a completely new modern mill building at an approximate cost of $300,000, which is a model of its kind. It is of fireproof construction, brick, steel and concrete throughout, three stories in height, 226 feet x62, with sawtooth roof and ornamental tapestry brick front. The first floor is used for carding and picking, the second floor for mule spinning and the third floor for warping and weaving, all being admirably lighted and providing model health conditions for the workers. A concrete tunnel connects the new new building to the old, there are complete heating and automatic sprinkler system, toilets on either side of the stair tower on each floor, and an elevator. The old Allen mill building is now used only for dyeing and finishing and the power house.

First Cashiko Cards in America

The cornerstone of the new building was laid Dec. 14, 1921, by Mr. Park, the building being completed in 1922 and occupied in 1923. New modern machinery was installed, consisting of Cashiko cards with tape condensers, Johnson & Bassett mules and Crompton & Knowles looms. The power is by electricity through a generator connected to the water wheel, the wheel developing 120 horsepower. The looms in use are the latest heavy worsted looms, with individual motors, but a feature of the new machinery equipment are the Cashiko cards, which originated in Belgium. The Airlie mills have the first cards of this kind built in America, and manufacturers from all over the country are frequent visitors at the Airlie mills to see the looms in operation and inspect the other model appointments of the mill.

The new mill building and machinery have increased the capacity more than 100 per cent over the old days, the mill formerly operating with 7 cards and 27 looms, while the present working equipment is 6 cards and 48 looms. When the Airlie mills first began operations back in 1899, the first payroll was about $2,000 a month, but at the present time it is more than double that each week for the 140 hands employed, amounting to approximately $4,503 per week, and the production of the mill is from $18,000 to $20,000 weekly.

Enviable Reputation for Goods

The Airlie mills goods have a reputation for color and quality in the trade, which has been sustained with unvarying regularity through the years and Mr. Park has never been willing to sacrifice quality for quantity, insisting that the Airlie standard should be rigorously be maintained.

Mr. Park is president and treasurer of the company, his son, William G. Park, is vice president and assistant treasurer, and his niece, Miss Helen Eadie, is secretary.

Building a Model Village

Constantly through the years there has been taking shape the vision that Mr. Park long ago conceived of building a model village that should enable its residents to enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of larger communities, and in working out this idea he has had the whole hearted cooperation and assistance of his son, William G. Park. A progressive building programme has been carried out, representing the expenditure of many thousand dollars, to provide homes for his employes. The village has been practically rebuilt by the erection of between 50 and 60 dwelling houses, pleasantly located, commodious, and well appointed. In 1902 Mr. Park erected his own dwelling and about ten years ago his son's home was built, adjoining it.

A complete system of water works has been put in for the village, which provides water for the street hydrants for fire protection and for the modern usages in the residences. The water is supplied under pressure from an elevated tank into which it is pumped, first passing through a filter. Every family in the village owns an automobile so that the residents have easy means of communication with their neighbors in other communities.

A few years ago Mr. Park built a well arranged community house for the village, locating it on a lot next to the Congregational church of which he has been chairman of the board of trustees since it was incorporated. A recent improvement which he has carried out has been the building of a new concrete sidewalk along the village street.

The erection of the new mill building was animated as much by the same purpose to establish a property in which he could take satisfaction and be proud of as by the desire for increased capacity and efficiency in manufacturing. That this double aim has been realized is convincingly shown when the handsome brick mill building, with its modern machinery and all other appointments, is compared with the old frame structure which it supplants.

Other Business Interests

His business interests have extended to other lines outside of Hanover. He is president of the Bankers Trust Co. of Norwich, a trustee of the Norwich Savings society, and a director of the Danielson Trust Co.

He is a large owner in two other woolen mills, being president and general manager of the Assawaga Co., with a mill at Dayville, employing 275. His son-in-law, N. Lorne Gregg, is treasurer, and William G. Park is secretary and assistant treasurer of the company. Mr. Park is treasurer and general manager of the Angus Park Manufacturing Co., with a mill at East Glastonbury, where 200 hands are employed. His son-in-law, Frank G. Way, is president of the company and William G. Park is secretary and assistant treasurer.

Motor Coach Service Replaces Trolley Lines

The passing of one transportation era and the triumphant advancement of a new one was an outstanding feature of important developments in northeastern Connecticut during 1925.

On November 30, having served well for a little more than a quarter of a century, trolley transportation went into the discard in all the area between North Grosvenordale and Taftville, between Elmville and East Killingly and between Moosup and Central Village. No one who has given much consideration to the matter will venture to assert that trolley service ever will be resumed in the territory mentioned. The motor coach today dominates the situation and likely will continue to do so until some further development and advancement of transportation sends the coaches along the route to oblivion that the trolleys have followed in so many suburban territories.

All of northeastern Connecticut hailed the advent of the trolleys with delight many years ago. They were a great, almost, indeed, a luxurious convenience in their heyday. The development of the motor car began to spoil that picture more than a decade ago and in the past five years practically ruined it. The passing of the trolley age in northeastern Connecticut has been forecast for several years. The last month of 1925 brought it to a close.

In its place the territory mentioned now has a splendid motor coach service, comfortable, convenient and offering opportunities to go in about any direction over fine state highways at almost any reasonable hour of the day.

The Connecticut company has replaced its abandoned trolley lines between Taftville and Putnam with a motor coach service, furnishing hourly service in each direction. North and south, east and west motor coach lines have grown like mushrooms. The year just closed witnessed the establishment of a through coach service between Providence and Hartford via Danielson and Willimantic, the opening of a line between Webster and New London via Putnam, Danielson and Norwich. There are now motor coach lines between Danielson and Willimantic, Danielson and Providence. Other lines radiate out of Providence to Putnam and Springfield, to Moosup and to Norwich and New London. There are short local lines between Central Village and Almyville, between Putnam and Eastford and Putnam and Woodstock. The great adventure has brought keen competition a plethora of service and a perfect flood of applications for permits for more new lines.

In the local field is the New England Transportation company, closely allied, it is asserted, with the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. company. Here is a concern regarded as eventually likely to dominate the local motor coach field, insofar as competition from other than the Connecticut company is concerned.

The public has shown the greatest interest in the new development. It is not so much concerned with the investments, operating expenses and other costs entailed as with the delightful fact that it can get anywhere it wants to go quickly, comfortably, safely and at reasonable cost. A glorified stage coach age has dawned. It seems worthy of special mention.

BLACK PRINCE SAID TO HAUNT OLD HALL PLACE

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Black Prince of the House of Plantagenet, whose romantic life made him the most chivalrous figure of a chivalrous age, is said to haunt Hall Place, where once he wooed Joan, the fair maid of Kent.

Clad in his conventional black armor, the prince has appeared several times in late years, according to Lady Limerick and others now residing in the fourteenth century mansion. The noble lady believes the prince is giving warning of impending danger to England.

"The last time I saw the ghost," she said, "it was standing by the fireplace in the morning room, and when I entered with a friend, it glided away through the window into the garden. On two occasions, the ghost appeared at dusk.

'Sometimes there have been sounds of music as if very sweet old fashioned instruments were being played."

ACADEMY BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL TEAMS EXPERIENCE GOOD SEASONS

Baseball Team Captures Interscholastic League Crown—Only Team in State to Defeat Championship Bulkeley Nine—Coach Whitney Builds Powerful Football Machine With Green Material—Prospects for Brilliant Season in 1926 are Very Encouraging.

The year 1925 saw Norwich Free Academy's athletic star mount steadily toward the zenith after several years of complete invisibility. Once more the athletic power of the local high school made itself felt throughout eastern Connecticut in high school circles and rose to a height where another year will find the teams making strong bids for state honors.

The rise of the Academy in high school athletics is directly traceable to two persons, Earl E. Brigham, coach of the baseball team and Courtland D. Whitney, football coach. These men have taken a keen interest in the athletics at the Academy and have built up a system that if followed out will put the Academy at the head of high schools in Connecticut.

Baseball

Coach Brigham had no easy task in turning out a baseball team that would win the baseball title in the eastern Connecticut interscholastic league. He had to work with a team that was made up of much green material but his work with these players brought results. With a playing schedule of nineteen games the Academy team won 12 games and lost one resulted in a scoreless tie. One game that was halted in the seventh inning by rain. The Academy's deciding victory came in the season's ending with the championship Bulletin team when the Academy nine, after this powerful baseball machine of four year's building, 5 to 4. It was the only defeat that the Bulletin team suffered in the state during the season.

The Academy baseball team was built around its pitching staff. Lloyd Green and Jimmy Green, Jarvis proved to be the sensation of high school pitchers in the eastern part of the state and Green, although unexperienced, proved a veritable relief twirler. These two boys worked well in their turns in the box and many of their victories were due to their masterful pitching. Early in the season Phelon Lindsay broke his ankle in practice, leaving a gaping hole in the infield which was filled by Chmikoski in no enviable manner. Leo Carroll, at third, began playing his first year as a college man, showed brilliant form and the second base berth was shared by Capt. Art McGowan and Vincent Carbone. First base was covered by Gerry Davis, who was elected captain of the 1926 team. The catching department might have been stronger. Mish, a freshman candidate, sprained an ankle early in the season and this bothered him during the entire season. The burden of catching was shared by Jack Hinrichs and Mace Goldblatt. In the outfield was Hinrichs, Mc-

Gowan, Green, Jarvis, Eddie Brewer and Shorty Hamil. It was this last named player that broke up the Bulkeley defense and started the rally that beat the champions. Of these players McGowan, Carroll, Carlin, and Hinrichs are lost by graduation but the freshman class has brought in a number of players who have performed well in the playgrounds and twilight leagues in the city. The prospects of a championship team in the east are very bright and Coach Brigham has arranged a twenty-game schedule for the 1926 season. The Academy's record for 1925 follows.

Football

Perhaps Coach Whitney's accomplishment with the football team was even more pronounced than in any of the other sports at the school. Coach Whitney was faced with what seemed an almost impossible task, the molding of a football team from practically all green material. He had been left hardly any material around which to build a team; it was a case of building from the ground up. It was a sorry looking squad that turned out for the first practice session but Coach Whitney began with the fundamentals of football. He drilled and slaved with these boys many long hours until there was some semblance of coordination. Then came the first game of the season, a league game with Westerly. Westerly ran through the Academy team roughshod and won, 17 to 0.

As the season went on the team showed more and more improvement until, at the latter part of the season it was as nice a high school team as any in the state. When Bulkeley was met at New London, the team was in fine shape and ran wild through the Bulkeley aggregation in the first half. Then came one of the worst exhibitions of refereeing that has ever been witnessed in the eastern part of the state, and the Academy lost this game by a margin of one point. However this setback did not break the spirit of the team and they fought on until they were contenders for the eastern Connecticut title, which they missed only because of the poor start.

There were many outstanding stars on the squad. Three men were placed on the All-Eastern interscholastic league team, Eddie Brewer, Polsky and Schwartz. Brewer was also elected captain for 1926, and was awarded the cup for the best defensive player on the team. Schwartz showed remarkable improvement as the season wore on and his defensive work was one of the notable features of the late season play. Polsky played an aggressive guard game and his work attracted much attention. Norm Courbois was the first string quarterback alternating with Capt. Jimmy Williams. Courbois showed well in the backfield and his generalship and broken field running was good. The personnel of the team was as follows:

Ends, Marks, Sergent, McGlourgage and Waters; tackles, Kramer, Stefano Mosley and Gilbert; guards, Fidell, Polsky, Norman, Connell and Golomb; centers, Schwartz and Murphy; quarterbacks, Capt. Williams and Courbois; halfbacks, Tombari, Clarence Brewer, McGlone and Kahn; fullback, Eddie Brewer.

There was very little done in the line of track work, the team only engaging in one meet, a dual meet with Bulkeley, which was lost by one sprint.

Bulkeley Captured 1925 State Title In Baseball

The 1925 Bulkeley baseball nine will go down through the annals of Bulkeley athletics as the greatest ball nine ever turned out by the orange and black. The team of 1925 was of four years making, starting in the hands of Coach Milton Phillips and coming down to the present stage. Mr. Phillips began coaching the present team when most of this year's players were freshmen and with the addition of Gaetano and Montali to the present line-up it is the product of his coaching.

In 1924 Coach Aldrich took over the baseball nin after Coach Phillips moved to Mt. Vernon. Aldrich turned out a wonderful ball team but they had all come from the mouldings of Coach Phillips with the exception of one or two, and the same can be said of this year's team.

The Bulkeley baseball team has won the state's championship of Connecticut three years out of four, a feat never before accomplished by any other high school of the state.

No one can possibly call Bulkeley's schedule easy, since it included two games with Morris High of New York, two with N. F. A., games with New Haven Hillhouse, Hartford Public High school, Bridgeport high, Crosby high of Waterbury, Collegiate Prep, and many other teams almost as good Out of fifteen games, Bulkeley lost but one.

The only games in the entire schedule which were at all close were with New Haven Hillhouse, Collegiate Prep, and N. F. A. but these were thrillers enough to suit anyone. The game with Collegiate Prep on May 19 was not won until the last Prep player was out in the ninth. Prep had managed almost to tie the score in the ninth 1t was 7-to-6 and had two men on bases, the tying and winning runs, when the third man was forced out on the infield ball to Gaetano.

The New Haven Hillhouse on May 15 was even more tense. Bulkeley had got three runs early in the game but had been unable to hit later in the game. During the first half of the ninth, Hillhouse squeezed over two runs, due largely to Daniels's wabbling, and had three men on bases with two out. Tillie redeemed himself by striking the last man out.

The strain of this game may have had its effect on Bulkeley, for on the next day, N. F. A. gave them the only defeat of the season, 8-to-6. This defeat seems to have been due to over confidence on Bulkeley's part. A short left field, and superior strategy on the part of the Norwich coach. Owing to the fact that earlier in the season Norwich had been overwhelmed by a 16 to 2 score, N. F. A. made no claim for the championship, content at having beaten the champions.

The season included a successful trip to New York, where the team was entertained royally by the New York Norwich Association.

On Memorial day, Bulkeley defeated Crosby high 10 to 2, before a crowd of 5,000 people at the Sub. Base.

The total scores were:

Bulkeley	126
Opponents	36

The season was successful financially, due to the careful management of Manager Martin Harris.

The team of 1925 consisted of the following players:

Edward Mansfield pranced around the first bag.

Joseph P. Gaetano played the short field.

Joseph Parisi alternated with Capt. Daniels in right field. Joe also has pitched Bulkeley to more victories than defeats.

Ed. Collins was Sheflot's stablemate in catching department.

Tim. Falvey also alternated with Daniels and Parisi in right field.

Riverview Club Has Good Baseball Season

The leading semi-professional team in the eastern part of the state during 1925 was the Riverview club of the Norwich State Hospital and under the managership of William Donovan had a very successful season. The season's record shows that the club participated in 29 games winning 17, losing 11 and one resulted in a tie score. The feature series of the season was with the club's old and bitter rivals, the Submarine Base nine. In this series Riverview came out with flying colors winning the first game 3 to 2 after a hard struggle. The Sub Base captured the second game 5 to 4 after another thrilling battle but the third game was easily won by the Riverview club 6 to 2 and the final game was a walk-away for the Riverview boys who won 11 to 2.

Another series was with the J. B. Martin team of Taftville, the Velvet-men springing a surprise in the first game and winning easily 13 to 5. The second game went to Riverview 19 to 4. Moosup took two hard fought games at the close of the season by close scores. Harry Mills and Mondi Normandin, were the outstanding stars of the season, Mills hitting consistently and many of the victories were due to his timely hits Normandin played a beautiful defensive game on the infield and worked well with Joe Hamill at second. Belair did most of the catching during the season while Tony West bore the brunt of the pitching duties. Lefty Harrell, and Goodrich pitched a few of the games during the latter part of the season.

Paul Zemke, veteran hurler, performed very creditably in the role of relief pitcher and many times pulled the game from the fire with brilliant pitching. Mills, Hamill and Lefty Harrell alternated at the initial sack while Hamill and Eddie Burns played the second base berth Normandin was at short while Chip Dugas started the season at third, later being released and the dizzy corner was taken care of by Mills and Whitney. In the outfield was Dinty Moore, Noel, Allard, Clabby and Stanley. White also played a few games in the outer garden. Hank Morin and Jack Curran officiated as umpires during the entire season. Westerly Takes High School Baseball Crown

Westerly High experienced a successful year on the gridiron capturing the interscholastic league football title, but the baseball season was not so good as Westerly won but five games in their twelve-game schedule. In football they suffered only one defeat and that at the hands of their most hated rivals, Stonington High. They had the honor of tying the Connecticut state champions, Windham, holding them to a scoreless tie.

The track team set several records and all together it was considered a very successful year on the field. An innovation at the school was the taking up of field hockey by the girls This created no little interest and a schedule is being arranged for the hockey team in 1926.

The basketball team won the majority of its games. Out of an eight-game schedule, Westerly won five games, piling up an impressive score.

Football

Westerly had one of the most successful football seasons in the history of the school. Coach D. Harold Rogers completed his eighth year as local mentor and his charges easily captured the eastern Connecticut-western Rhode Island league title.

The squad numbered about 35 and as practically the whole first team returns to school next year, the local fans are looking forward to another big year in the gridiron sport.

Coach Rogers has not decided about the coaching proposition for next season but has already arranged a fine schedule of ten games for the varsity squad. Members of this year's team were awarded gold footballs by Max Novogrosky, one of Westerly's leading merchants. The season's record follows:

Westerly		Opponent

Baseball

The Dabrowski brothers, Ted and Walt, were the high light performers of Westerly's baseball season Thu pitching of Larson, a first year player in the box, helped his team materially in the pinches. Coach Joe Sherman completed his second year with Westerly High and his work was fairly successful considering the handicap he faced in the lack of pitching material He has some promising boxmen lined up for next season. The season's record follows:

Track

Leo Grills and Ray Meikle were the high point scorers for the track team, Meikle setting an interscholastic record in Rhode Island with a javeline throw of 155 feet. He also broke the R. C.-W. R. I. league record at New London with a toss of 130 feet. The work of Capt. Farago was one of the outstanding features of the track season, he being a consistent point winner in the half and quarter-mile events.

Basketball

Basketball, although a practically new sport for Westerly, was successful and the season was not without its thrills. Henderson and Salemeno were the high point men of the season. The season's records follow:

Westerly		Opponents

34	St. Michaels	21

Basketball—Girls

Owing to the inability to secure a playing hall the girls' basketball team played but two games, one with Stonington High and the other with South Kingston High, both games resulting in defeats for the Westerly girls. Miss Kidd acted as coach and the members of the team were Misses Maxson, DeRocco, Dunning, Briggs, Perry, Mitchell, Murphy, Panciera, Whitford, Scanlon, Bissett and Macdonald.

Field Hockey

This fall the girls had a new sport, field hockey. Field hockey is being coached by Miss Idylla Gould, assisted by Miss Doroth Beckett. The fall season has been devoted to practice with scrub teams on the playground field. A schedule is being arranged for the spring.

Chapman Football Team Hampered By Injuries

The Chapman Technical high school football squad started out with splendid prospects for the season of 1925. Eight veteran players reported for work at the start of the practices. These players were Captain Kannanberg, John Browne, Alfred Aquillo, Morris Browne, Kenneth Williams, Albert Pongetti, Peter Caruso, and Clarence Everts. Hard luck seemed to be on the trail of the Tech team, however, for several were injured. After practice had been on only a few days Williams was injured and out for the remainder of the season. the afternoon previous to the first game the second casualty was suffered when Pongetti was struck by an automobile and was unable to play until the season was half over. In the fourth game Caruso hurt his leg and had to give up his place as first team end while Aquillo the other end was unable to play steady toward the end of the season because of injuries.

The season started off well with a tie game with the state championship team, the Windham high eleven, by a score of 6-6. Windham scored the first touchdown and maintained their lead until there was only a few minutes left to play when Captain Kannanberg intercepted a forward pass and ran eighty yards for a touchdown.

The next game which was scheduled to be played with the Plainfield high team was called off because of wet grounds and rain.

A win was scored on the next try when Stonington high was defeated by 7-0 in Techs first league game. Again the game was won because of a spectacular run. John Browne, star halfback, took the ball for fifty yards placing it only a short distance from the goal line where it was taken over by line plunges.

The first defeat came in the next engagement which was a league game with Westerly high. The first score came when Chapman Tech was forced behind their goal line and a safety was chalked up against them. Shortly after Westerly was sent behind their line and the score was tied but in the last quarter DeRocco, Westerly center, recovered a Tech fumble and crossed the line for a touchdown. The goal was kicked making the final score 9-2 in Westerly's favor.

The following game with Killingly high was a walk away for Tech. Every man on the squad was used and the final score was 21-7.

The game with Norwich Free Academy at New London was lost because of the spirt by Norwich in the first quarter. Before the Tech team knew what was happening Norwich had scored two touchdowns. The red and black players went back with a vim and scored two touchdowns and one kick after that but the one missed kick was the margin of their loss, the Academy winning 14-13.

Another walk away for Tech came in the next contest when Stonington was played again. Instead of the strong opposition that Stonington had displayed in the first game they presented no defense at all and the Tech subs were able to score a 20-7 victory.

On the second game with Norwich the red and black players played below their usual standard. Courbois of the Academy scored ten points against the Tech eleven by making a touchdown kicking the point after touchdown and kicking a field goal. As Tech was held scoreless the game went to the Academy 10-0.

The last league game went to Westerly by a score of 6-0. This was Techs game all of the way through but a froward pass to Rossi, Westerly end, enabled him to take the ball across for the only score in the game. The New London team displayed their best playing in this game.

The season ended with a 3-0 loss to LaSalle Academy in Providence. The game was played in six inches of water so that little gaining was done. The two teams were about on a par and this fact coupled with the condition of the field prevented a touchdown being made.

The star player on the team was John Browne, generaly rated as the best halfback in the league if not in the state. He was followed by Captain Kannanberg who was selected by R. J. Guyer as fullback and captain of the all-star league team. The best player in the line was Pongetti although Skinner ran him a close second. A new coach was in power this season. C. Everett Woodman, star halfback of the Bates College team, having succeeded to the seat of authority. E. Stanley Taylor was as usual in charge of affairs from his position as director of athletics. The managership was held by Dwight F. Knox of the senior class and his assistant was Frederic Allyn of the junior class.

The first squad consisted of the following players: Captain P. Kannanberg, A. Aquillo, R. Aquillo, E. Borges, J. Browne, M. Browne R. Caron, P. Caruso, C. Everts, L. Hewitt, F. Knox, H. Kopp, F. Miller, R. Phillips, A. Pongetti, J. Sacchatello, A Skinner, J. White and O. Woodworth.

BOXING IN NORWICH

The boxing game in Norwich was revived for a day during 1925 an then died a quiet death. The Duwell A. A. staged an open air bout in September but this was the only professional bout of the year. There were several amateur exhibitions. Young Coulon of Taftville won the state flyweight title and then lost it holding the honor only a month. Fronklie Busch was the only other outstanding local boxer of the year.

SPORTS EXPERIENCE BANNER YEAR AND MANY RECORDS ARE BROKEN

Several Outstanding Stars Gleam Brilliantly in Sport Firmament—Grange and Nurmi Head List of Sport Luminaries With Their Record Accomplishments—College Sports Have Record Year—Boxing Has Eventful Year and Many New Champions Are Crowned.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP)—Though marked by a return to somewhat normal pace in the scope of athletic competition, by comparison with the unusual activity of the previous two annual campaigns, the year 1925 witnessed continued growth of popular interest, particularly in baseball, football and track, besides an unusual epidemic of individually brilliant performances and a significant trend in the development of professional sports.

Following a year of sensational conquest abroad on Olympic battlefields, it was a natural reaction to have the major conflicts of 1925 concentrated on native grounds. There was sufficient international competition to add spice to the campaign, and here the United States carried away the bulk of honors in spite of an apparent renaissance in the calibre of British opposition, but the contests of chief interest were staged on home soil.

In this homebred panorama of activity, however, one invader of unusual note, Paavo Nurmi, the phantom runner of Finland, stood out to challenge Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost of football, for the most spectacular individual honors of the year. These two occupied the major portion of the spotlight, even in a season which saw "Big Bill" Tilden carrying the tennis heights for the sixth straight year, Bobby Jones capturing the amateur golf crown for the second season in a row after also coming close to winning the national open title in a desperate fight with Willie Macfarlane; Helen Wills leading women's tennis ranks for the third successive time; Rogers Hornsby smashing major league batting records as he led the National League for the sixth straight year; and Swede Oberlander leading Dartmouth to a national football championship with the greatest forward passing exhibition in the history of the gridiron sport.

When all these sensational feats and stars have passed in review, however, it remains for two peculiarly parallel performances of Grange and Nurmi to produce the greatest thrills of 1925 from the viewpoint of individual brilliance.

Baseball

Pittsburgh's astonishing comeback to win the world's series from Washington after losing three of the first four games was a fitting climax to keenly fought seasons in both major leagues, Washington repeated its pennant triumph after a close battle most of the season with the Athletics whose young team cracked under the strain in September in crucial encounters with the Senators. Exceptional strength shown by St. Louis and Chicago in the closing stages of the American League race also featured and gave promise of an evenly waged pennant fight in 1926.

The Pirates, after falling by the wayside for several seasons when their hopes seemed brightest, finally broke down the jinx that seemed to beset them and ended the four-year pennant winning streak of the New York Giants. It was Pittsburgh's first flag in sixteen years and the capture of the world's title, in addition, was a tribute to the fighting qualities of the club, a young combination which is expected to be a dominating force in the senior circuit for several seasons.

In the minor league post-season championship battles, the Louisville club, American association champions by a record-breaking margin, met defeat at the hands of rivals on opposite coasts—Baltimore, seven-time International League pennant winners, and San Francisco, victor in the Pacific Coast League race.

College Sports

Football's records-breaking season was the outstanding feature of the college sports season, which saw, however, many other spectacular events. In the east Yale carried off a major share of championships and honors, with the Navy a close rival. Southern and far western contenders for eastern titles, however, fared unusually well in spite of the defeat of Washington's crack varsity crew by the Naval Academy in the Poughkeepsie classic. Southern California romped off with the intercollegiate track and field championships, while tennis honors in both singles and doubles went to California men and Fred Lamprecht of Tulane won the golf crown from Dexter Cummings of Yale.

Michigan's fine all-around showing in western conference ranks rivalled that of Yale in the east. The ascendency of Washington was a feature on the coast, the Huskies crowning a year of fine achievement when their football team broke the five-year championship streak of California.

Football

Dartmouth's brilliant showing in college ranks, where the Big Green gained widespread recognition as the best team in the country, and the development of the professional game under the impetus of Red Grange's performances were the high spots of a spectacular gridiron season. It held the stage much longer than usual as a result of the "pro" angle of the sport and the agitation aroused by Grange's jump from college ranks.

While none disputed Dartmouth's claim to eastern honors, the Green team had rivals for national honors in Michigan in the middle west, where the Wolverines compiled a great record despite one defeat at the hands of Northwestern; Alabama and Tulane in the south, both unbeaten; and Washington, champions in the Far West.

Tribute to Dartmouth's stars was paid in selection of three of them as members of the All-American team compiled by The Associated Press.

Golf

Bobby Jones was the big star of the golfing firmament, winning the amateur crown for the second straight year after a final round battle with his young chum, Watts Gunn, the sensation of the tournament. Jones also came close to annexing the national open crown, losing to Willie Macfarlane only after a 36-hole playoff. Walter Hagen, by winning the professional title for the second successive year, and Jim Barnes, by bringing the British open cup to this country for the fourth time in five years, shared the limelight.

Joyce Wethered demonstrated her supremacy in the women's realm by conquering Glenna Collett, foremost American star, in the British championship. Miss Collett came back to win the national title, however, dethroning Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd.

Tennis

The tennis campaign of 1925 was featured by the success with which champion individuals and teams retained their titles. "Big Bill" Tilden and Helen Wills remained supreme in the American championships after contests with internationally notable fields. The United States Davis cup team repelled the sensational challenge of France, although Tilden was forced to five sets by both Borotra and Lacoste in the singles. The invading British women's team successfully defended the Wightman cup.

Tilden had a series of close calls but pulled himself characteristically out of the most critical situations. Lacoste had him match point four times in a gruelling three-hour battle at Philadelphia, while "Little Bill" Johnston staged a surprising comeback in the nationals and was several times within a point of taking the crucial second set from the title holder after capturing the first. Tilden pulled this out, however, and eventually, in five sets, turned back one of Johnston's greatest bids to check the champion's reign, now covering six years.

While Suzanne Lenglen of France returned to her greatest heights abroad, Miss Wills remained supreme at home for the third season, her only defeat coming on a rain-soaked court at Seabright, N. J., at the hands of Elizabeth Ryan, who returned to her native land after a long stay abroad to add her keen competitive ability to American tournaments. Miss Wills twice conquered Kitty McKane, her English rival, who eliminated Miss Ryan in the nationals.

The return to brilliancy of R. Norris Williams was equally as notable a comeback as that of Johnston. Williams and Vincent Richards proved the outstanding doubles combination of the year among the men while Mary K. Browne shared this distinction with Miss Wills among the women.

Boxing

Continued inactivity on the part of Jack Dempsey and a general decline in title-defending activity marked the 1925 ring calendar. Several noteworthy title changes took place, however, with Paul Berlenbach displacing Mike McTigue as light heavyweight king, and the veteran Rocky Kansas taking the lightweight title recognition from Jimmy Goodrich, so far as New York state is concerned.

Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, proved the most active titleholder, stepping out of his class to battle McTigue when the Irishman held the light heavyweight crown and also fighting a losing battle with the middleweight king, Harry Greb, besides successfully defending the welter laurels against Dave Shade, Sailor Friedman and Bert Colima.

THE WESTERN FARMER AND POLITICS.

(Written Especially for The Bulletin.)

We farmers here in the "effete east" don't need to be told that farming is neither a bed of roses nor a feast of nectar.

It is just one turn after another of the grindstone to which our noses are held. But we don't howl overmuch because of the rasping. In fact, we've got so used to it that we take it as a regular part of the day's work, unpleasant, to be sure, but not to be avoided and hence not to be whimpered over.

Out west, however, the hullabaloo is more vocal. It is louder and more lasting. It reminds me of Tom Moore's famous line recording "the wolf's long howl on Unalaska's shore." If it dies down, temporarily, in one quarter, it rises loud and lugubrious from another. Like death and taxes, it is always with us.

In truth, we of the east have heard it so constantly for the last 20 or 30 years, that it is making some of us wonder. It doesn't seem as if weak human nature could endure it if it were really as bad as made out. Assuring us in no uncertain tones that western farming is dying from deflation and governmental neglect and grain exchange speculation and exorbitant railroad charges, the patients vocal cords, nevertheless, seem to be pretty well nourished, judging from the noise they continue to be able to make. It doesn't seem to a man up a tree as if a really moribund famine victim could make and continue to make such a racket, if he were actually as weak as he wants us to think.

When you come right down to brass tacks, what is the trouble with western farming and farmers? Naturally, whatever our own suspicions, we hesitate to express them from lack of on-the-spot knowledge.

For the last few weeks we have been told that Iowa farmers in particular were going into bankruptcy, en masse, and farm banks closing by the dozen, because the price of corn was so low. The crop was a big one. But the more a farmer had, the worse off he was. He was corn-poor in the same sense in which we of the east sometimes say one who has a big, unproductive farm is "land poor."

We've all heard or read this sort of wail. And some of us have wondered what the real truth was. But how were we to find out? Certainly not from the speeches or proposals of western congressmen at Washington. For they, like too many of their compeers from the east, while assuming to represent their constituencies, are really about the least representative critters in their districts. They are usually time-serving, mob-fearing, shallow-brained and leather-lunged adherents of the gospel of political skullduggery. If they represent any portion of their constituencies, it is the small but noisy and malodorous gang of riff-raff known as "floaters," whose votes too often decide an election according as to which side they are thrown on. What congressman, whose whole political life is an endeavor to keep these "floaters" loyal, say or do affords no inkling as to the real state of affairs affecting the great body of citizens.

It goes without saying that if Iowa, for instance, is in as bad shape as these people represent, we of the east want to do or help do whatever is necessary to right the wrong and abolish the hardship. But we don't want to mistake the squalling of a few coyotes for the hopeless bellow of starving cattle. We're from Missouri, in the sense that we want to be shown the advantage of the fire before we jump out of the frying pan into it.

As a help to a just understanding of the situation, I am permitted to copy for your information a letter recently written by an Iowa man, who has been doing business with and for Iowa farmers for 40 years, and knows them, inside and out. He writes:

"All of the things that are being published in regard to the Iowa farmer are politics and nothing else. No politician has the sand to tell the farmer in Iowa what is really the matter. What is the matter with the farmer is exactly what is the matter with every other business which at present is not making a success; and that is trying to do something with too much borrowed money, or trying to do something that one doesn't know how to do. No politician would dare get up and tell a farmer audience that it would be impossible to legislate brains into anybody.

I know that practically all the kicking which is being done by farmers is being done by those who got heavily in debt trying to "buy more land to raise more corn to feed more hogs." The farmer who owns his own farm clear or even with a lien of a hundred dollars an acre, and who knows his business, is not having a very hard time in Iowa and is saving a little."

Now that is a diagnosis made by a doctor on the spot, who knows his patient, knows his circumstances, knows his history, and isn't likely to mistake a case of mulligrubs for one of anemia. It somewhat relieves my mind. I hope it will explain things a bit to some of you, also.

We eastern farmers have neighbors of the Peter Tumbledown and Bill Borrower class. I have one who every summer spends days and days going from one barn to another to borrow a mowing-machine or a horse-rake. He left his own out under a tree in the orchard all winter, and its too rusty or too rotten to use any more. I have another who doesn't know whether cows have upper front teeth or not, who, because another neighbor has made something out of dairying, borrowed money to put up a big barn and buy a herd of pedigreed stock, and expected to get rich in six months. Now he can't pay his feed bills or the interest on the money he borrowed, and is complaining over his "bad luck."

If there is such a person as the Goddess of Luck, I sometimes wonder why she doesn't take her broomstick and whack a lot of her libellers over the head. To ascribe to her ill favor the evils brought on by one's own shiftlessness or thriftlessness or carelessness is not only dishonest but cowardly.

If the gentleman whom I have quoted is right,—and there is better reason to believe he is than to believe any other statement I've yet seen coming out of the west,—the Iowa farmer who has brains enough and industry enough and "git-up-and-git" enough to make a living in any other occupation is doing that much at farming and "saving a little."

Guess we aren't called on to shed any specially salty or bitter tears over the difficulties of the other sort. They'd have trouble anyway, no matter what their business or what their opportunities. People on farms as well as elsewhere usually reap as they sow. If they sow weed seeds they aren't apt to garner much wheat; if they don't take care of the dimes they aren't likely to be over-burdened with the dollars; if they'd rather borrow money than earn it they'll be apt to see a foreclosure, sooner or later.

Farming, whether east or west, is no longer a proper vocation for "the fool of the family." Perhaps, so long as he knows enough to raise turnips, he won't actually starve at it. But, if he's expecting to get ahead by it, he must be something quite far removed from either fool or loafer or wastrel.

If he fails, whether through ignorance or laziness or extravagance, the rest of us would be silly to pay much heed to his complaints. He does not represent or speak for the great body of farmers, who know their business and who are not lazy and who are reasonably thrifty. This is just as true of Iowa and Kansas as of North Stonington or Haddam-Haddam.

But we all remember Gen. Grant's favorite story of his first trek as a second-lieutenant with a party of scouts across a western plain. As evening descended there rose ahead of them an outbreak which, from its volume and ugliness, seemed to presage an attack by an army of mountain lions or at least of hungry timber-wolves. Nobody else paid much attention to it, and so he, though rather badly scared, kept a stiff upper lip. As they rode onward the noise grew even louder and more clamorous. At least they got up to its source and Grant found that it was all made by a couple of slinking coyotes, who turned tail and ran when an old scout swore mildly at them.

When a particularly big and unpleasant noise rises ahead of us, we will all do well to make sure whether it is caused by coyotes or not. Especially in politics. And our Iowa informant makes it clear that the stuff which is being printed about Iowa farm suffering is "politics and nothing else."

Some people who are in congress and want to stay there, or some who are not in congress and want to get there, seem to think it is "good politics" to bawl louder and louder and cry more and more copiously in the sight and for the ears of the groundlings. They think this more likely to inure to their advantage than a reasonable discussion of why's and wherefore's, and a common-sense and candid statement of facts. From their viewpoint and considering their underlying purpose, this may very likely be true. For they view everything from the big "I", and their purpose is, not the advantage of agriculture or the welfare of farmers, but the bamboozling of gulls.

Those of us who don't care to be considered gulls; who really want to see farming come into its own as a self-sustaining industry; who want to see farmers standing manfully erect on their own legs; such of us can well afford to ignore the coyotes and the bamboozlers of politics.

And I rawther fawncy, as the English would say, that we'd do equally well to restrain the outpourings of too profuse a sympathy for the down-trodden western farmers. At least, until we can be shown the soles of the boots that are down-treading them. If they're really just stepping on their own noses, the outcome would seem to lie out of our jurisdiction.

If any farmer is worth his salt, whether east or west, he doesn't want charity either in the form of private gifts or governmental mollycoddling. All he asks is to be given a fair field and no favor,—always with the understanding that the other fellow is to join the scramble on the same terms.

It is as impossible to make men industrious or thrifty or shrewd by legislation as it is to "legislate brains" into them. This demand of grown up men for government "spoon-victuals" doesn't come from real farmers, but from the inept and pityless. They're not worth their salt, anyway.

THE FARMER.

TWENTY-SEVEN MORE DRIVERS ARE SUSPENDED

The weekly list of Connecticut operators whose licenses have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out Wednesday at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. There are twenty-seven names on the list. The case of one has been appealed. The department statement advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of the suspended drivers operating motor vehicles. The following is the list:

WEATHER CHANGES AFFECTED STORRS EGG PRODUCTION

Sudden changes in the weather just after Christmas came too late in the contest week to affect egg yields adversely. The fact is that all classes showed slight improvement, Rhode Island Reds leading with an increased yield of over four per cent. The total lay for all pens was 188 eggs better than for the preceeding week and nearly a thousand eggs more than for the corresponding week last year. The total production for all pens was 4,911 eggs or a yield of nearly forty-one per cent. A mark of 4,000 eggs or better was not reached until the fifteenth week last year and during the last three years, or since the adoption of night feeding by artificial light, the average period for forty per cent yields has come in the fourteenth week.

During the eighth week of the contest Rhode Island Reds nearly shut out all other classes. John Z. LaBelle's pen from Ballouville, Conn., headed the list with a score of 58 eggs. R. D. Sargent's pen of the same breed from East Ryegate, Vt., was in second place with a yield of 56 eggs. Sunset Poultry Farm's pen of Reds from Amherst Mass., made 3rd with a tally of 54 eggs. Homestead Farm's pen of Leghorns from Honesdale, Pa., was the only outsider to crowd into the front row. This pen of pullets came across with 51 eggs. From these scores it can be seen that these four leading pens laid at the rate of seventy-eight per cent or nearly double the general average for the entire contest.

In respect to total records from November 1st to date, changes among the leading pens last week occurred only in the Barred Rock class. Edgar Stoughton from Wapping, Conn., is now one egg ahead of Harriet Smith from Newburyport, Mass., instead of being one egg behind as he was a week ago. Competition for first place, all breeds competing, is now as close as it can be without being tied. Mount Hope farm's pen of Leghorns from Williamstown, Mass., are one lonely eg ahead of John Z. LaBelle's pen of Reds from Ballouville, Conn. The management of the contest is usually not long on prophesy but it looks to us now as if the Connecticut pen would have the pole before another week goes by.

White Wyandottes

Thomas H. Matteson, Daviaville, R. I.	230
Obed G. Knight, Bridgeton, R. I.	224

Barred Rocks

W. H. B. Kent, Cazenovia, N. Y.	260
Edgar Stoughton, Wapping, Conn.	254
Harriet Smoth, Newburyport, Mass.	253

John Z. LaBelle, Ballouville, Conn.	413
Shell Crest Farm, Holliston, Mass.	324
R. D. Sargent, East Ryegate, Vt.	310
The Hayes Hennery, Dover, N. H.	297

White Leghorns

Mount Hope Farm, Williamstown, Mass.	410
Dudley Poultry Farm, Webster, Mass.	375
R. W. Colman, Medina, N. Y.	340
Tolvonen Leghorn Farm, Girard, Pa.	335
Ruehle's Sunnyside Farm, Pleasant Valley, N. Y.	330

All Other Varieties

F. M. Wisner (Ancona), Monroe, Mich.	225
A. T. Lenzen (White Rocks), North Attleboro, Mass.	175
Thurlow Travis (Dominiques), Peekskill, N. Y.	135

WESTERLY

TOTAL ZONING PERMITS OF THE YEAR NUMBER 158

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Dec. 31—Zoning building permits issued in Westerly by Zoning Inspector Louis J. Roast, for the year 1925, number 158, beginning with the first of June last when the town of Westerly Zoning Ordinance became effective. Divided by months, the permits were issued as follows: June 16, July 33, August 28, September 31, October 17, November 20, and December 20, which has meant a monthly average of between 22 and 23 permits.

In Pawcatuck, zoning permits to the number of 31, have been issued by Pawcatuck Zoning Commissioners George R. McKenna, John F. Gallagher and William S. Crandall, for 1925, from the month of September through December.

Westerly December permits numbered twenty, heading the list, as has been the tendency in past months, is garage construction which totalled 8 for the month, in either the erection of new structures or for the purpose of remodelling old ones or additions to buildings for the purpose. Other alterations and additions to various structures totalled 6. For the erection of signs or billboards 4 permits were issued. One permit was issued for a new bungalow and one for a shed.

Pawcatuck December permits issued numbered 7, among which no garage permit appeared, alterations, additions and repairs numbering 4, a bungalow cottage 1, shed 1 and sign 1.

The following represented the building activities for December on both sides of the Pawcatuck river in the states of Rhode Island and Connecticut: Zoning building permits issued in Westerly:

Dec. 7. Westerly Visiting Nurse Association by Katherine W. Utter two small signs, High street, (Crandall House.)

POETRY

The New Year

Heir of the centuries am I.
The age-sown crop of bitter hate
Is mine to reap; the ruinous fate
Of perished millions mine to feel.
And pay the debt in blood and steel,
The myriad eyes grown dim with tears;
The cruel fruit of savage years;
Innocent blood, by tyrants shed;
Poor souls long numbered with the dead
Demand their dues, and justice calls—
The sword is drawn, and when it falls
Rivers of blood, hearts cold with fears;
The pent-up vengeance of the years;
The sun in darkness hides his face,
And swift death reaps the human race.
All this I see, and thus I cry;
Heir of the centuries am I;
Full well I know the fearful score;
The vanished ages left in store;
But in the whirl of rate and strife
I see not death, but surging life!
Not vengeance, but the throes of birth
Of God's new heaven and new earth.
I see the dawning of the day,
For untold ages on the way,
When every tyrant's bloody throne
By girded right shall be o'erthrown;
When flowers shall hide each battle scar,
And man no more go forth to war;
When peace shall brood o'er earth and sky
And God's day dawn, and thus I cry:
"Heir of the centuries am I."
—A. M. Haswell, in The Kansas City Times.

Make a New Start

A New Year here! But what about
The year just passed away?
What is the record, Little Man,
You chiseled yesterday?
Time may be gone beyond recall,
Its pleasures and its pains;
But what we did of good or ill
Indelibly remains!
So halt a bit on bended knee,
And seek the light that shows
That record in reality.
The Old Year's books disclose!
Seek pardon for unsightly spots,
And pray the Lord to give
You clearer sight and braver heart
To live as one should live!
The bright, new page that opens now,
Unspotted, fresh and fair;
On this may no condemning stain
Accuse you all the year!
Humiliated by the past,
Start this New Year aright,
To work and play as in God's sight,
And keep it clean and white!
—By Rev. William Wood.

WHERE THE GLASGO FINISHING CO. WILL BRING BACK INDUSTRIAL LIFE.

GLASGO FINISHING CO. TO BRING LIFE TO LONG DORMANT VILLAGE

The new year opens with bright hopes for the village of Glasgo through the resumption of business operations in the mill property there that has lain dormant and deserted for the past four years. The hum of industry will again be heard, the empty tenements will be filled and Glasgo will once more become a thriving community.

This happy outlook has been brought about by the formation of the Glasgo Finishing Co., capitalized at $300,000, of which the officers are William B. Shaw, president; Alexander F. Shaw, Jr., vice president and general manager; B. G. Stanton, Providence, secretary and treasurer. The corporation has bought from the American Thread Co. the entire mill property at Glasgo and the work is now under way in installing new machinery so that it is expected that bleaching, dyeing and finishing can be begun by about the first of February and printing about a month later.

The company is to specialize on rayon and cotton mixtures, putting in all wide machinery so as to print up to 60 inches wide. Besides the printing machine, the new equipment will include 12 dye jigs, five bleaching kiers, and the necessary fixtures and apparatus to carry on the work in an efficient manner.

Mr. Shaw, who is president of the company, and his brother, who is vice president and general manager, have both taken up their residences in Glasgo and are directing the preparation of the plant for active operations as soon as possible. Both are sons of Alex F. Shaw of Providence formerly with the Norwich Bleaching, Dyeing and Finishing Co., and both have gained their practical experience with their father at the Greeneville Finishing Co., in Providence. William B. Shaw having been assistant to his father and Alex F. Shaw, Jr., agent of the Greeneville Co.

The Glasgo mill property, which has a valuable water power privilege, consists of a main four story building of brick, 121x70, to which is attached a dye house, 100x60. There are two other buildings, one 115x40, and the other 110x30. There are also 21 houses, providing accommodations for about 65 families.

The present mill at Glasgo was first developed in 1846 as a paper mill when the Griswold Paper Co., was incorporated with capital stock of $60,000. All but a few shares of this stock was disposed of to Griswold subscribers. A twenty-two foot dam was constructed on the site of a former Glasgo dam. Commodious and substantial stone houses were built for the accomodation of their help. L. D. Armstrong, an experienced and skilled paper maker, was secured from the mill at Montville. In 1868 the finished product found a market and was actually being shipped from Glasgo. Soon the stock was increased to $100,000, nevertheless manufacturing successes were transient. The business outlook dwindled with all parts of the concern not up to expectations. Dividend after dividend was passed and there became great dissatisfaction among the stockholders. In 1874 the Griswold Paper Co. passed into the hands of a receiver, and local investors met with an almost total loss in their investments.

In 1881 the plant was taken over by the Glasgo Yarn Mill Co., for the manufacture of cotton yarn. H. H. Osgood of Norwich was the president. The capital stock of $125,000 was increased in 1883 to $200,00. Lucius and Charles Briggs were the management in control. New tenements were built, school facilities provided, a Catholic church was erected, the mill itself was enlarged and numerous improvements were made.

In 1899 the entire plant was sold to the American Thread Co., which at once with changes and improvements put in operation a model branch manufactory. J. T. Wilbur of Jewett City began with this company as bookkeeper, and, being soon promoted, held the offices of superintendent and agent until 1921. Because of labor troubles the American Thread Co. closed the plant down and has allowed it to stand idle since then.

It is with much satisfaction that the people of Griswold know that the village of Glasgo is to come to life again and that the town is to count among its important manufacturing industries the new Glasgo Finishing Co.

OLD NOVEL BY HUGO TO BE PUBLISHED FIRST TIME

PARIS, DEC. 31 (AP)—The manuscript of a novel written by Victor Hugo ten years before Les Miserables appeared, has been discovered, and soon will be given to the public.

The project is the idea of Gustave Simon, the venerable literary executor of Victor Hugo, who for 40 years has been active in promoting interest in the great novelist.

Both the fact that the old manuscript is in existence and the plan to publish it, have been kept secret hitherto, as far as the public is concerned.

Announcement of the discovery and proposed publication of the manuscript was made here by the American Braille Press for War and Civilian Blind, which has been making inquiries regarding the matter, in a desire to promote interest on the part of French blind readers in the works of Victor Hugo.

The following statement was made by a representative of the Press:

"It should be interesting to know that Victor Hugo's literary executor, Gustave Simon, the scholar and bibliophile, is still busy and that after years of research he has discovered the manuscript of Les Miseres, a novel written by Victor Hugo more than ten years before the appearance of Les Miserables or more than three-quarters of a century ago.

"Except for the last two chapters, Les Miseres was ready for publication when Victor Hugo was sent into exile, which drove all thoughts of finishing the novel from his mind. The manuscript was thrown aside and not even looked at for ten years. Hugo then took up the manuscript, read it, was dissatisfied and decided to rewrite the whole story. Les Miserables was the result.

"Exile had caused changes in Hugo's mind and it had its effect on his story, so that while Les Miseres has the basic theme of Les Miserables; there are essential differences in the two works. The earlier novel, it is said, will read like a new book. In Les Miseres there is none of what is usually called the love interest, and Cosette, one of the famous figures, does not appear. In other words, Les Miserables was almost an entirely new story."

SAYS ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT NOTHING BUT ADVERTISING

CHICAGO, Dec. 31 (AP)—Artistic temperament popularly believed to cause artists to indulge in hair-tearing tantrums is nothing but "advertising" in the opinion of Miss Bertha Ott, a prominent woman impresario.

For nearly a score of years Miss Ott has been the medium whereby artists of voice and instrument have been presented to music lovers of Chicago and from her experiences, she has drawn many interesting viewpoints.

"Some artists are childish, but most of them are sound, level-headed business men and women, devoted to their work," she said. "In our experience there never has been an instance of a singer or instrumentalist refusing to complete a recital or interfering with arrangements because of 'temperament.'"

The name's the thing to the general public in its patronage of concerts. Just as Babe Ruth can pack a ball park on an off day, so can a musician with reputation crowd a house. But unlike the Bambino, who often fans the breeze and disappoints his admirers, the concert artist always delivers the goods.

"Mme. Galli Curci, Rachmaninoff or Kreisler can sell out the biggest house in Chicago with the mere announcement of their appearances," Miss Ott said. "Crowds go to see them regardless of their programs.

"Usually the public's appreciation is the same for a man or woman, for a vocalist or instrumentalist. Also many of the same patrons attend all concerts."

Appreciation of music is strongest where an influence of foreign race or heredity exists, she said. The better class of immigrant who was taught music in childhood leaves his love for it as a legacy to his American children.

"The public schools are stressing music more and more, but it may take two generations to bring America to the musical peak of Italy, for instance, where even the street urchins whistle the operas.

"Jazz has not displaced classic music in popularity. On the contrary through syncopation of operatic masterpieces as Paul Whiteman does, in such a way that the jazz devotee can understand them and the lover of the classics is not offended, jazz will give 'highbrow' music a more universal appeal."

Among the future great of the musical world, many of whose introduction concerts are arranged by Miss Ott, she finds men and women about equal in number, but singers are much in the minority.

"This is because it isn't everybody who has a voice," she explains, "but anybody with talent and effort can learn to play an instrument."

ANCIENT ADOBE HOUSE BACK IN FAVOR IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31 (AP)—The humble sun-dried brick is coming back into popular favor in southern California as a material for the building of ranch houses, small homes and even pretentious dwellings.

"Adobe" was used by Franciscan fathers in the building of their missions, and later many homes and commercial structures were erected with these rudely made bricks.

As the years went on, however, adobe became primarily the stuff of which ruins were likely to be made. The sight-seeing tourist learned to look for the adobe mission and the adobe house as relics of a romantic past. He scarcely expected to see modern homes built of that material.

Mission style homes, churches and business blocks long have been popular in southern California, but ordinarily these have been built of brick or frame with a coating of stucco.

Lately, however, the old custom of using one's cellar excavation as a source of sun-dried bricks for walls has been revived, and everywhere in southern California modern small homes and ranch houses are being built of adobe. In Los Angeles, a number of exclusive residences, whose owners could well afford the most expensive of materials, have been fashioned of the humble but historic adobe.

NAJO ENTERS MAJOR LEAGUE AFTER ONE YEAR IN MINORS

OKMULGEE, Okla., Dec. 31 (AP)—Carrying with him several records captured in the Western Association, Leo Najo, who has the Akmulgee Driller's most spectacular ball player last season, finds himself shot into the big league at the end of his first year in organized baseball.

Scouts for the Chicago White Sox watched Najo, an Indian, in action, and later took him. He was owned by the San Antonio club, but farmed out to Okmulgee.

Speedy in the outer gardens, accurate with his throwing arm, dangerous at bat and always fast on bases, the lithe young athlete built up a record in the eWstern association that will remain for some time, J. W. Seabough, president of the association, predicted.

Playing in 150 games, Najo was at bat 559 times and slammed out 213 hits and was given 101 free tickets to first. Thirty-four of the 213 hits counted for circuit clouts, 46 were doubles, 10 triples and 15 sacrifice hits. He batted in 131 runs.

In the center field, he made 444 putouts, 21 assists and 14 errors. Ten of the errors, however, were made during the latter part of the season when the manager of the crippled Drillers placed him on the second bag. Najo was "out of his element," so to speak, for a few games, and the list of errors piled up against him.

SEARCH FOR NEW WRITERS FOR MOVIES PROVES HARD TASK

NEW YORK, Dec. 31 (AP)—The potential scenario writer should first sell his story for publication, conclude scenario editors of eight leading motion picture companies.

A story published in book form or in a magazine, has an advantage over the original script, in their opinion. To the author, it means added revenue and a wider distribution. To the producer, it means more public interest, with a resultant box office drawing power and protection from plagiarism suits.

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in assembling the editorial viewpoints, discovered that although more than 100,000 persons annually are submitting manuscripts, only three or four ever reach the silver sheet. As a result, the producers are compelled to depend principally upon highly trained writers, the novel, the stage play and the magazine.

Scenario editors are constantly seeking new writing talent. In showing the need of original matter, one editor called attention to the producing program of 600 features a year by the companies.

"From what sources can we draw this material?" he asked. "If we get ten good ones from the plays produced each year it is a big average. The same is true of the books published. Of short stories, if there are fifty good ones, it is a high average. That makes 70 pieces of spoken and written literature which could be converted into really high grade special motion pictures. With a program calling for 600 features, the remainder are taken from built-up mediocre material and perhaps the issuance of some re-makes and the original story."

Screen writing is as difficult as stage writing, the editors agreed, and it requires hard, untiring effort for success.

NAVAL COURT EXONERATES PERSONNEL OF SHENANDOAH

Finds the Disaster Was the Price That Must Be Paid in the Development of Any New and Hazardous Art—Concludes That the Conduct of all Officers and Men Was Deserving of the Highest Praise—Big Airship Was Wrecked by Storm—Decides That the Reduction in Number of Automatic Valves From 18 to 8 Was "Inadvisable."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—The Shenandoah disaster which cost the lives of Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdown and 13 other officers and men, "is part of the price that must inevitably be paid in the development of any new and hazardous art."

This was the conclusion of the naval court of inquiry which investigated the accident. Its report, made public tonight, urged the navy department to give "most careful consideration" to recommendations that the development of lighter-than-air craft go forward.

The big airship was wrecked by the storm which encompassed her, said the report. Whether prior minor damage to the hull structure caused by excessive pressure in the helium gas cells was a determining factor in the final break-up, the court was "unable definitely to determine."

It described as "inadvisable" however, the reduction in the number of automatic gas valves from eighteen to eight, a change which some critics have held was responsible for the collapse of the ship.

Exculpating the ship's personnel from responsibility for the wreck, the court declared that during the period of danger "the conduct of all officers and men was deserving of the highest praise." Consequently, it recommended that no further proceedings in connection with the wreck be prosecuted.

The report of the court was exhaustive, reviewing the history of the ship from her beginning in 1919, to her destruction over Ava, Ohio, last September 3, and taking up one by one the major points raised by Captain Anton Heinen, the former German dirigible pilot; Colonel William Mitchell, Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne the commander's widow, and other critics.

Secretary Wilbur does not plan to pass upon the findings until they have been submitted to various officers and bureaus of the department for comment and recommendations.

The report of the court was unanimous and was signed by Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president; Captain Lewis B. McBride of the construction corps; Commander John H. Towers, navy air service, and Major Henry Leonard, a retired marine corps officer, who was the judge advocate in the later stages of the inquiry after Captain Paul Foley had retired at his own request.

While taking direct issue with Mrs. Lansdowne that her husband had protested against making the mid-western flight on account of weather conditions the court agreed with her in a measure against the advisability of exhibition flights. On that point, it said: "While recognizing that the practice of ordering movements of naval vessels for the purpose of complying with public requests is in accord with long established custom, it considered that such movements should be limited to essential naval and military operations insofar as possible, especially in the case of new and experimental types."

As to Commander Lansdown'es attitude towards making the flight, the court found:

"The commanding officer of the Shenandoah was fully consulted and given every opportunity to state his views in regard to the mid-west flight.

"The commanding officer of the Shenandoah did not at any time express opposition to, or reluctance in, undertaking the flight beginning September 2nd., on the ground of possible adverse weather conditions."

The object of the flight was held to have been three-fold:

To test the Ford mooring mast at Detroit; to continue training of personnel and to comply with many requests received from citizens of that section of the country that such a flight be made.

The court declared that Commander Lansdowne was "entirely justified in starting the flight at the time chosen, as the weather maps and reports indicated nothing which would have rendered it unsafe or inadvisable."

As to the failure of Commander Lansdowne to change the course of his ship when advised to do so by the aerologist on board some time before the break-up, the court said subsequent events showed that such a change of course would have been advisable, but added:

"The commanding officer's decision to maintain his course was a matter for his decision only, was made on his best judgment conditions as, then known or observed. Any error of judgment involved in this decision was entirely without negligense or blame."

After describing in detail how the Shenandoah broke up, the court asserted that during all of this period Commander Lansdowne "showed skill, courage and fine qualities of leadership."

"All other officers and men showed an intimate knowledge of their duties, fine discipline and morale and great courage," it continued. "The handling of the forward section of the ship as a free balloon by Lieut. Commander Rosendahl and Lieut. Mayer was particularly deserving of commendation."

Taking all of the testimony of the experts and survivors together, the court said it justified "the opinion that gas pressure due to altitude and rate or rise may well have reached values sufficiently high to produce some damage to structure." While the exact nature or extent of this damage was not ascertainable, it was described as probably "not sufficient to have endangered the ship under normal operation conditions."

"The final destruction of the ship," the opinion continued, "was due primarily to large, unbalanced, external, aerodynamic forces arising from high velocity air currents."

As to the moot question of parachutes for the crew, the court held that the use of present types of parachutes was inadvisable as the wearing of them by the crew would "add to the general risks and hazards of handling such ships." It recommended however, that every effort be made to develop a type that could be worn in an emergency without undue handicap in the performance of duty.

Other conclusions of the court were:

The Shenandoah represented the best practice in design and construction at the period of building.

The proportionately greater weight for structure and fittings of the Shenandoah resulted in increased strength.

The damage to the Shenandoah due to breaking away from the Lakehurst mooring mast was fully repaired and no loss of strength resulted.

The officers and crew of the Shenandoah were skilled and competent operators or rigid airships.

The operation of rigid airships overland as well as over sea is a proper and lawful function of the navy.

None of the structural changes made in the ship, such as the removal of one engine and the installation of a water recovery system, were contributory to the loss of the ship.

J. H. HUSTIS RESIGNS AS PRESIDENT OF B. & M.

BOSTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—James H. Hustis, president of the Boston and Maine railroad for the past eleven years, has resigned, it was announced today.

In a request to the board of directors of the railroad not to consider his name for re-election at the forthcoming annual meeting, Mr. Hustis explained that he felt that the improved operating and financial showing in 1925 made his retirement possible at this time. He said he would continue to serve until the meeting of stockholders next April. A committee of the board was appointed to name his successor.

Mr. Hustis in his letter recalled that twice previously he had sought to resign but had been persuaded to remain.

Mr. Hustis was born in New York 62 years ago, and took a job as office boy with the New York Central at the age of 14, studying at night to supplement his common school education. He rose to be superintendent of the Harlem Division of the railroad in 1900 and then served as operating head of three other divisions. In 1907 he was made assistant general manager at Boston in charge of the Boston and Albany railroad, a part of the New Yorw Central system. He became vice president a year later. In July, 1914, he was elected president of the Boston and Maine and took office in August of that year.

The board of directors issued a statement praising Mr. Hustis' services. They referred to the war and post-war difficulties of the road in spite of which "there have been marked improvements in operating, in service, in the position of the railroad in public opinion and in employes' morale, under Mr. Hustis' management."

PANIC DURING FIRE IN THEATRE IN WOONSOCKET

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Jan. 1—(AP)—A near panic in which two boys were trampled upon and painfully injured resulted from a fire which started today in the Strand theatre, as the vaudeville performance was getting under way. The fire was confined to the second floor of the five-story wooden block housing the theatre and a number of stores and apartments. The loss mostly from water and smoke, was placed unofficially at $30,000.

An audnence of $1,500, a large number being children, filled the theatre when fire started around a hot air flue under the stage. Dense clouds of smoke rolled through the theatre and there was a wild rush for the two exits. Emilas Thibeault, 13, and Antonio Santoro, 10, were thrown down in the melee and their faces were badly cut. They were taken to a hospital.

A general alarm brought all available apparatus and the firemen put up a stiff fight, the thick smoke making their work doubly difficult. Fireman Eadras Markey, Jr., was struck by a hose nozzle while climbing a ladder and was knocked unconscious with severe bruises to the head and shoulders. Traffic on Main street was held up for two hours.

TWO WATERBURY MEN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

MERIDEN, Jan. 1—(AP)—Tony Masanti, 28, and Mike De Lucia, 40, both of Waterbury, were injured fatally tonight in an auto accident at the Yalesville railroad culvert, near here. Both died shortly after being taken to the Meriden hospital.

OBITUARY

Rev. William F. Higgins

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 1—(AP)—Rev. William F. Higgins, ordained to the priesthood more than 50 years ago, and one of the best known priests in the city, died last night in St. Joseph's hospital, after an illness of several weeks with complications. He was 77 years old.

Gilbert E. Norton

BRISTOL, Jan. 1—(AP)—Gilbert E. Norton, 73, at one time a large tobacco grower and for many years one of the owners of Lake Compounce, a summer amusement park for central Connecticut, died at the Bristol hospital today after an illness of three weeks. The resort was founded by Mr. Norton's father, Gad Norton. After the latter's death, Marshall, another son, took charge of the lake with Edward Pierce. Since Marshall's death twelve years ago, Gilbert E., ran the resort giving up to a great extent his tobacco interests.

Three sons, Percy L., Julian H., and Irving W., who survive, are now looking after the father's interests. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon.

New Year Greetings To American People

Sent by European and South American Governments Through the Associated Press.

A world-wide note of peace amity and goodwill is struck by New Year's messages of greeting to the American people which, came on New Year's day through the Associated Press from heads of governments and cabinet ministers of nations in the Orient and the Occident.

Premier Briand of France found time in the midst of governmental difficulties to put a brief message of cheer. Benito Mussolini, the Italian fascist chief, refers to the part played by natives of Italy in the growth of the United States, and his finance minister, Count Volpi, expresses gratitude for the reception accorded him on his recent debt funding mission to Washington.

Baron Shidera speaking for Japan, takes occasion to decry talk of a Japanese-American conflict, declaring that "one does not fight one's best customer." General Primo De Rivera looks for a tightening of the bonds of friendship between his country and America, and sounds a note for peace, as does Emile Vandervelde, the Belgian foreign minister, who makes reference to Locarno and America's participation in the efforts toward disarmament.

From South America come expressions of goodwill voiced by the Argentine foreign minister, Gallardo and the President Serrato of Uruguay, while President Machado of Cuba assures the American people that his countrymen will never froget the debt they owe to "the generous protection of their colossal neighbor."

President Chiari of Panama welcomed American development of his country's resources and hopes for the establishment of a firm basis of understanding and co-operation. And in the Emerald Isle, the Ulster premier plucks the string of optimism, looking to the New Year for "the sunshine of abundant property."

The messages as received by the Associated Press, follow:

Aristide Briand, premier of France: "On the threshold of 1926, I send my wishes for happiness and prosperity to the great American people, for whom my country preserves a feeling of gratitude which nothing will ever weaken."

Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy: "At the dawn of each year the American people ask themselves, with Walt Whitman in his immortal poem: 'Who is he who has progressed the farthest? Because I want to progress farther still."

"The people of Italy, who are glad and proud of having contributed with

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION AT THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—More than 3,000 men, women—3,130 to be exact—flocked to the white house today to shake hands with President and Mrs. Coolidge who received for nearly three hours in continuance of the New Year's reception custom established more than a century ago.

A third of the crowd—high government officials, diplomats and others—were admitted by card. Later the doors were open to all coiners and for an hour the executive, with Mrs. Coolidge at his side, greeted a continuous flow of visitors at the rate of forty a minute.

The reception began an hour before noon, with members of the cabinet, foreign diplomats, senators and representatives, army and navyofficers, lesser government officials and representatives of various patriotic organizations exchanging New Year's greetings with the president and his wife.

The general public was received after a brief luncheon rest. Both Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge appeared to enjoy the handshaking ordeal to each caller they extended greetings of the season.

BLAMES SUICIDE ON PASSING FIT OF MADNESS

CAGNES, France, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Isadora Duncan, the dancer, blames the recent suicide of Sergei Yessinin, on a "passing fit of madness," coupled with a distance for a materialistic world." She denied that she was estranged from the poet, saying: "He is still my husband. I only left Moscow on account of money difficulties and always wanted to return to Russia to work with him. One of his last poems was dedicated to me—To Isadora, alone worthy of being loved by the poet.'

"Yessinin despaired of life in a world where so few persons cared about art. He must have taken his life during a passing fit of madness. My consolation lies in the thought that his poems will survive his tragic death."

Sergis Yessinin committed suicide in Leningrad on December 28, cutting his wrists and hanging himself. He and Miss Duncan were married in 1922, and last year reports that the dancer had been granted a divorce from Yessinin by the soviet authorities in Moscow were confirmed by members of the Duncan family.

Elaborate Test of Radio Possibilities

To Have Audiences of the Whole World Hear Simultaneously an Entertainment Program.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The most elaborate test yet devised, an attempt to enable the radio audiences of the whole world to hear simultaneously an entertainment programme, was made tonight under the direction of the Radio Corporation of America.

Nine powerful stations in America were linked either by direct wire or short wave transmission, to set the programme on the air. These stations, forming the last link in the "world wide broadcast" were augmented by powerful stations in England, hooked up through 2LP, London, to catch and rebroadcast the programme, while the station of La Nacion, Buenos Aries also stood by to pick up the programme and rebroadcast to South America.

American stations co-operating were WJZ, New York city and WXAR, Bound Brook, N. J., linked as one station, WRC, Washington, D. C. WGY, Schenectady, WBZ, Springfield, Mass., KDKA, Pittsburgh, KYW, Chicago, HFKX, Hastings, Neb., KOA, Denver, Col., and KGO, Oakland, Cal.

Through this concentration of superpower great artists for the first time had the entire world as a prospective audience. The greatest single power unit in the hook-up was WXAR, experimental station of the Radio Corporation of America. This station is one of the two most powerful in the world, having a maximum of fifty kilowatts, and thus far has only been used experimentally under a special dispensation from the department of commerce. The average large broadcasting station has but one-half of one kilowatt, and being ninety nine times more powerful than the average station, WXAR has become known as a "superpower" station.

David Sarnoff, vice president and general manager of the Radio Corporation gave an address pointong out the nature of the experiment. The consuls general of England, France, Germany, Poland, Sweden, Italy and Japan expressed their New Year's wish to their own people, and from their own people to all nations of the earth. Interpreters were employed to obviate the difficulties of differences in languages.

The outstanding features of the musical programme were selections by John McCormack, tenor; Lucrezia Bori, soprano; the Victor Symphony orchestra, Godfrey Ludlove, violinist; the Eastman Theatre Symphony orchestra, the Shannon Male Quartette and Anton Brees, carillonneur of the Park Avenue Baptist church who rendered "O God Our Help In Ages Past" on the chimes of the church.

Kent Cooper, general manager of The Associated Press gave a brief address and then read news dispatches gathered via radio telegraph.

Official listening posts were established in all parts of the earth including Ceylon, Peru, Brazil, the Orient, Europe, the Arctic and Anarctic as well as on ships at sea.

PRESIDENT OF MEXICO'S MESSAGE TO MEXICANS

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 1.—(AP)—In a New Year's message to the Mexican people, President alles says that the benefits of peace and rigid economy have made possible reorganization of the country's finances and the establishment of national credit, thus assuring fulfillment of foreign obligations.

"In developing a nationalistic policy," he explained, "we have not been actuated by selfishness, provincial pride or dislike of foreigners. The government never refused to accept the benefits of international co-operation for development of the country. It does not think that liberty of action under constitutional laws passed in free but prudent exercises of its sovereignty, can obstruct the co-operation with other peoples who bring their moral energies and capital. We only ask them to obey our laws. Our purpose is that this foreign co-operation shall not become injurious to our national interests."

NEW LONDON FLAGMAN DIED OF HEART ATTACK

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Before Ambrose Edwards, of New London, rear end flagman on the New York to Boston passenger train, No. 194, over the New Haven road, died of a heart attack near South Norwalk early today, he placed explosive warnings on the tracks so that trains that might be following the express would know of the danger ahead. He had been sent back while the train stopped outside the station.

When Edwards, who had been employed by the railroad for twenty years, failed to answer a second signal recalling him to the train, Conductor A. J. Button, of New Haven, sent a man back to pick up the rear end flagman. He found Edwards dead between the tracks. The body was taken to South Norwalk. He leaves a family.

"ON THE INSIDE."

You often hear someone say enviously: "John Jones surely was lucky. He was 'on the inside'—and knew when and what to buy. That's how he made his pile."

It may not be possible for you to get "on the inside" of many investments—but you can be an insider and save money in the things you buy daily for your home, business and pleasure.

Reading the advertisements lets you in on the inside. You can read them—study them—compare values—make your decision—before even you enter a store. You don't have to take a chance on an unknown product. The outsider—the fellow who doesn't read the advertisements—has to buy anything he sees—and he may see wrong!

Read the advertisements and know the inside story before you place your good money in the buying market. Begin the new year right by reading The Bulletin's advertisements regularly.

230 PERSONS INJURED IN COLLAPSE OF GRAND STAND

About 235 Men, Women and Children Were Thrown Into the Wreckage When a Temporary Stand Fell During the Parade of Roses at Pasadena, Cal.—Thirty Persons Were Seriously Injured—200 Others Received First Aid Treatment—A Large Portion of the Injured Were Elderly Persons.

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1—(AP)—A day of roses and joy ended in sorrow for 235 persons who were precipitated into a tangled mass of wreckage when a temporary private grandstand collapsed during the parade of the tournament of roses here today. More than 30 cases of serious injuries were treated in the operating room of the Pasadena hospital and 200 others received treatment. Of these 100 left after first aid and went to their homes.

A few blocks distant from the scene of the tragedy, a woman fell from the top of a building while viewing the parade and was killed.

As the miles-long floral pageant neared its end, a frenzied big black horse, throwing its rider from the line of parade crushed through the crowd and seriously injured two men.

The collapse of the stands came without warning. Witnesses said it started to sway with a groaning noise and a moment later collapsed completely, throwing its human load of nearly 500 persons into a tangled mass below. Great confusion reigned for several minutes until the cooler heads in the crowd organized the rescue. The parade was halted temporarily and a general call was sent out for ambulances. In the meantime every form of conveyance in the vicinity was impressed into service and the injured were started toward the receiving hospital.

Streets along the line of parade had been roped off and automobiles were not allowed to enter them. As a result but few cars could be had at first to convey the injured persons.

The First Presbyterian church, across the street, was thrown open and a large number of injured were given first aid by physicians called from the crowd.

At the receiving hospital where but ten or twelve persons could be treated at one time, it was necessary to divert the cars of the Pasadena hospital, the only institution of its kind in Pasadena. Calls for assistance were sent in Los Angeles and nearby towns and ambulances were soon forthcoming with physicians and nurses.

To the Pasadena hospital where accommodations for such a large number of patients were not available, a truck was sent to a furniture house for mattresses and within half an hour the halls of the hospital were covered with injured persons lying on the mattresses.

A large portion of the injured were elderly persons and women and children who had been given the preference in seats from which the best view could be obtained.

A warm sunny day had resulted in the turning out of one of the greatest throngs that ever witnessed a tournament of roses parade and many temporary stands were erected on vacant lots and on front lawns in which seats were sold to those who wanted the best possible view.

Of those injured many were from other towns and cities. It was virtually impossible to secure an accurate check of all the victims, many of whom were taken directly to Los Angeles when it was evident that the hospital facilities here were overtaxed.

W. F. Vall, general manager of the Pasadena hospital, took personal charge of arrangements and called his entire staff of nurses and assistants many of whom were witnessing the parade. A motorcycle officer was dispatched down the line of parade calling for doctors and within an hour or so scores of physicians were at the hospital.

When word of the accident spread thousands of persons swarmed toward the hospital and it took the efforts of many police officers to prevent a panic being staged by those anxious for the safety of relatives and friends.

NEWS ABOUT THE PROPOSED CONTEST OF FIDDLERS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Weather, crops, and New Year's greetings—all leading topics of conversation in any country store right now—are running a poor second to the all New England fiddlers' contest. According to information which follows the filing of many entries for this unique competition, the "Stove Pipe" Leagues are devoting much time and breath to discussions to the relative merits of this fiddler and that one.

Down in Phoenixville, Conn., the natives are pulling hard for "Billy" Smith, the 75 year old fiddler of that district. Several years ago, he was leader and director of the famous "felt-boot" orchestra. There is some doubt of his entering this contest despite the fact that the community has pledged to stand the expenses. But, as Billy says, "It ain't the money part, the excitement of the big city might be too much for a lad 75 years old."

From Eastford, Conn., will come Jonathan F. Whitford. This fiddler is 73 years old and will bring along his wife as business manager. Whitford and Smith have played together and against each other at dances in Connecticut many times and are old buddies.

Here in Rhode Island are such figures as Dan Elliott, fiddler of the Old Soldiers' home in Bristol. Dan has a grievance these days. His age has been printed in several papers as only 65 while the veteran boasts of his 82 years with perhaps righteous pride. He also boasts of his ability to fiddle and is telling the world right now that he will win the title.

Of all ages from 60 up are the fiddlers and it will be a merry company when bows are drawn across many strings at the Albee Theater here Monday.

NEW FIRE ALARM BOX WITH WIRELESS SIGNAL

STONINGTON, Jan. 1—(AP)—A new type of fire alarm box which makes possible the transmission of a wireless signal with the carrier current signal and independent of the latter in case a wire is broken, has been patented by a local concern which manufactures apparatus of this kind.

As described, the new type sends its signals over the regular fire alarm wires and by wireless at the same time. If another box is using the wire the new box will automatically change the character of the wireless signal so it will not conflict with the other box wireless signal and will hold its own fire alarm signal and transmit it over the wire as soon as the other box to headquarters at the same time, or alarm is ended. That is, the signal is sent in duplicate. Both may get through follows as soon as the line is clear. one will go at once and the duplicate

MASONS IN TEMPORARY QUARTERS IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Occupancy of the premises known as number 87 Church street, for more than half a century was terminated by Masonic bodies, with a combined membership of more than 5,000 today when the organizations completed their removal to temporary quarters pending the erection of the new Masonic temple in Whitney avenue. The rooms in which meetings have been held for so many years are ot be given over to commercial use.

COFFIN OF KING TUT NOW IN CAIRO, EGYPT

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 1—(AP)—The general public soon will be able to gaze upon the magnificent golden coffin which the mummy of the Pharoah Tut-Ankh-Amen rested at Luxor for centuries of centuries.

The coffin was brought here today strongly guarded, and taken to the museum where it will be placed on view The mummy, was left in the Pharaoh's tomb at Luxor, which it is expected, will be opened to the public tomorrow.

39 CASES OF ALCOHOLISM IN NEW YORK NEW YEAR'S

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—New York counted its New Year's casualties today. Though two persons were shot to death and four others wounded by stray bullets, the most surprising result was declared to be the lack of a single death by alcoholism. Officials declared it to be a record under prohibition.

Thirty-nine cases of alcoholism were admitted to the four hospitals which bore the brunt of the New Year liquor poisoning. None of the 39 was serious.

One of the men shot to death was found in a boarding house room and had not been identified tonight. The other, Edward Van Dohlen, a chauffeur, was shot and killed while standing beside his taxicab. A 19-year old negro was arrested.

John Kusbrinck of Weehawken, fell down a flight of steps and broke his neck after attempting to get into the wrong house. He died before aid reached him.

Only five men charged with drunkenness were brought into court during the celebration and magistrate's courts this morning were almost as free of liquor cases. Prohibition headquarters was closed today and it was impossible to determine the number of arrests made, by the 150 agents who mingled with the celebrating crowds.

The medical examiners' office in Manhattan received reports of 28 deaths while the old year was passing and the new dawning. Three were accidental gas cases. None could be ascribe dto alcoholism.

CHICAGO WAS HILARIOUS AND NOISY NEW YEAR'S

CHICAGO, Jan. 1—(AP)—The new year came to Chicago last night with the usual hilarity and noise, but the "day after" failed to find the customary crowd of revellers repenting a too-alcoholic celebration in jail. Federal agents, posted in all cabarets and hotels with orders to arrest any violators of the Volstead act reported that they had nothing more exciting to do than watch the diners and dancers. No arrests were made and the few intoxicated persons picked up on the streets by police were later released.

Prohibition Administrator E. C. Yellowly said, today that the celebration "was entirely satisfactory", and that people who have known Chicago in the past told him it was the "dryest and most orderly observance of the holiday that they had ever seen."

He complimented cafe and hotel owners in their cooperation with his men. Of course, federal authorities admitted, there was some drinking but they said it was confined to private rooms. Both the cabaret owners and the public evidently took the prohibition forces' warnings seriously for once.

The streets were crowded until an early hour this morn ng and a carnival spirit prevailed, but except in a few cases, the celebrators were stimulated by nothing more than the spirit of the holiday. The mild weather doubtless accounted in part for the unusual crowds that roamed the down town thoroughfares.

A world premiere at the civic opera, with Mary Garden singing in Alfano's "Resurrection" attracted a great number of the city's socially prominent and all the theatres and moving picture houses reported record crowds.

HOW NEW YEAR WAS CELEBRATED IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The staccato popping of firecrackers, impromptu automobile parades and street dancing greeted the New Year here in a celebration which lasted the greater part of the night.

The pageantry in the oriental sections of the city was especially colorful, street concessions and side-shows adding to the holiday atmosphere, while multi-colored fireworks sparkled against the dumpery sky.

TOWN BEGINS A NEW YEAR WITH NOT A SINGLE ARREST

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—The year 1926 was greeted in various ways, by some in revelry, by others in the quiet of the home, or the solemnity of a watch night service. Either the prevalence of a better spirit or the result of a series of eleven liquor raids at Christmas time could account for the fact that New Year's morning found the blotter at the police headquarters clean. The cell room was vacant throughout the night and but one or two minor complaints were received. Chief of Police Allan McArthur's only duty during the forenoon was a pleasant one, namely to reply "Same to you and many of them," to the many friends of the department who called at the station house to leave the greetings of the young year.

Business was suspended throughout the city, the only indication of activity being on Main street where a body of carpenters was rushing the work of laying the rough flooring over the recently completed concrete foundation of the new Community Hotel.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF NEW YEAR GREETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—Watch night services conducted at St. Paul's Episcopal church by Rev. F. C. Williams, at the Methodist Episcopal church by Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead and at the A. M. E. Zion mission by Rev. David R. Overton were well attended and closed about two o'clock New Year's morning, following a social hour. Sermons were preached by the different pastors.

Large congregations observed the Feast of the Circumcision by attending the masses at St. Joseph's and St. Mary's churches, the 10:30 masses at each church being a high mass with special music.

ONLY ONE SERIOUS FIRE DURING THE TWELVE-MONTHS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—The lowest fire loss in many years prevailed during 1925, according to the records of Chief Henry J. Kelley of the Fire Department. 148 alarms were responded during the year, eighteen of these bell alarms, and one hundred and thirty responses were made by the two platoons of Engine Company No. 1 to still or telephone alarms. The heaviest loss was in the recent fire at the Windham National Bank building, this loss being greater than the entire total of the remainder for the year. Willimantic was fortunate in having but one fire of notable magnitude.

During the year the late Fire Chief James J. Tighe died and was succeeded in office by Henry J. Kelley. Michael J. English was advanced to assistant chief and placed in charge of one platoon. Acting Lieutenant Charles A. Reynolds succeeded to that position upon the promotion of Mr. English and he has charge of the second platoon. The regular members of Engine company No. 1 are: Amos Barber, William L. Smith, E. J. Manemann, Joseph J. Grimes, Eugene F. Martin and Michael F. Sullivan.

Among the many gifts which the members of Engine Company No. 1 have received during the holiday season was a box of cigars from the local Y. M. C. A., presented by General Secretary Albert B. Smith in recognition of the work of the company in extinguishing a recent chimney fire in the Y.

1—Lawrence, son of Clark and Wilhemina Girouard Johnson.

4—Bernard Francis, son of Bernard Francis and Mary Regan Smith.

5—Marie Claire Doris, daughter of Hosana and Emma Jean Berube.

6—Alice, daughter of Maurice and Rose Abramson Glaubinger.

8—Catherine, daughter of Samuel and Tillie Channer Gelfman.

Rose, daughter of Rosario and Mary Ldesetri Gullombardo.

13—William Wallace, son of Arthur G. and Anna M. Wallace Skinner.

14—Stepha, daughter of John and Josephine Walanska Katarzyniec.

Matrice Lorimer, son of Harry Clinton and Madeleine Marie Buckley Young.

16—Gilbert, son of Grover Cleveland and Mellie McGovern Milan.

17—James Pichard, son of James and Agnes Coughlin Briggs.

22—Gartano, son of Stefano and Giacinta Dercea Inmisco.

24—Gilbert Jr., son of Gilbert and Ruth A. Walker Blackburn.

26—Helen, daughter of Emilie and Helen Eva Barno Polubedko.

CAPT. F. P. FENTON BEGINS FOURTEENTH TERM JAN. 1ST

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—Captain Frank P. Fenton officially started on his 14th consecutive two-year term as town clerk of the town of Windham New Year's morning. "Cap." Fenton, as he is familiarly known throughout Connecticut began his new term and the new year by working in his office practically all the day. Captain Fenton's record as a town clerk is on a parallel with the best and the longest in the state. When only twenty-five years, he succeeded in the unexpired term, the late Charles H. Elmock who resigned to take over the local postmastership eight months before the closing of his two year term. That was twenty-seven years ago which places the age of the town clerk at 52. Twenty-six years ago last October he won the position in the town elections and repeated his victory in subsequent years, against eight strong opponents. For six years, including the last, he was endorsed by the republican party. Besides holding various other offices he has represented Old Windham a number of times in the state legislature and his friends have sought to have him run for governor. As one of the Connecticut delegates he was a staunch Al Smith man during the hectic democratic convention in New York.

HOTEL HOOKER AGAIN OWNED BY E. A. WINTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—The Hotel Hooker property has passed through two years of continual litigation to again return to the ownership of a local man, the hotel now being owned by E. A. Winter of this city. Mr. Winter is a former owner of the hotel and has been engaged in hotel business for forty years. He purchased the Hotel Hooker from the late Chauncey Hooker in 1903 upon the retirement of Mr. Hooker, and he conducted the business along successful lines for eight years.

Chicago people bought the property from the Pillsbury and difficulties started soon afterwards. Owners from Chicago came here and took possession and then left, carrying off what cash was on hand and leaving a heritage of bills. A constable was in charge at the desk on two different occasions. Finally the Manchester Savings Bank, of Manchester, N. H., which held a heavy mortgage on the property, instituted foreclosure proceedings and and at a sitting of the Windham county superior court last fall action was granted in favor of the plaintiffs. The bank took possession of the hotel December 7.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS FOUND 1925 A GOOD YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 1—About 825 popular makes of automobiles were purchased from Willimantic dealers in this city and vicinity during 1925 and about 800 used cars found a ready market. Last year's purchases bring the automobile census in Willimantic proper to about 2,250, with about that many more to be found in the trading area of 25,000 population. A noticeable variance in the number of sales by dealers is accounted for to some extent by the fact that for some of the makes of cars the selling territory in this vicinity is limited considerably more than it is for others, and a difference is also shown where the prices of cars run higher. As in the past four cylinder car and light sixes continue to be the best sellers, the outstanding reason being the first cost and the cost of operating and upkeep. All the local dealers stated that they were gratified with last year's business and looked forward to a boom year in 1926. It is evident that a large percentage of automobiles owned locally will not be adorned with the new chrome and blue letter registration markers until spring.

The following tabulation of cars sold during the year and their number does not necessarily show any preferred popularity for the individual makes as selling territory and cost play an important part in the sales: Dodge, distributing and retail, 346. Chrysler, 140. Hudson and Essex, 115. Chverblet, 101. Buick, 89. Studebaker, 47. Nash 46. Reo, including trucks, 43. Oldsmobile, 16. Hupmobile 16. Velie 8. Flints, 4. Auburn 3. Jewett 2. Paige 1. Ford sales are estimated at about 100.

JEWETT CITY

POSTMASTER NOTIFIED NO MAIL ON HOLIDAYS

Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 1—Postmaster William T. Crumb has received orders this week from Superintendent Yarrington, of the railway mail service, to dispatch no mail from this office on holidays either on train north at 2:35 p. m., or the 8:21 p. m., (boat-train) south.

At the annual meeting of the A. A. Young, Jr., Hose and Ladder Co., No. 1, held in the fire engine house parlor Thursday evening, officers were chosen. Austin (Red) Harris, who has acted as chief since the resignation of Chief Thomas Wakeley, a few months ago, refused for personal reasons, the unanimous re-election which was offered him.

The officers elected are: Walter (Bert) Field, chief; Edward Welch, first assistant; Harvey Maynard, second assistant; Leslie Hyde, secretary; Clovis Casavant, treasurer; Philip Jarvis, steward; Eugene J. Carrol, Joseph H. McCarthy, Dennis Griffin, committee of finance.

It is something of an unusual thing to find a small town that can turn out three class A. firefighters in a string. Jewett City has performed the feat, and there are possibly others. Chief Wakely and Chief Harris, and now comes Chief Field. No better man ever wore a helmet or held a pipe. With his election comes the opportunity to relate an actual occurrence that seems in place, now that he is chief. Last Monday morning, at the Gomes fire, with a high wind, and a bad proposition threatening every minute to "get away," the State of Maine express was held up because of pipe lines across the tracks. Several of the passengers and some of the train crew, came to the fire lines, to watch the game. Among the spectators was a fireman from Bangor. This remark was overheard as he pointed out a man to the conductor: "There's a chap that knows his job!" That man is the new chief.

Old Cluey Watson was over to the town Friday, to see Town Clerk John Welsh about getting "one of them air combination, two in one, fish and game licenses." The old man, mostly a hunter and trapper, but something of a fisherman, declared that he wanted to try through the ice for some of the big pickerel he couldn't induce to bite last summer, in one of the little visited ponds, that lie off to the south east of Mt. Misery, below the rise of Wiley brook. He told about an ice fishing experience down near his boyhood home in Maine. Jim Lankton. Henry Lurvey and he were camping one winter, a little south of the big Seboomook meadows, on the West Branch. "One of the Sabattias lakes was to be seen from a nearby rise" he said, "so we went over one day. The snow was toward three feet deep, so that by the time we had got down to the ice, we stood in a sort of rifle-pit, all had thrown out. It took some twenty minutes of smart chopping to cut down through thirty or thirty-two inches of ice. We had a hole about 12 inches across, at the bottom, the water looked black as ink. Jim baited his hook with a piece of raw meat cut from the shank of an otter we had caught the day before. There was no sign of life from the lake, the wind had begun to blow, the dry snow sifted in on us and, the water began to "plop, plop," in the hole. Henry was smoking out of the pit, eyeing the woods shores when, suddenly, he touched my elbow, pointing out to the foot of a low hummock.

On an old pine stump, up a little from the shore, there sat a long-bodied animal as black as a crow. We had all turned from the line, when a great jerk from behind, caused Jim to shout, 'A bite!'

The jerk was followed by another, which tugged him so that he took a leap across the hole. We all laid hold, and seized the line. Such tugs, I never felt from a fish. He made us all dance around the hole. The water fairly boiled in the hole. Gradually the fish spent its strength, and merely hung back when we tried to pull it up. We drew it in, and got its head entered at the bottom of the hole. It was then lifted out, a noble fish, a true togue trout."

"On the camp scales, that evening frozen hard, he weighed 17 pounds From living so long in this pond, a good part of the time under the ice, little or no light could ever make through, the spots on its sides and back had faded, and its fins were almost white; but its flesh was prime, and for three days, we lived on trout, broiled on the coals.

There was a good attendance at the Methodist watch meeting held at the church, Thursday evening. There was a song service, following which the ladies' class gave a number in which Mrs. Merton Bartlett and Mrs. A. C. Burdick recited familiar song lines. Delwin Martin, of Lisbon, had a part of interest. The men's class sang Joy to the World, and L. D. Howe gave one of his interesting and characteristic addresses with the Men's Class, as his subject. The Home Talk proved entertaining. A social hour followed, at which time sandwiches, cake and coffee, brought midnight cheer. The Trip to China, a mission programme for the coming year, was outlined. Mrs. Carter's class told about the King's Herald, with the candle light service proving of much interest. The impressive altar service at 11:45, found all present in devotions at the passing of the year, with the coming of the new day. Good wishes marked the closing period.

Mrs. Dora Ballou entertained New Year's day, two Scotch lassies, friends from New York, Miss Margaret Comrie and Miss Mary Beetie.

The Connecticut company gave double service both north and south all day Friday.

Miss Delphine Bauregarde is visiting relatives in New Bedford, expecting to remain a week.

The three masses at St. Mary's church Friday forenoon, were all largely attended, the final service being high mass with benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

The mercury rose to 38 for the first time in a week, making New Year's day the mildest for seven days. There was a total suspension of business, few people used the state road, the day was quiet, without event.

Since the story appeared in The Bulletin, telling of the meteorite which passed over the town Tuesday evening, dozens of people have reported seeing it. None, however, seemed to mistake the display for a shooting star.

WITH DEATH GOES MARKET VALUE OF MOVIE STARDOM

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 1—(AP)—Why the public will pay money to read a dead man's plays or hear a dead man's music, and yet invariably will spurn the acting of a film star who has died, is a question which perplexes motion picture producers.

Particularly puzzling it is when it is considered that the average film fan never sees the living body of his favorite actor, but only the reflection of that body upon the screen. Yet when a screen celebrity is buried, his other self upon the film is buried too, just as effectively, it seems, as if the actor and his celluloid counterpart had been boxed in the same coffin.

When John Bunny, the popular comedian of early movie days, died during the height of his fame, it was accepted as a foregone conclusion by officials of Vitagraph the company which had featured him in scores of productions that his motion picture immortality was assured. His death they thought was an opportunity to demonstrate a great movie miracle—the power that is in the films to make a man live on beyond the grave, as real as lifelike to his audiences as if he never had died.

But the public dropped John Bunny with emphatic suddenness. His company found Bunny's pictures were a drug on the market. He was dead; the papers had said so, and film fans declined to pay money to see the shadow of a man scarcely any of them had ever seen in the flesh. His pictures died with him.

When Sidney Drew lied an attempt was made to continue showing the delightful comedies of married life in which he and Mrs. Drew had risen to popularity. The attempt failed.

Similar were the experiences with Harold Lockwood, Olive Thomas, Jack Pickford's wife, and with Wallace Reid—invariably the public rejecting films which had the featured stars been alive, would have run on and on until the celluloid wore out.

After a man sees it himself he always wonders what drew such a fool crowd.

PERIQUE OBACCO GROWING A PECULIARLY LOUISIANA CROP

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 1—(AP)—In the parish of St. James, a short way from New Orleans, is a historic and picturesque industry, infinitesimal in comparison with many of the other bountiful agricultural crops of the state, but which is peculiarly Louisianian. This is the Perique tobacco industry, alone in the world.

First grown many years ago by an Acadian whose name the tobacco now bears, its cultivation has been kept up continuously ever since by direct lineal descendants of the original M. Perique.

Cultivation is confined to a very small area on the banks of the Mississippi, where a favorable combination of soil and climate is particularly adapted to its growth. This tobacco, which finds its chief use as a smoker for mixtures, is exceeding strong, with a distinct flavor and aroma. Not many more than 500 acres are given over to its growth.

Perique is raised in much the same manner as any other sun tobacco, the land being properly plowed over and the rows set about five feet apart. The seed is sown early in January and replanted in March or April. The harvesting is done in July. The tobacco then is hung in the sheds to dry, stripped and placed in presses until the following March or April when it is ready for the market. Frequently, however, it is not sold for three or four years, as Perique, like wine, improves with age.

The yield is about 500 pounds to the acre and its price fluctuates with the demands of the market.

SUBSTITUTES FOR ENGLISH TENNIS TERMS CRITICIZED

PARIS, Jan. 1—(AP)—"Lob," "smash" and "drive," as applied to tennis are three words the translation of which into French has stumped the French sporting writers in a campaign to eliminate the English vocabulary from their articles on sport events.

The best they have been able to find is "chandelle" for lob, "coup de Longueur" for drive and "soup erase" for smash.

Jean Samazeuilh, former champion of France at tennis, takes exception to the accuracy and practicability of the translation and in an article in a sports weekly, asks the players to ignore the scribes, and especially to execute the shots well on the courts, let the writers call them what they wish.

CAILLAUX ON SENATE RETURN OFFERED SEAT OF HIS TRIAL

PARIS, Jan. 1—(AP)—"To the left," replied Joseph Caillaux, when upon his first visit to the senate as a newly elected member, he was asked where he wanted to sit.

Upon reaching the seat to which the usher escorted him, Caillaux hesitated, looked about him as if perturbed and a rush of blood to the head reddened the former Minister's extremely bald pate.

The Senatorial seat to which he had been shown was the identical one in which as an accused before the High Court, he had sat for over a month during the famous trial in 1920.

It was explained that no offense had been meant but by coincidence it was the only seat that happened to be vacant "to the left."

DANIELSON

BOROUGH SEEKERS FOR DESERT FOUND PROVIDENCE DAMP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 1.—"You can't believe what you see in the papers." This has been preached from time to time since dinasour eggs were first incubated, some 10,000,000 years ago, isn't it?

Even newspapermen are beginning to believe the charge is true—at least at times. New Year's eve an early afternoon edition of a Providence paper arrived in Danielson with scare headlines telling of the dire things that were going to happen to people who had made reservations at Providence hotels for a New Year's eve party and, undoubtedly with a view to having what is known as a good time—a wild time, in fact.

The news story said that Providence was to be as dry as a pre-historic bone. Flask-toters were to be pinched at their dinner tables. Plain clothes men, scattered among the guests, were to see to this. A police commissioner was quoted as to what was to be done. It was related at length what the orders were. Anyone taking a drink would find himself locked up, in addition to feeling perfectly foolish about the whole preceding on New Year's morning.

Danielson people in numbers had Providence hotel reservations for the evening, and as the word was quickly passed about that everything was all off there was gloom impenetrable among the reservationists.

Well, the narrator of this tale talked with some of them New Year's day and inquired as to how things worked out.

"We should have brought our bathing suits! I have seen a lot of booze at parties in my time," said one man, "but never before have I been engulfed in a tidal wave of it! If there were any plain-clothes men about they must have been under the tables and unable to get up!"

There's the story as is. Anybody who was over at the Rhode Island capital tells the same yarn. Small wonder that "you can't believe what you see in the papers." One thing that can be believed is that human nature remains much the same as ever—hazarding always, disobedient, venturesome. An unfortunate, but solemn fact!

THIS TAX MAN HE'LL GET YOU, IF YOU DON'T WATCH OUT!

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 1.—In these early days of a new year the average person is not apt to be giving attention to such an unwelcome subject—to the people who pay—as borough taxes. There is one man who has the subject on his mind—Sidney H. Perry, borough collector of taxes.

Mr. Perry needs no introduction to the people of Danielson. He has lived here a long time. A good citizen of long standing, but only recently introduced to political life. The Bulletin may be taking something away from Mr. Perry this morning in relating what is to be set forth here—stealing his thunder, it may be said. But there is no special reason why the good people of this community should wait until the annual borough reports appear in April to learn that they have a tax-collector who is making a remarkably good record. Up to the first of the year, Mr. Perry had collected all but about $1,000 due on the list last certified. That, in itself, is a notable achievement. It reaches not to Mr. Perry's ideal of tax collecting, however. Likely he will pardon being quoted as saying that "I'll have it all collected before the fiscal year ends."

Of special interest is the intent of Collector Perry to get the taxes on houselots about the borough, bought in boom times or in a moment of enthusiasm by people who have decided they want "to build." These lots are in various sections within the borough limits. Owners of them never think of paying taxes upon them—somehow. These owners owe the borough and they owe the town.

Collector Perry has his plans all made to clear up this situation. Unless he gets the taxes due, he sells the lots and takes the taxes out of the proceeds. The town probably will do likewise. There is no good reason why this should not be done.

Indulging in prophecy, an exceedingly dangerous thing to do, it may be ventured here that Mr. Perry will be tax collector again next year, if he wants to be. The borough has the services of a man well worth while. It is not likely to overlook that fact.

NEW YEAR'S HIGH MASS INSPIRING AT ST. JAMES'

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 1.—Repeating at the high mass at St. James' church at 10.30, New Year's morning the musical part of the high masses at the Christmas services, a choir of the parish, under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Gareau, organist and director, contributed to the spiritual inspiration of the service and the significance of the dawning of a new year. Not in years has the musical part of any service at this church been so impressive.

Rossi's mass in D was sung. The choir presented the chorus numbers with great beauty and the solo numbers were particularly fine. The duet inthe Gloria was given by Miss Lucille Caron, soprano, and Mrs. Eva Bodo, alto. In the Benedictus the duet was by Mrs. Albert Bernier, soprano, and Mrs. Eva Bodo, alto. The baritone solo in the Credo was sung by Ovila Bernier. The solo of the Agnus Dei was by Miss Margaret Sullivan, soprano, and the duet by Miss Lucille Caron and Mrs. Eva Bodo. The service was brought to a close with benediction, Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., the pastor, was the celebrant of the mass and preached the sermon.

Unexpectedly, at the close of the service the organist and the members of the choir were invited to the vestry by Father Deschaux, who congratulated all and presented gifts of candy and cigars.

St. James' parish is particularly fortunate in the musical talent in its membership. A choir of 50 voices, at least, is available, for the formation of a choir that would be unsurpassed in this section of the state.

Judge James N. Tucker of East Killingly advances a suggestion well worthy of the consideration of the people of Killingly. It has to do with what might be termed here the formation of a Killingly Historical society.

Killingly has an intensely fascinating history, running back through the years for considerably over two centuries. Several publications contain much that is interesting about the town of Killingly, but no one of them nor all of them combined contains a great deal about Killingly, even covering the past century, that really should be preserved for posterity.

The task of accumulating all of the material that is available through research is too great for any individual to undertake. A score of people might do it. A hundred people would accomplish even greater results. Once accumulated this material, dealing with the social, spiritual, industrial and other phases of life from generation to generation could be assembled, co-ordinated and edited into such numbers of volumes as might be required. It would be a wonderful record for Killingly's people of the future and no less so for the people of this day and age. Too little about Killingly's history is known today.

If Judge Tucker's suggestion be accepted and taken up with enthusiasm, there can be but little doubt of the great good to accrue. Himself possessed of really great knowledge of the town's history, Judge Tucker must be nominated at once for a place in the proposed historical society. All of this comes to mind through a discussion of East Killingly's manufacturing activities and of the prominent place it held in that respect in eastern Connecticut's industrial centers of a half century ago.

The Acme Products company, which recently purchased the Aseptic Products company of East Killingly, is engaged in making repairs to a dam just east of and across the street from the mill of the concern. This dam has become materially weakened. Cement in quantities is being poured into the structure, some machinery is being removed from the mill to be replaced by more modern machines. In the meantime, the operatives are having a winter vacation. Draining of the pond back of the dam has brought to sight ruins of an old dam near which, 50 to 100 years ago, stood an old mill long since forgotten by practically all of the residents of East Killingly. The significance of the ruin is that within the town of Killingly for over so long manufacturing has gone on, as it probably always will, all competition to the contrary notwithstanding.

Speaking of headache cures, the market on these conceptions was high on New Year's day.

The Cloud Digger's mild period arrived New Year's day. One can forgive him for being four days late, there is such satisfaction in doing so.

Good wishes all around for the opening of the new bridge over the Assawaga river in Main street. The surfacing isn't finished, but that's a minor matter compared to making the detour that has now been done away with.

Motorists who have no 1926 numbers for their cars were very good about not operating the machines New Year's day and obligating officers to reprimand them about the matter. It was the best New Year in this respect. Plenty of cars were running about, but they had new markers on.

Warden Walter Anderson is to be a speaker at the meeting of the Danielson Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening next. This is the meeting of the organization that may mean great good to Danielson.

Walter Dawson of Worcester and George Rawson of East Providence were here New Year's day, arranging for the funeral of their father, Royal C. Dawson, who died Thursday afternoon at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, as told in Friday's Bulletin.

Souvenirs that were valuable and very fine were received by members of Putnam lodge of Elks New Year's eve at the silver anniversary of the organization. Vaudeville and good things to eat were provided in abundance by the committee in charge.

Today (Saturday) is another holiday for a great number of people who are employed in manufacturing plants that are closed until next Monday.

There is consideration, but no definite arrangement, of a plan to build a chapel of St. James' parish at Connecticut Village in the northerly section of Danielson for the convenience of the great number of parishioners who live in the immediate vicinity.

Vaudeville at the Ohpheum theatre New Year's afternoon and evening provided about all the public diversion that the holiday offered in Danielson.

A resident of Danielson for more than half a century, Miss Catherine Whalen died New Year's afternoon at her home on Dyer street. She has been in poor health for a long time. Miss Whalen was a native of Ireland and with other members of her family came here as a young girl. She is among the oldest of the members of St. James' parish. She leaves her sister, Johanna and a brother Richard, with whom she made her home.

Radio fans here heard two 2L0, London, just before 8 o'clock New Year's night. The re-broadcast came in with strength, but not steadily, being wavy and fading out at times, but the British announcer could very distinctly be heard announcing the station.

LAUREL GLEN

Mrs. William Puttaker is visiting friends in New York.

Many from this place attended the anniversary party at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roodes' Saturday evening.

Other guests were present from Bristol, R. I., Westerly, R. I., Voluntown and Pendleton Hill. After dancing, sandwiches, cake, coffee and candy were served.

Mrs. Margaret Schmidt and grandsons are spending the holidays in New York.

The Liberty bell at midnight Thursday was successfully rung for the first time in 90 years. Microphones, radio amplifiers and broadcasting stations carried the tones throughout the United States.

Vapors stop Colds

VAPORS reach a cold directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks VapoRub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime:—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin (like a poultice or plaster) "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

NEW TELEPHONE MANAGER HAS MOVED TO TOWN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 1—Ralph Booth, the new manager of the Putnam district of the Southern New England Telephone company, who assumed charge today has moved here into the second floor of the Ernest B. Kent home, which Dr. Karl T. Phillips recently vacated. Mr. Booth is married and has one child, a little girl. His predecessor, Henry S. Lyon, who has been promoted to the Norwich managership, expects to move there as soon as he can find a suitable residence.

REVIEW OF 1925 BUSINESS PLEASES TOWNSPEOPLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 1—The review of business transactions in Putnam for 1925 contained in the Bulletin of Friday morning was read here with a good deal of interest. The volume of it as indicated in the figures pertaining to the manufactures; the merchants and the banks, was gratifyingly large. Only a few people here realized what a fine showing Putnam has made in the past year, handicapped as it was by the financial reverses that occurred in the fall of 1924, when the First National Bank closed its doors.

New Year's Eve in Putnam was celebrated in a quiet but very general way. There were numerous small parties and two large affairs, B. P. O. E. lodge of Elks and Cargill Council, K. of C. keeping open house, where suppers were served and an entertainment program carried out. For the Elks it was also a celebration of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the local lodge. There were about 250 members of the order in attendance and enertainment was provided by fifteen vaudeville artists, many of the features being of an exceptionally high type. On the previous evening the Red Men had a party in their hall which also was largely attended and was highly enjoyable.

STORK DEPRIVED BABY OF FIRST HONORS FOR 1926

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 1—A mere ten minutes prevented the son born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Keith from having the honor of being the first 1926 baby to reach Putnam. The stork left the young man as the old year was slipping out, the fabled bird reaching the Day Kimball hospital Thursday night, just ten minutes before the dawn of the New Year.

Mr. Keith is a member of the firm of L. M. Keith & Sons, and one of the commissioners of Windham county, he having been appointed a few minutes ago by Governor Trumbull, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Daly.

JOHN KENARY'S DEATH RECALLS HIS FINE TRAITS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 1—The news of the death of John Kenary Wednesday night at his home in Dayville, caused sincere and widespread regret in Putnam where he had lived more than 25 years, until a year ago. For all that time he had been the head of the weaving department of the Putnam Woolen Company of which Silas M. Wheelock is the agent. The hundreds of people who had worked under him and the other hundreds who were his friends and acquaintances held him in high esteem.

He was never in public affairs and his career was without ostentation, but no one ever led a more blameless life or more fully deserved the tributes that are being paid him by local citizens. At the time of his removal from here, which followed soon after the death of his wife two years ago, his associates at the mill made him a handsome gift and those who contributed to it included every one connected with the company. Three children survive, John Kenary of Milbury, Mass., Mrs. Minnie O'Neill, wife of John J. O'Neill, postmaster at Dayville, and Mrs. Grace Welch, who was married a few months ago to a Worcester man and went there to live.

A number of boys from Putnam and surrounding towns went on a holiday trip to New London Wednesday. The trip was under the auspices of the Connecticut Y. M. C. A. and was similar to the Hartford trip a number of Putnam boys enjoyed last year. The boys visited the United States submarine base which included the inspection of the submarines, the torpedo store room and the gyroscope room. Other places of interest which the party visited on the sight-seeing trip were the New London ship and Engine company, which makes the Deisel engine used in the submarines, Fort Griswold and Groton Monument, New London historical library, the million dollar pier and the section base of the U. S. Coast Guard service, the Old Town mill, Nathan Hale school house and Ye Ancient Burial ground.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Ingraham their daughter, Miss Helen Ingraham became the bride of George Kaiser of Putnam. The ceremony was performed by Rev Stephen Livingston. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Babbitt were the attendants. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser will be at home in their newly furnished housed on Barrow street.

Miss Isabel Crawford, missionary among the Indians for many years is to give an address at the Brandy Hill Baptist church, Sunday at 2.15 in the afternoon. Miss Crawford, is a writer of ability and has traveled much through the Holy Land, Egypt and Europe. She is to speak of the native of India and his characteristics, also give the twenty-third psalm in the sign language of the Indian.

Miss Frances Obletz has returned to her studies at the New York city institute of music after a short vacation with her mother on Providence street.

Mrs. H. L. Pease and daughter, Miss Edith, were visiting friends in Worcester on Thursday.

At the High school auditorium Tuesday, January 5, the next local Well Child Conference will be held. A representative of the state bureau as well as a local doctor and nurses will be present.

The senior class of Tourtelotte Memorial High school, at North Grosvenordale, is to conduct a dance at the school. The proceeds will be added to a growing fund by which seniors there are enabled to take the annual senior trip to Washington, during the spring vacation.

Miss Ellen Kimball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kimball of North Grosvenordale, has returned to her studies at Columbia University, New York, after spending her vacation at home.

Miss Madoria Therrien, a nurse at Boston Memorial hospital is the guest of her sister, Miss Rose Therrian, at North Grosvenordale.

Petty Officer Eugene Dearing of the U. S. S. Camden, stationed at New London is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Hogan and family at their home on Tatem street. Mr. Dearing will shortly sail for Panama.

Miss Florence Tourtelotte and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Johnson of Hartford have been guests of Mrs. Ada Tourtellotte of South Main street.

A daughter born to Mr. and Mrs Frederick Gwyer at Philadelphia, and daughter of the late Henry Bowen, eldest son of Henry C. Bowen of Woodstock. Mrs. Gwyer is well known in this vicinity as she formerly lived in Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Okerstrom of Watermill, Long Island have been visiting friends in Putnam and Pomfret. Mrs. Okerstrom, before her marriage was Miss Lillian Swejt of this city.

Allaire Dumond of Battey street is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital where he recently underwent an operation for appendicitis. He is making a good recovery.

Miss Rose McCauley of Bristol is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McCauley of Church street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Prince and little daughter Florence attended a reunion of Mrs. Prince's family in Milford, Mass.

Mrs. Bertha Hoffman and her daughter, Miss Edna Hoffman, of Providence have been guests of Mrs. Hoffman's sister, Mrs. C. M. French of Belleville street.

Miss Hathaway of Providence was the guest for the New Year's holiday of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rogers at the Putnam Inn.

PINCHED POCKETBOOK CAUSES VIENNA TO SHIFT MEAL HOURS

VIENNA, Jan. 1—(AP)—A pinched pocketbook is responsible for a rearrangement of the habits of the best society people in Vienna, as far as meals are concerned. Families are trying to enjoy life as much as possible on a small income and in order to take in dances and music have abolished the evening dinner.

Instead, tea is now taken an hour later, generally at six o'clock so that sons and daughters working in the city can participate. Circles of friends take this meal at each others flats in turn, and there is dancing to wireless or the gramaphone until nine. This is followed by a "hot-sausage" meal with which horse-radish is served together with any sandwiches left over from tea.

The new custom is considered not only economical, but tends to keep society in better condition physically, ladies preserving the slimness so necessary for present-day fashion.

DEATH KNELL SOUNDED FOR BELL HANGING PROFESSION

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—Modern scientific inventions, which have spelled the ash heap for old-fashioned usages, have sounded the death knell for another once respected and prosperous vocation—bell hanging.

Like the makers of clipper ships, hoop skirts and the sundry other developments of the past which have come and gone, struck down by the march of progress and fashion, the bell hanger of today—and his class is a handful is a man virtually without a job.

This city, which less than 30 years ago required the constant attention of hundreds of bell-hangers, now finds use for less than half-a-score. Electric doorbells are blamed for the passing of bell-hanging artisans.

P. Warner, owner of an tiny West Side shop, outside of which hangs the same sign he placed there years ago when he first opened for business, is one of the few surviving members of the rear guard of bell-hangers. A few ancient homes, clinging to relics of the past still claim his services. But electricity, he said has ruined his business.

When Werner, then a young man, first started hanging door-bells, the trade was then in its heyday. Father Knickerbocker, tired of thunderous knockers, then in vogue demanded a new method of announcement and bells—operated by the pulling of a lever outside, which set bells in the home jingling—came into being.

For a brief few decad s the jingling bells were pre-eminent. Bell hangers were proud of their art. For years their ingenious arrangements, elaborate or simple, according to the householder's taste, announced the visitor. Some even played music.

Then came electricity. The public took up the new wrinkle of science, and electric door-bells, operated by the mere pushing of a button, rudely ousted their clumsier predecessor.

"What will be next?" soliloquized Werner. "I don't know. Scientists say the man who has no vocation needs no vacation."

RED PIMPLES ON FACE AND BACK

Very Sore and Itched all the Time. Healed by Cuticura.

"I had great big, red pimples on my face and back. The pimples festered and were very sore and itched all the time. Sometimes my clothing irritated them so that I could not sleep at night. The trouble lasted about six months. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and could see a difference the second time I tried them. I continued the treatment and was completely healed in a month." Mrs. Park Heads Women's Fight For World Court

Mrs. Maud Wood Park, a profound student of World Affairs and counselor on the Legislation for the National League of Women Voters, will head the Committee that will observe action on the World Court resolution in Congress. Although the league wants America in the World Court, Mrs. Park claims that there will be real feminine warfare having the swords of the Nation beaten into plough-shares.

LODGE GIVES SOME NEW IDEAS ON FUNCTIONING OF THE BRAIN

LONDON, Jan. 1—(AP)—New ideas about the functioning of the brain were set forth here by Sir Oliver Lodge, the noted scientist, who contended that the popular theory that the brain feels is entirely incorrect.

"The brain does not see or hear or feel, nor does it plan or hope or love," said Sir Oliver in a lecture.

"These things belong to a different region. Some perhaps we have not begun to formulate."

Man do as ships. Perhaps wireless door-bells. Or telepathy.

NEDISH PRINCE A POET AND DESCRIPTIVE RADIO LECTURER

STOCKHOLM, Jan. —(AP)—The versatility of Sweden's post-Prince, Duke William of Soedermanland, second son of King Gustav V, was demonstrated by his debut as a radio reporter.

Earlier in the year he treated the Swedish radio audience with a description of his big game hunting experiences in India and Africa. With all four of the Scandinavian countries joined in an hour of his father's visit to Finland, which he also was a member of the party.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a wallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

THE STALLED CONFERENCE

In spite of the proclaimed desire of the miners to get back to work it does not appear that the conference between the representatives of the miners and the operators have made any progress. Even the fact that they are reported to have agreed to remain in session until an agreement is reached does not appear to have cleared the way perceptibly.

On the other hand there have developed the same inclinations to get what is demanded or to take nothing. The idea that there can be but one plan under which such a dispute can be adjusted is preposterous. If there is a disposition to obtain a settlement in accord with the facts, and not strive for special advantages through the exercise of pressure, there is no obstacle standing in the way of an adjustment. The conference has in fact disclosed no different situation than

Isn't there someone who can, withstanding the Pinchot plan and when the operators were agreeable to a conference for agreeing upon certain points and submitting the rest to arbitration with the miners going back to work at the pay received when they struck and which they have been what existed when the miners were dewhich time at least the result of the arbitration should be known.

For the miners to demand the restrictions of the Pinchot plan, or the check off and no arbitration simply means that they can expect no concessions from the operators. There is no reason why the coal companies should be the collecting for the maintenance of the miners' union. To insist upon it indicates a weakness in the organization itself. When the miners refuse to have anything to do with arpromised until next September, by plan that would tie the hands of an investigating board to either favor the miners or to do nothing, it cannot be regarded as anything but a one sided proposition.

The miners and the operators are in conference but the coal companies are going to feel the effects of whatever is don if they want to get anthracite. Any settlement should therefore take the consumer into consideration. His burden has been too heavy for too long, and he certainly cannot get interested in anything which threatens to make the situation worse. He knows full well today that he is by no means dependent upon hard coal.

THE MUNSEY WILL

Even as his acts during his lifetime were of widespread interest, so is the manner in which he has disposed of his large estate by will. Going to New York unknown with $40 Mr. Munsey is estimated to have amassed as much as $40,000,000. He bitration and would abide only by a of the fact that he had become a resident of New York city. He always maintained his interest in his Maine birthplace and Maine institutions. This he continues to display in the disbursement of his fortune. Hospitals and colleges get substantial gifts.

Mr. Munsey was a man who directed his own affair without sharing his enterprises with others. He preferred to act alone rather than in partnership, and yet he was not unmindful of the important service that was rendered by those he placed in positions of trust. Naturally he was obliged to depend upon the services of many persons, and it is fitting that he should give recognition to the manner in which they had responded to his interests.

That Mr. Munsey should have decided upon this course of action without giving any inkling of it in advance simply emphasizes another Munsey trait. He was not given to telling what he was planning to do businesswise. Actions are what counted with him. He was satisfied that he was right in devoting his money to such a great institution and it is certainly a bequest that will get approval from one end of the country to the other. His will was as characteristic as his big deals.

THE BAN ON BULBS

Some time ago by the action of the horticultural specialist of the department of agriculture a ban was placed upon the importation of certain foreign bulbs and roots because of the danger of bringing pests into the country that would seriously endanger cultivation here. It was maintained that there were enough such pests which had been admitted and that the need existed for taking this step in order to prevent conditions from getting worse.

It was an order that was not well received. It was subjected to the charge that it was being done for the exclusion of foreign competition to monopolize the domestic bulb industry and to exact higher prices from the buyers. The result of opposition was that a hearing was ordered by the secretary of agriculture to determine the merits of the protests and to permit the disclosure of any additional facts. If it was shown that there was a sound basis for modifying the ruling it was understood that the department was prepared to act. If it could not be shown that the order was unjust it would remain in force.

As the result of the evidence presented the secretary of agriculture has reached the conclusion and this week announced that the order would remain unchanged. He had not been furnished facts to justify the removal of the ban which was ordered for the first of the year. It therefore is effective. It is not a case of enacting a larger tariff on the bulbs, but of excluding them.

The pests which are believed to accompany the foreign bulbs do not confine their depredations to such. They threaten certain garden truck, especially onions, and for the purpose of fighting them the policy of striking at the source and keeping out trouble is resorted to in addition to local measures.

With the ban upheld it remains to be seen whether all the dire effects of it are going to result. Apparently the department is convinced that its action is not only justified but actually needed. If conditions develop to the contrary it is of course going to be entirely possible to modify it. It was nevertheless well that the protest was given the benefit of a careful hearing.

THE SHENANDOAH INQUIRY

After a thorough probing of the circumstances surrounding the loss of the Shenandoah the naval court of inquiry has come to the conclusion that no blame can be attached to the officers or crew of the ship, that the accident was the result of the storm, something entirely beyond the control of anyone, that the highest praise is due to all in the handling of the airship and that despite the loss of this dirigible the development of the lighter than air craft should go forward for the price involved in such a disaster is what must "inevitably be paid in the development of any new and hazardous art."

The exoneration of the officers and crew from blame does not come with surprise. Even as the court finds, it has been recognized that there were conditions to content with which were beyond human control. The many questions which have been raised concerning the commander of the airship being ordered to make the flight over his protest, the changes which had been made in the structure of the ship and the alteration of the valves were given consideration by the court with the result that the conclusions show the critics to have failed to prove their case except the court does hold that the reduction in the number of values was "inadvisable."

The competence of the officers and crew is established and it was a question of judgment which determined the guidance of the ship when the coming of the storm was learned.

In the opinion of the court there was no indication of incompetence but rather were there "skill, courage and fine qualities of leadership," and it finds that while the valve changes were such as to not damage the ship under normal conditions and the present type of parachutes add to the risk of handling such ships the valve changes probably should not have been so extensive and an adaptable type of parachute should be developed. The report finds that the criticisms were for the most part injustified. How it could have been different is hard to see.

THE MOTORIST PAYS

How important a factor the automobile is in providing taxes for the state is revealed by the receipts for the last fiscal year showing that an aggregate of $7,062,553 was received from the motor vehicle registrations and the tax collected on gasoline sales.

It is the automobile that has resulted in the increased demands for good roads, better roads and permanent roadbeds, and it is evidenced from the report of the state highway department, that it is the automobile owners who are contributing heavily to this work. There was nearly a million and a half collected from the gasoline levy, all of which together with the registration fees have gone for the purpose of highway construction and maintenance. The motorist pays, but what would motoring be without the highway results obtained from his dollars?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Getting started with a new set of resolutions is often like driving on an icy highway without chains.

The man on the corner says: Was the New Year ushered in or did it just force its presence on us?

Those who say, "the old year made good and the new year looks good," will never be rated as pessimists.

If there was a billion Christmas cards used last week, how close a second did the New Year's crop run?

The new number plates give the impression that the state is being filled with last year's New York cars.

Even though it is claimed that volcanoes are heating Alaska, New England will be satisfied to get along without them in the coal strike and beyond.

From the way the governor of Texas has been issuing pardons one might suppose that she planned to turn the prisons into community houses or state country clubs.

The miners and the operators are said to be getting to a better understanding of each other. Well, that's something and it doesn't interfere with the use of substitutes.

Senator Copeland of New York says will not be long before the restaurant system will put an end to home cooking, but for the satisfaction of the inner man we hope he is wrong.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Our outward faculties have been provided in response to our inward needs. They are the channels through which these wants find expression. As man slowly emerged from the lower forms of life during a long evolutionary process, new needs were constantly being asserted, then this, that and the other faculty began to develop as the instrument by which need might become known. Beyond all question this is the way in which eyes, ears, nose, tongue and vocal cords came into existence, in order that there might be sight, sound, smell and speech. The eyes were placed in front of the head because the things to be seen were mostly in front of him. The outward world may make it necessary to modify this arrangement. When the eyes were made and placed there were no automobiles to contend with. If present conditions continue it would not be at all strange that in the future we should have a set of beings with one eye in the forehead, another one in the back of the head and one on each side just under the ear.

There are many thermometers by which we measure our national prosperity. In financial circles the standard of measurement would probably be the amount of surplus gold in our treasury. The manufacturer would rate it by the demand of the market for his goods. The economist by the balance of trade in our favor. Colleges and universities of course have quite a different yard stick. The urgent demand for entrance to the seats of learning seems to show that there is not only surplus money but what is far better still an urgent desire for a liberal education. In general the almost unparalleled Christmas trade this year is quite sufficient to show that as a people we are closing the year in a very hopeful condition, as far as material prosperity is concerned. Is it equally so along other lines?

At the beginning of a new year it is quite natural to take the backward look, and also (and this is vastly more important) to take the forward step. The past is eternally past and we cannot change it by one iota. "Words," said Carlyle, "when once uttered are carved on eternity, and, whatever we may do they stand for weal or woe." In spite of this unchangeableness there is reason why, at certain times, we should take the backward look, and one of the most natural times for doing this is at the close of the old year. As we scan the year of 1925 we shall find that its thoughts and deeds divide themselves into two general classes, first the commendable, and second, the regrettable. When Paul says: "Forgetting those things which are behind," he evidently does not mean everything, because in most lives there is more that is commendable than regrettable. In most lives there is more of sunshine than of shadow, more pleasure than pain, more joy than sorrow.

Have you made up your mind what you are going to be this year? At first you may sneer or smile at such a question. You may be inclined to say beforehand what he is going to be! There are so many forces that enter into the destiny of one's life that self-determination is apt to be sidetracked at any time. Admitting that such forces exist and are operative, still it is just as reasonable and logical for a man to plan what he is going to be, as to what he is going to do, or where he is going to go, because what he does is the outgrowth particularly of what he is. No one doubts the existence of forces that tend to swerve him from his main purpose, still in the great majority of cases men are what they will be, provided they are persistent and courageous enough to make their desires effective. What a strong will can do along the line of self-development borders upon the miraculous.

As a good illustration of the above we need nothing more concrete than the great life that has just ended in New York. The story of Frank A. Munsey's career reads more like a romance than actual history. Coming to the big city with neither money nor friends; with no sort of "pull" that would set him on the highway of success, still by dint of personality, readiness for hard work, and a strong faith in his own inherent capacity, he rose to be the greatest newspaper publisher that the country has yet produced. There have been greater editors than he, men who have carried greater weight in political matters, men who have moulded public opinion far more than he did, but we have had no man of greater sagacity along the publishing line. His almost unparalleled success was the development of what he thought he could be, and what he tried to be. His life is an example of what push and energy can accomplish.

We may be quite sure of one thing, that the first step, the first forward step, into 1926 may be a right step, simply because we can look ahead that far and see where we are stepping. If that first step is into the quagmire, swale, quicksand, or off the cliff, we are wholly to blame because we can see that distance ahead. If there are swales and quicksands beyond our present sight, say, along in March and April, we need not borrow any trouble about them now, "for sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," or as the hymn has it, "One step enough for me." Is it not right at this point where the value of faith—a trust in divine leadership in situations that baffle our capacity for self-direction—comes in? The providence of God, is greater than any mud holes that may lie in my pathway in March or April. The wisest thing for me to do is to take the outstretched hand that will lead me safely.

The manner in which Christmas day was celebrated in all parts of the civilized world can hardly fail to make a good impression upon the religious life everywhere. The public press seems to think that nothing like it has been seen since the beginning of the World war in 1914. In cities as widely separated as Moscow and San Francisco the note of joyousness, that has been lacking for a decade, has returned. For a long time the angel's note of glad tidings, of good will, of peace on earth, has been sadly lacking in the Christmas festival. It may be that the ring of Locarno touched the old keynote of Bethlehem and brought back especially to distracted Europe the music of the ages. At any rate we enter the new year with renewed world gladness. May it never again be broken by war.

PROS AND CONS OF AIRCRAFT REGULATION

On Dec. 4, 1918, Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut introduced in the senate a measure entitled "A bill to encourage and regulate the use of aircraft in commerce and for other purposes." Reported out of committee with slight amendments within a week, the bill was passed by the senate before another week had elapsed, and it now goes to the house of representatives, where action will be pressed by Mr. Parker, a member of the president's aircraft board.

The Bingham bill has so far advanced only to the point attained by one or two of its predecessors designed to serve the same purpose, for measures introduced by Senator Wadsworth in the last congress also passed the senate, but failed to get through the house, failed through inertia rather than any positive opposition. The outlook for action now, however, is far more favorable than in any previous year, for interest in the subject is at a higher pitch than ever before, and that indifference which was the stumbling block of 1924 and earlier years is no longer manifest. The Bingham measure has an advantage, too, in that it is known to express the president's wishes, carrying out as it does the recommendations of the aircraft board which he transmitted to congress with a strong endorsement, and administration support is worth a great deal in this congress, especially perhaps in the lower house.

Although the omens are bright, the bill will not pass without opposition declares Edward P. Warner, professor of aeronautical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and it will need the active support of those who favor it. It cannot be left to drift through by itself. To see just what the situation is, it is worth while comparing the position of those who support such a measure as the Bingham bill with that of its opponents, and examining into the basis of support or opposition."

The list of organizations and individuals arrayed in favor of federal action for the regulation of flying is impressive. It is properly headed by the president's aircraft board. The house committee headed by Mr. Lampert lined up explicitly with the Morrow board on that point. Most definite and unhesitating of all in its position was the committee on civil aviation apointed by Secretary Hoover and representing the department of commerce and the American engineering council, which placed the creation of a bureau of aeronautics high among its recommendations. Another important governmental body, this one permanent instead of temporary, that has stood for the same action is the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, which has made some recommendations for legislation for civil flying in every one of its last five annual reports. The verdict on the subject of the distinguished men who compose that committee has been repeatedly and specifically endorsed and emphasized by Presidents Harding and Coolidge in transmitting the reports to congress.

At the various times when the Wadsworth and Winslow bills have been struggling for passage a notable list of civic and professional organizations have come forward in their behalf. Foremost among the commercial organizations was the United States Chamber of Commerce, while the American Society of Mechanical Engineers took important position among the bodies of a technical and professional character that have given attention to the subject and passed resolutions upon it.

From the ranks of the aeronautic industry and of operators of aircraft there comes both advocacy and criticism of regulatory measures. The majority of the large manufacturers and operators, however, have at some time been registered in favor, either because of the real value of federal regulation, because of a fear that if the federal government does not undertake such regulation the states will do it with worse results, or because of a belief that regulation cannot be escaped if federal money is to be put into the creation and maintenance of airways and air navigation facilities. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, in particular, has repeatedly dwelt upon the need for congressional action as a preliminary to stable commercial operation, and especially to air transport. The largest and wealthiest of the air transport companies so far organized has as its counsel an attorney who has repeatedly argued the necessity of federal action, and one of the most important of the operators in "aerial service," a company engaged in dusting cotton and other crops from the air, was represented in the hearings before the president's board by its general manager, who made a strong plea along the same line.

The opposition proceeds principally from the small scale operators, and especially from operators who have for economic reasons been using wartime equipment and who fear that the attitude of a bureau of aeronautics might be unpleasantly restrictive of the further employment of such material. Recently, however, there has been added a new element, for a certain part of the established aircraft, both in and out of the regular service, has taken thought of the probable effect of federal regulation on the business of building civil aircraft and has become alarmed, although in most instances not to such an extent as to oppose all regulation.

Some of the itinerant flyers and small operators or builders of aircraft go the length of opposing any control at all, either in the registration of the machines or the licensing of the pilots. The majority, however, extend their antagonism only over the registration, and admit the desirability of supervision of the flying personnel. As for that faction in the industry already referred to, they have shown concern only in so far as federal law would apply to them directly, and they object only to inspection of airplanes during the process of manufacture and to government intervention in the work of design. On the occasion when the representatives of the industry, to the number of a dozen or more, appeared before the president's board to give their testimony there were only two who said anything against federal control. One of those two speakers made about the most closely reasoned and most logical argument in opposition that has yet been offered, but it was an argument which would apply only if the picture of federal regulation and its workings which the witness had in mind was an accurate one. It is on that point that much hinges. There are various conceptions of what a bureau of aeronautics would be. There are many things that it might do, and it is possible to create in forecast either an attractive or a repellent picture of its activities and of the mode of carrying them on.

The general arguments for a bureau of aeronautics and for federal regulation are fairly obvious and are by this time well known, for they have been repeated on hundreds of occasions. The spread of civil flying depends on public confidence. Public confidence depends on safety. Safety depends on the age of safe machines and their operation by competent personnel. The most absolute assurance of safety of equipment and competence of pilots and crew would be afforded by governmental supervision. That chain of reasoning contains no flaw in principle.

The opposition, as already noted, rests on several entirely different sets of ideas. Of least importance is the theory maintained by some of the small operators and so called "gypsy flyers" that the whole thing is the result of a conspiracy on the part of the great manufacturing companies to drive the little fellows out of business. It is unfortunate that any such disturbing feeling should exist, but there seems to be as little ground for it that it is difficult to meet it with argument. As for the fear that the registration of aircraft would eliminate the war-time equipment, it can only be said that an assistant secretary of commerce charged with the responsibility for regulating aviation would presumably endeavor to do nothing unduly reciplitate and unsettling, but that many of the war-time training airplanes used for commercial work are already unsafe and that there will necessarily be gradual elimination of the whole supply. The sale and resale of machines at from three hundred to a thousand dollars apiece cannot continue indefinitely. Even if there were no bureau and no intervention from outside, all of that flying stock would be crashed sooner or later.

Most serious is the fear of the manufacturers, large and small, but especially the latter, that there is the prospect the inauguration of a slow, elaborate, and bureaucratic system of inspection which would hamper the production of original design and which would entail an enormous overhead cost to be distributed to the industry through the collection of high fees for inspection and issuance of certificates. There is some European experience to support such a fear, for undoubtedly in some European countries the endeavor to force safety by regulation has been carried so far that progress has been hindered and that the cost of aircraft and their engines has been unnecessarily raised.

Such precedents, however, are not necessarily to be followed. Even a very slight amount of regulation has a beneficial effect on safety, and it is possible, without serious restriction of anyone's activities, to weed out the seriously unfit in material and personnel. Experience with the Massachusetts air law has demonstrated that even the most superficial inspection and the most casual test of the prospective pilot at the beginning of his flying career are of benefit. Federal examinations could naturally go further than those in the state, but they need not go so far as to be oppressive. America has a very large amount of commercial flying now. We ought to look forward to keeping what we have and getting more. Air law is being passed to help the careful and responsible operator, not to drive him out of business or to cut into his market, and it must be assumed in judging this law, as in judging any other, that an administration which has so emphatically favored its passage will use care in selecting a man to administer it and that the functions which the law puts upon the man and his assistants will be exercised with reasonable discretion and intelligence.

Sunday Morning Talk

THE NEW YEAR

We all wish for a Happy New Year. Almost all nations observe this day in perhaps different ways but as a day of good cheer. Let us forget the unpleasant things of the past. Let us look at the future year as the unfolding of a book and that its pages may be kept unspotted that when it is closed at the end of the year it may be left in a better condition than the last year. As when in school the copy book was expected each one to be a little better than the last, so it should be with this great book of life, that the master is keeping for us can He say at the close of the year "Well done." Have we tried to do our best? May our lives in the coming year reach out as did the Master's to comfort those about us and while brightening others' lives our own will be brightened. It will reflect on our sleeves, the good things or the bad things. He says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least ye have done it unto me."

The New Year here, with joy we raise
Our annual song.
To Him, who doth through fleeting days
Our lives prolong.
The New Year, we will recall
How God hath led.
With no impatience through it all,
But love instead.
And when we end our closing year
And songs shall cease
Be ours through yon undying spheres
Eternal peace.

From Small Beginnings

Abraham Cahan, a Modern Writer

Some 25 years ago there appeared a book that gave such vivid pictures of the ghetto of New York City that it at once made great appeal. As one read its pages he saw the grim walls of the tenements, the crowds on the streets, and he felt something of the pushing, groping life of that very real part of the world. The book was called Yekl, A Tale of the New York Ghetto, and its author was Abraham Cahan. Before that time Abraham Cahan had been known by a comparatively small circle of readers. He had written largely for newly-arrived immigrants, and had devoted himself mostly to newspaper work. He had, it is true, begun to increase his circle by the writing of a number of short stories concerning life in the immigrant section of New York City, but up to the publication of Yekl he had not made what may be called a general public appeal.

Abraham Cahan had good reason to know the tenement life of the great cosmopolitan city of New York. Like so many thousands of others, he had the freedom and the opportunity that were denied in other lands. Back in Russia, where he had been born, he had expected to work at some manual work. He had set out to learn about materials and methods. Somehow, in spite of all that looked him in the face, he felt the desire for education and the impulse to do something greater than he could do in any shop. He found books, studied them at home, talked with others and gained what help he could. Thus, by working after hours, he gained the education that Nate, at first, seemed to forbid. Then, from this as a preparation, he made his way into a school and set out to be a teacher. One of the countless uprisings in Russia drove him at last to leave the land and go to America.

He was still a young man in his early 20's when he stood on the steamship and looked across the water to the dim coast lines of the United States. Now he had education and the ability to use it. Almost naturally he entered into the newspaper life of the foreign-language press. It was for that that he wrote his first stories of life in the ghetto. He became an editor but he remained a writer. From Yekl he went on to the writing of other books, all of them designed to reveal the inner life of the people of the slums. For each people, too, he wrote a Yiddish history of the United States, hoping thereby to reveal to the newly arrived immigrant something of the spirit of the land to which he had come. One has no need to ask the question, "Did it pay the Russian boy to work hard for an education?" Education is always its own reward.

Today's Anniversaries

1836—George M. Chilcott, who filled the unexpired term of Henry M. Teller as U. S. senator from Colorado, born in Pennsylvania. Died at St. Louis in 1891.

1849—An outbreak of cholera in an infant asylum near London resulted in more than 100 deaths within a week.

1871—King Amadeo of Spain made his formal entry into Madrid.

1881—Alexander William Kinglake, the celebrated historian of the Crimean war, died in London. Born Aug. 5, 1809.

1910—Agnes Booth, a celebrated actress of the American stage, died at Brookline, Mass. Born in Sydney, Australia, Oct. 4, 1846.

1921—The Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park, a gift from M. H. de Young, was formally presented to the city of San Francisco.

1924—A flood of the River Seine stopped the railways in Paris and caused a general suspension of business.

1924—New York Clearing House set world's record with one day's business of $1,655,000,000.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Howard Sutherland, the new Alien Property Custodian of the United States, is a West Virginian and from 1917 to 1923 was one of the representatives of that state in the United States senate. Previously he had served two terms in the lower house of congress. Mr. Sutherland is a Missourian, a graduate of Westminster college in that state, and in 1889 began his career as editor of a newspaper in the town of Fulton. In 1892 he left Missouri for West Virginia, locating in the city of Elkins, where he accumulated a fortune in the coal and timberland business. He served four years in the West Virginia legislature and was then elected to congress. As a United States senator Mr Sutherland attained a national reputation and in 1919 his name was mentioned in connection with the republican presidential nomination.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE HEBRIDES

Civilization has a new 'victim.' According to local officials in the Hebrides, a group of islands off the west coast of Scotland, the radio, crossword puzzles and other modern ideas are threatening to spoil the islanders and remove all the picturesqueness of the country of the crofters, as the Highland farmers of the district are known. Already, they complain, the traditional oatmeal has been abandoned for more luxurious fare of tea, white bread, and jam, a change which the authorities of the region declare is dietetic folly.

"Although the Hebrides have been almost within gunshot of some of the great steamship highways between the Old World and the New they include some of the wildest and least known sections in the British Isles," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Waves that toss voyagers on the so-called 'short route' to America, which passes between the Hebrides and the north of Ireland, have, until recently, washed ashore little to change the inhabitants from those who bled with Wallace.

"Like two flotillas of stone-turreted battlecruisers the Hebrides are strung along the west coast of Scotland, mainly parallel with the coast. The islands are roughly divided into two groups, the Outer and the Inner Hebrides, separated by the Minch and the Little Minch, wide channels of water, from each other. The separation, however, is geological as well as geographical. The Outer Hebrides have a foundation of gneiss, a granitelike rock, while the Inner Hebrides, or at least the more northerly of them, lie on trap rock. In popular parlance, the two groups are often referred to as the 'Western Islands.'

"As the Hebrides lie along the Gulf stream the climate on the islands is mild, but exceedingly humid. The rainfall averages 42 inches in some places, as compared with New York City's yearly average of 3 to 4 inches. Boots and waterproofs might be said to be the typical costume of the Islanders. Mists, also, are almost perpetual, hiding the peaks of the mountains and making navigation in the vicinity difficult and exciting.

"Despite these handicaps, however, the Hebrides have played a significant part in the settlement and life of Scotland. For a long period the region was a battleground between Scandinavians and the early Celts. The Vikings came to rob and slaughter, but once satiated they settled down, married the daughters of the land, and even adopted its language and faith. The Hebrides also figured largely in the feuds and struggles of the early Scottish kings.

"Early in the 18th century the lure of the west almost depopulated the islands. A potato blight in 1846 brought about another wholesale exodus to America and South Africa. The loss of so many able-bodied men and women, for it was largely the younger, more energetic element that left, caused the standard of living to sink, and the islands became more isolated than ever.

"When the Hebrides are not shrouded in fog the sun reveals bursts of sudden and unexpected beauty. In solitary and savage grandeur the cliffs and mountains rise sheer from the sea. The result combines every tint of warm red, brown and rich maroon, and blends prettily with a dazzled Persian sky. Some of the islands are low and rolling, lonely moorlands carpeted with rock-strewn grass. Nearly all are pierced with wild and romantic arms of the sea, such as are found elsewhere along the Scottish coast.

"Although the islands have a combined area of 840 square miles, about one-quarter of that of the state of Delaware, only about one-ninth of this area is under cultivation. Only a fifth of the 500 odd islands that comprise the archipelago are inhabited. Potatoes, turnips, barley and oats are the staple crops, but in a few places the natives make a frugal living by sheep and cattle raising, fishing, distilling, and the making of tweeds, tartans and other woolen cloths.

"Rude old stone structures, religious symbols of a pre-Christian era, abound; and, until comparatively recently, the Christian islanders conducted certain ceremonies about them. Iona, one of the smaller of the Inner Hebrides, was the 'Blessed Isle' of early Christian days in the British Isles, and the scene of frequent pilgrimages. Kings of Scotland, Ireland, and Scandinavia were brought to be buried in the soil of this sacred island."

Stories That Recall Others

Are Them Singular?

It happened in a lunch room. A young man had ordered a glass of jello with whipped cream, and a woman, standing nearby, apparently wished to order the same, and inquired of the young man, "Are those jello?"

Carelessness

Mother and son were shopping in a store a day or so before Christmas and as they elbowed from counter to counter they met that distinguished gentleman Santa Claus.

Santa stopped the young man and placing his hand on the boy's shoulder pleasantly inquired:

"Well, now, young man, what do you wish Santa Claus to bring you for Christmas?"

And the young man looking up in rather disgusted manner, remarked:

"Well, I'll be darned, didn't you get my letter?"

U. S. EMBASSY IN TOKIO REASONABLY ASSURED

There seems now to be a reasonable prospect of an American embassy in Tokio, Harold Mugonigle, an architect from New Jersey, has arrived in Tokio. He will await the coming of Anthonin Raymond of the firm of Raymond & Sykes, who have been retained by the state department to assist in the drawing of plans for a new embassy, which is to cost about $1,250,000. Since the destruction of the old embassy by fire, following the earthquake of 1923, the Japanese government, as an appreciation of the prompt American relief sent to Tokio, has given the United States for an embassy ground one of the finest sites in the capital. It is immediately behind the old embassy site, but on a much higher level. Both sites will be used, the upper for the embassy building and residence and the lower for the office and secretaris residences.

President Coolidge has accepted the resignation of C. C. Mechord as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commeilon.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

$473,428 TO CONNECTICUT FOR FEDERAL AID ROADS

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine has just announced the apportionment of $73,135,000 to the states for use in the construction of federal-aid roads. This apportionment was authorized by the postoffice appropriation act of February 12, 1925, and is for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1926.

The new funds will be spent entirely on the federal aid highway system under the same plan of cooperation with the states that has been in successful operation for ten years. The roads included in the system are the most important in the country and reach directly or indirectly every city of over 5,000 population. The bureau reports that approximately 10,000 miles of federal-aid road were brought to completion during 1925, and the indications are that the coming year will be equally successful.

The apportionment for Connecticut is $473,428.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

The school of nursing connected with the W. W. Backus Hospital, Norwich, Conn. is now registering for the February classes. This school is registered in Connecticut and the course of instruction is two years and four months given in a general hospital of 80 beds. Students must be graduates of grammar school and have one year of high school work. Students have the advantage of a new residence for nurses where every comfort and convenience is afforded them. For circular of information address Supt. of the Training School.

WEDDING.

Tonnesson-Stamm

On Tuesday evening, Dec. 15th., at 7 o'clock, Alice V. Stamm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coyette, of Hanover, and William E. Tonnesson son of Mr. Adolph Tonnesson, of Norwich, were united in marriage in Hanover by Rev. Dwight Stone, pastor of the Hanover Congregational church.

The bride was charmingly gowned in old rose canton crepe and carried Columbia roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Gladys Coyette, sister of the bride, wore powder blue canton crepe and carried pink roses. The best man was John E. Fitch, of Baltic. A buffet lunch was served at the home of the bride. The couple received many useful gifts. After a short honeymoon including Providence, Newport and New York, Mr. and Mrs. Tonnesson will reside in Hanover.

Johnson-Hannan

At the Baltic Methodist Episcopal church, Dec. 26th., Miss Ethel Hannan was united in marriage with Carl W. Johnson, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Harvey W. Conklin. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The best man was G. Johnson and the bridesmaid was Miss Annie Zaft. The bride was charmingly gowned in white Marguerite crepe and carried a shower bouquet of roses. Her bridesmaid was gowned in flesh colored crepe and carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, No. 184 High street, Baltic, and guests were present from Boston, Norwich and Willimantic. The bride received numerous beautiful and useful gifts including linen, cut glass, silverware and money.

During the evening the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to New York, and Mount Clair, N. J. Recently the young woman's class of the Baltic Methodist Episcopal church, held a shower in honor of the bride and presented her a beautiful bridge lamp. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hannan.

FOOD FOR ANIMALS AT MOHEGAN PARK

The animals at Mohegan park have recently had their larder stocked up by the gift of two truck loads of rejected fruit, cabbage leaves and other greens from Levine Bros., the Water street wholesale fruit and provision dealers. The park superintendent, Frederick W. Krohn, was very glad to get this food material at this time of the year, as it has helped out materially in supplying the needs of the animals. The deer and the monkeys like the apples and other fruit, the rabbits and guinea pigs utilize the green leaves, while the chickens and ducks get their share.

New Year's Twins

New Year's Day twins were born at the W. W. Backus hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Leary of Westerly. The twins, boys, arrived about 8:30 o'clock Friday morning. There is only four ounces difference in their weight, one tipping the scales at 7 lbs 6 ounces and the other at 7 lbs 10 ounces.

MURDER AND MANSLAUGHTER CASES ON SUPERIOR COURT LIST NEXT WEEK

One case in which the charge is murder and another in which the charge is manslaughter provide the unusual cases for the criminal term of the superior court which opens here next Tuesday with Judge Allyn L. Brown presiding. There are 31 new cases in the printed docket of the court which Clerk George E. Parsons has had prepared.

Eugene J. Berry of this city is on the docket with a murder charge against him for taking the lives of his two small sons by chloroforming them while they were asleep in bed with him at 342 Boswell avenue. Berry then cut his throat and slashed his wrist with a razor in an attempt at suicide, but he succeeded only in making superficial wounds. He was taken to the Backus hospital where he was a patient for about a week, then being presented in the city court from which he was bound over to the superior court on Oct. 20. He has been in jail since then.

A grand jury will be summoned, before which the Berry case will be presented. If a true bill for first degree murder is found against Berry by the grand jury, he will be tried on that charge.

Peter Duffie of this city has a manslaughter charge against him for causing the death of Edward Crooks on the afternoon of Sunday, Sept. 27, when the automobile which Duffie was driving struck and fatally injured by Coroner J. J. Desmond cleared Duffie of criminal liability, but when Duffie was presented in the city court probable cause was found and he was bound over to the superior court. He gave bonds for his appearance.

The following is the list of new cases for this term of the superior court:

Eugene J. Berry, Norwich, murder; Joan Betancourt, New London, statutory burglary; Elmer Buddington, et al., Groton, statutory burglary.; Mrs. Anna M. Chapman, Old Lyme; adultery; James Chapman Old Lyme; adultery; Harry Davidson, et al., obtaining money by false pretenses; Joseph Dedo, Groton, statutory burglary; Peter Duffie, Norwich, statutory manslaughter; John Grabowy, Norwich, adultery; John Grabowy, Norwich, statutory rape; Charles Hedge, Norwich, assault with intent to carnally know a female child; Emma Laviano, et al., Norwich, adultery; Gladys Lorraine alias Marie Boyd, Norwich; larceny; Harry Mather, Old Lyme, adultery; Carlo May, et al, Groton, illegal transportation of spirituous and intoxicating liquors; Clarence Maynard, Old Lyme, adultery; Mrs. Grace E. McGinn, Old Lyme, adultery; Philip Morgan, detained as material witness; Theron Morgan, statutory burglary, Wilfred Porter, statutory burglary; John Reyes, statutory burglary; Wilhelmina Ruley, adultery; Joseph Simborski, Norwich, sodomy; Howard Sloan, rape; Earl Smith, statutory burglary.

William Alfred Sullivan, wilful injury to private building; Joseph Toczko, Norwich, illegal sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors; Daniel Weyant, New London; bigamy Paul Wunch indecent assault; Danielson Ziezunk, indecsent assault; Daniel Ziezunk, illing liquors; Daniel Ziezunk, illegal sale of spirituous and intoxicating liquors.

GREAT CONGREGATIONS AT ST. PATRICK'S NEW YEAR'S

The combination of New Year's day and the first Friday of the month, when hundreds of thousands of members of the Apostleship of Prayer (League of the Sacred Heart) in the Roman Catholic churches receive Holy Communion, resulted in a great evidence of devotion in St. Patrick's church Friday. When Rev. John J. Reilly read low mass that morning at 5 o'clock he administered the Eucharist to a large number, while another evidence of the many confessions the day before was given at 7, as the daily parish mass was read by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, who required the assistance of Father Reilly in giving communion. At 8, high mass was sung by Rev. Myles P. Galvin and again there were many communicants.

The day was the feast of the Circumcision, commemorating Our Lord's example of submission to the law, His name day, also the octave of the Nativity, i. e. the eighth day after that feast. The Introit was Isaias 9. "A Child is born to us and a Son is given to us; whose government is upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called the Angel of great counsel. "The epistle read in all the masses was Titus 2. 11-15, and the gospel was Luke 2.21, "At that time, after eight days were accomplished that the Child should be circumcised; His name was called Jesus, which was called by the Angel before He was conceived in the womb."

In the singing at the high Mass, Organist Henry J. LaFontaine repeated portions of the Christmas Day music.

ENJOYABLE NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION AT Y. M. C. A.

A gala occasion was enjoyed Friday evening at the Young Men's Christian association when the annual new year reception was held. President James C. Macpherson welcomed the visitors in well chosen words and wished all a Happy New Year.

Among the features of the evening was the splendid music furnished by the Swahn orchestra, which rendered selections during the festivities, each number showing fine training of the musicians and ability to "put it across". The members of the orchestra were as follows: John Swahn, cornetist and leader, John Dougherty, violin, John Kukla and F. C. Geer, pianist.

The moving picture feature entitled "Heritage", proved very interesting and entertaining, demonstrating as it did in a dramatic way, the belief that a noble heritage is never wholly lost. Gerald Payne operated the moving picture machine in an efficient manner to the pleasure of all present.

Physical Director Emmett J. Fritz put on some lively gymnastic and athletic work which proved pleasing to the audience; a volley ball game concluded the part of the programme. After the regular programme which was held in the big gymnasium, was finished, the entire company repaired to the lobby and parlors where tasty refreshments were served to all during which period the orchestra again delighted the visitors with several selections. The decorations consisted of pretty cedar trees and hemlock sprays which added much to the attractiveness of the building; these were kindly donated by the Maplewood nursery.

The affair was conducted under the auspices of the social committee of the association consisting of N. Eugene Smith, Arthur F. Wyman and Clarence E. Carpenter.

BROUGHT TO COURT AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT

Dana M. Lamite of 14 Julian place was before the city court Friday morning on the charge of evading responsibility, reckless driving, failure to show operator's license and driving an unregistered automobile. The last mentioned charge came about because he was driving his machine Friday morning with 1925 markers on it. The case was continued in court until this (Saturday) morning in order that the accused man might secure counsel.

Lamitie was brought to police headquarters about 5 o'clock Friday morning by Supernumerary Joseph Gendron after the oicer saw the Lamitie car drive into the street from the embankment at the home of Judge Allyn L. Brown on Broadway and proceed toward Norwich Town.

Two young men, who had a machine that was stalled in the street about opposite the residence of C. D. White, 248 Broadway, told the officer that the Lamitie car had run into their machine. The officer followed the Lamitie in a taxi cab and brought the driver back to headquarters in the cab.

The automobile, which it is claimed, was run into was registered in the name of the New London Silk and Woolen Co., and was operated by Louis Itzkowitz, who had Harry Soltz with him.

FEWER CARS OPERATED ON FIRST OF YEAR

There was a noticeable decrease in the number of automobiles seen driving around the business streets Friday. There was little difficulty in finding a parking place almost anywhere and at any time, since the number of machines in use has been so much cut down by those who lay their cars up for the winter months or have not yet obtained their 1926 registration plates, if they intend to drive this year.

OBSERVED NEW YEAR'S AT ODD FELLOWS HOME

Thirty-six residents of the Odd Fellows' home, Fairview, Groton, greeted the new year Friday when at 11:30 o'clock they were served a roast turkey dinner, as a starter on the program for annual New Year's celebration. More than 200 visitors, including officers of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F. and the Rebekah assembly were in attendance.

A few of the residents of the home, who were not able to participate actively in the celebration were entertained in their rooms. The residents also received many gifts.

The visitors Friday displayed unusual interest in the inspection of the finely equipped home and particularly in the infirmary, which is now rapidly nearing completion. Much progress was noted since the last inspection on grand master's day in June. The new water supply system is also nearly installed.

President of the home corporation, Dorr R. Whitney, was in charge of the observance and the entertainment program took place at 2 o'clock.

W. C. Waterman of New London sang and Miss Nancy Orkney of Groton, performed a sword dance and highland fling which was followed by David Lamond, who rendered some Scotch solos. Mrs. W. B. Anderson of Groton gave a reading and Mr. Waterman sang again. Miss Orkney gave an aesthetic dance and Mr. Lamond rendered another vocal selection.

Many members of nearby Odd Fellows' lodges and Rebekah assemblies journeyed to the home for the purpose of assisting in giving the residents there a happy New Year's day.

NORWICH POLICE MADE 1,344 ARRESTS IN YEAR

A total of 1,344 arrests were made during the year 1925 by the local police department. This is 28 less than the number of persons arrested in 1924. There were 447 arrests for intoxication, 241 for breach of the peace, 805 for violation of city ordinances and 52 for violation of the liquor law. Lodgings were provided for 1,311 homeless men, 433 store and business house doors were found open and made secure and 22 lost children were found and restored to their parents.

ANNUAL GRAB BAG FOR NURSES AT HOSPITAL

Nurses at the W. W. Backus hospital enjoyed their annual grab bag party Friday morning, in the new nurse's home, just prior to their reporting for work for the day. The grab bag has been a custom at the hospital for several years, through the courtesy of Mrs. Hugh H. Osgood and the annual New Year's grab bag proved no exception to the rule. Pretty remembrances were found in every package taken by each of the 30 nurses and officers of the training school.

Appearances would indicate that heaven sometimes helps those who have already succeeded in helping themselves.

BROADCASTS GREETING TO NEW ENGLANDERS

A New Year's greeting to New Englanders was put on the air from Hartford Thursday night by George B. Chandler, executive vice president of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce and chairman for Connecticut of the governors' joint committee which organized the recent New England conference, which was held at Worcester.

Mr. Chandler's radio address was as follows:

The first quarter of the twentieth century, one of the most dramatic periods in the history of mankind, is now drawing to a close. In these fateful hours, New England, the cradle of American liberty and the birthplace of American industry, in the maturity of her years and the full flood of her powers, greets the future with undimmed eyes and bids the world a Happy New Year!

"Forward New England—Turn Tradition Into Trade!" Such was the slogan adopted by the Associated Advertising Clubs of New England at the great convention held at Hartford in the Fall of 1924. Noble indeed are her traditions and great indeed her heritage. The past stands. Her great names in literature, in theology, in philosophy, they stand secure. Her notable universities and colleges—Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and a score of others for the higher education of men; Smith, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke and others for the higher education of women—these, too stand! So too do her great statesmen, past and present—Hancock, Adams, Otis, Webster, Sumner, Hoar, Lodge and Coolidge—so, too, do these stand secure! Likewise in the material world—in industry, commerce and finance—the same pre-eminence is manifest. The huge textile mills of New Bedford, Fall River, Lawrence, Lowell and Manchester—the great shoe factories of Brockton, Haverill, Marlboro and Lynn; the vast metal trades of Bridgeport, Providence, Worcester, Springfield, New Haven and New Britain; the marvelous brass industries of Waterbury and the Naugatuck Valley, one of the industrial wonders of modern times—these too hold their place before the world! So also stand her great seaports—Bangor, Portland, Boston, Providence, New London, along with lesser harbors, whence come and go the ships that sail the Seven Seas. Her pre-eminence in the field of finance, manifest in the powerful banking institutions of Boston, Hartford, Providence and other cities—these likewise have been well founded and splendidly conducted, unshaken in the great panics that have brought other institutions tottering to the ground. Especially in the field of insurance, symbol of business solidity and personal honor, stand the institutions of Montpelier, Springfield, Worcester, New Haven and Boston—and pre-eminent over all, Hartford, the recognized insurance center of the nation,—here especially does New England business genius stand forth. Likewise our wealth of seashore and mountain—New England, the playground of the nation! The vast hotels and pleasure resorts at Eastern Point, Narragansett Pier, Newport, Cape Cod, the North Shore and the South Shore, Portsmouth, Bar Harbor and the innumerable lesser or greater hostelries that dot the Berkshire Hills, the Green Mountains, the White Mountains and the woods and lakes of Maine! Nature gave to us these glories, and it cannot be charged against us that we have left them unappreciated and unused. Truly has New England realized upon her acres of diamonds!

Birth of A New Era

But come now the birth of a new era. The heavy hand of competition is laid upon us. We have with us, here in New England as elsewhere, both the blind optimist and the incorrigible pessimist—the man who throws his ready cap in air and shouts, "All is well," and the temperamental grumbler who mourns, "We are slipping, alas, we are slipping!" Let us stand for a moment on the peak of the present, with our back to the future and our face to the past, and glance back over a period of three and a half decades.

In the Year of Grace 1887 the savings banks deposits of New England were 560 million dollars; in the year 1924 they were 2,469 million dollars,—an increase of 340 per cent. "All is well!" exclaims the enthusiast. But during that same period the savings banks deposits for the entire country increased 576 per cent. "I told you so," says the dispenser of gloom. In 1887 the value of the agricultural products of New England was 106 million dollars; in 1924 it was 505 million dollars,—a gain of 375 per cent. "All is well," again shouts the enthusiast. But during that same period, in the entire United States, the agricultural products increased 770 per cent. "Again," mourns the pessimist, "we are failing to the rear." In 1887 the bank clearings of New England were 5 billion dollars, while in 1924 they were 24 billion dollars, showing a gain of 378 per cent. "Hear, hear!" shouts the optimist and leads the applause. But during that same period the bank clearings for the entire country increased 819 per cent—whereat the pessimist shakes his head and laments, "we are on the toboggan!" Coming now to manufactured products, which are supposed to be New England's peculiar forte, her pre-emptied mine of gold, we find that in 1887 their value was 1 1-2 billion dollars, while in 1924 it had mounted to more than 7 billion dollars—a gain of 380 per cent. Again shouts the enthusiast, "I am vindicated. Industry is the acid test." But we are forthwith confronted by the figures that in 1887 the total manufactured products of the United States was slightly over 5 billion dollars, while in 1924 they had mounted to more than 62 billion dollars,—a gain for the nation of 566 per cent. "Alack and alas," mourns the pessimist, "All is lost. Even in manufacturing, we have fallen behind the country to the tune of 185 per cent."

Steady, Safe, Sure Upward Trend

As usual, both extremists have been wrong. New England is rich, strong, powerful and prosperous. She has shown a steady, safe, sure, upward trend, giving ample cause for pride in the past and confidence in the future. But the rest of the country, being newer, relatively undeveloped and later in the field, and having food, fuel and raw material close to its doors, has inevitably grown more rapidly.

But why, indeed, should not New England rejoice in the abounding growth of the rest of the country? If Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Atlanta and the new south had not achieved this amazing growth, where indeed would New England have found the markets for her 380 per cent increase in manufactured products? We assuredly could not have absorbed them in New England. Neither, indeed, could we have sold them abroad. Instead of looking with gloom and misgivings upon the greater relative growth of the rest of the country, we should welcome it as New England's salvation. All the locks, hinges, escutcheons, and other hardware accessories of an entire industrial city which sprung up over night in the Middle West were furnished from beneath the roof of a single factory in New Britain, Connecticut. True it is that the manufacture of automobiles, which achieved a promising start in New England, has largely departed to Detroit, Indianapolis and other points beyond the Alleghenies. But scores of other New England factories are today busy turning out automotive parts and accessories. One great machine tool plant in Bridgeport is running day and night manufacturing highly-specialized labor-saving machines for the use of the great Middle Western automobile factories. While the entire plant of an old and nationally-known carriage factory in Amesbury, Massachusetts, is now exclusively devoted to the manufacture of closed bodies for a well-known make of automobile. As the Nation grows, so does New England grow!

But as New England stands tonight with her feet upon the threshold of the second quarter of the century, she may well pause and take account of her resources.

Her disadvantages are such that he who runs may read. They stand out in bold outline upon the maps of every school geography. She has no coal, she has no iron, she has no copper, she has no cotton, she has little leather and she imports nearly 85 per cent of her food supply. She goes out over the parallel ranges of intervening mountains, or over the open sea, and transports her raw material to her factories, turns out the finished product and ships it back again over the same routes to markets lying, in many instances, at the very doorway of the sources, whence the materials have been drawn. At first blush, this would seem to be a wellnigh insurmountable handicap.

Advantages in New England

But let us turn to the other side of the account. Let us name the long list of items that count to her advantage. She has a large supply of skilled labor, generally well-paid and well-satisfied. She is relatively free from industrial warfare. She has an army of trained and experienced business executives. She has unlimited capital, indeed, a Boston banker in a public address recently complained that New England is unable to absorb her surplus capital and that her financial institutions are compelled to seek a market for it elsewhere. She lies upon the Atlantic seaboard with numerous deep and sheltered harbors and is exceptionally well-situated for export and import trade; and even for domestic trade she is able, through newly established lines of steamships connecting with railway systems in the south, to compete successfully in freight rates with large areas in the Middle West. So, too, in trade with the Pacific coast she enjoys through the Panama Canal a like advantage over large competitive sections of the country. She is splendidly equipped with technical and trade schools; and, in addition, is constantly developing a fresh supply of managerial ability, trained in the shops. She is served by a net-work of highly developed and well-managed railways, and possesses an unequalled system of improved highways for the use of motor trucks in short hauls. She is abundantly supplied with clay for brick making and trap-rock and granite for building. Her lumber supply is by no means exhausted. Moreover, she also has within her own borders or at her very doorway one of the dominant natural resources of modern times, a resource which in the course of time will increasingly take the place of coal. There is a wealth of convenient and accessible water power for hydro-electric development. A series of large rivers with numerous water falls flow from north to south through New England—the Pennobscott, the Kennebec, the Androscoggin, the Merrimac, the Connecticut, the Housatonic and their tributaries. Moreover, close to her northern borders is the gigantic water power of the St. Lawrence river as yet unconfined and unrealised; while modern engineering genius is challenging the high tides of the Bay of Fundy in the state of Maine and threatening—yes, promising—to harness them as the obedient servants of men. Moreover, she has at her back the powerful momentum of long-sustained business achievement. An average increase, over a period of three and half decades, of 407 per cent in savings banks deposits, value of agricultural products, bank clearings, bank surplus, bank deposits and the value of manufactured products is hardly evidence of old age or declining powers. If these figures do not reveal the exuberant adolescence of a new and developing country, they assuredly manifest the wholesome vigor of sturdy and seasoned manhood.

Thus stands the great debit and credit account of modern New England; and the balance is by no means adverse!

New England Not Slumbering

Nor indeed is New England slumbering. The stirrings of new birth contained in the singing slogan adopted by the advertisers of New England found an echo in the voice of the governors of the six New England states when they met at Poland Springs in June of the present year. "Get Together New England!" was their watchword, and, through the agency of delegates by them appointed, there was held at Worcester, Massachusetts, on November 12th and 13th of the current year the first great New England conference of modern times. It was attended by nearly a thousand persons, including delegates from 388 agricultural, commercial and manufacturing organizations. As estimated by one of the speakers, there were represented on the floor of the conference more than a billion dollars of invested capital and more than eight billion dollars of annual sales. The enthusiasm kept pace with the attendance. This great conference is now established as a permanent institution, and through it will be set up a sort of New England Clearing House, through which her bankers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers, legislators and public officials may reach common conclusions upon common problems, devise new methods to meet new conditions and face the business future with a united front. Cheaper power to run her plants, improved marketing to sell her goods, more intensive agriculture to fed her population—these are the bedrock problems to which this body is already addressing itself. "Forward New England. Turn Tradition Into Trade!"

To the sons and daughters of New England wherever you may have wandered throughout this broad land— in crowded city or upon distant plain—the Mother Land sends you this word of New Year's Greeting, this message of calm reassurance and unshaken courage!

"My arm is nothing weak, my strength is not gone by." The past is our heritage, the present our glory. We are putting our house in order. We are the captains of our own destiny. The uncharted future issues its challenge, and New England responds.

NORWICH FIRE LOSS SMALL FOR LAST YEAR

During the year ending December 31st, the local fire department received a total of 397 box alarms, telephone and oral calls. During the year 1924, the department received a total of 229 calls. The fire loss for 1925 was $32,894.21 and in 1924 the loss was $45,698.75.

Legion To Install Officers Monday

Owing to the fact that the regular meeting night of R. O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, occurred New Year's night, the meeting was postponed until Monday night. The recently elected officers of the post will be installed at the Monday night meeting.

SHADE DECISIVELY BEATS TODD IN FEATURE BOUT AT THE GARDEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP) — Dave Shade of California scored a decisive victory over Roland Todd, English middleweight, in a ten round match, the feature attraction on the New Year's card at Madison Square Garden tonight. Shade did everything but knockout his English opponent, flooring him for a count of two in the third round, but the Englishman remained vertical during the remainder of the fight despite Shade's aggressiveness and tremendous punching power.

Todd confined his activities to a few jabs and punches and ringside critics failed to score a single round in his favor. As the fight wore on it appeared that Shade would score a knockout over his rival, but Todd was in good condition and his legs were strong. This reacted in his favor and enabled him to weather the furnous storm of gloves which Shade directed at him.

After the fight Shade said that he had injured his thumb in training and it hurt him to use his right hand.

Todd weighed 159 while Shade scaled 155 1-2.

The semi-final bout, produced one of the most stunning endings in the series of Madison Square boxing. Willie Harmon of New York is credited with a second round knockout over Nate Goldman of Philadelphia but the blow which terminated the fight was landed simultaneous with the sounding of the bell at the end of the first round.

Goldman's handlers worked over him with feverish haste during the one minute intermission and he was just regaining consciousness when the bell for the second round sounded. He attempted to rise from the stoll, but fell flat to the floor of the ring and crawled along frantically endeavoring to regain his feet.

At the count of six he got to his feet, but he was reeling in an unbalanced position and he dropped again near the ropes. He would have allen from the ring if Harmon had not rushed to his rescue. Goldman's plucky attempt to continue the fight was generously applauded but the action of his handlers in permitting him to even try to continue came in for a chorus of hoots from the gallery.

Tommy Freeman, Hot Springs, Ark., welterweight, scored a technical knockout over Sergeant Sammy Baker, of Mitchel Field in the seventh round of a ten round match. Baker's eye was badly cut and his manager elected to discontinue hostilities at the end of the seventh round.

THUNBERG FAILS TO SET NEW RECORD AT NEWBURGH

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Clas Thunberg, Olympic speed skating champion, failed in his effort to set a new record for two miles here today. The Finnish marvel skated the two miles in six minutes, three and two fifths seconds. The record for the distance, held by Olaf Rudd, is 5 minutes, 43 3-5 seconds. At the one and one half mile mark, the champion was timed in 4:39, which is said to be but one second slower than the record for the distance. Charles I. Gorman, of St. Johns, N. B., won the middle Atlantic skating championship for Canada by winning three of the four events in competition, losing only the mile event on the titular program. The race went to Valentine Bialis. A crowd estimated at 30,000 persons witnessed the events.

Lew Morris of the 181st Street Rink New York city surprised the spectators when he won the Donoghue Memorial race, coming up from the sixth place in the last lap. A field of eighty started. The point score follows: Gorman, 110; Bialis, of Lake Placid, 70; Meyers of Knickerbocker A. C. 20.

Joe Moore, last year's champion, did not defend.

The summaries:

220-yard championship: Charles I. Gorman, St. Johns, N. B., first; Paul O'Brien, New York, second; Eddie Meyers, Knickerbocker A. C., New York, third. Time 30 1-5 seconds.

440-yard championship: Gorman, first; Bialis, second; Leslie Boyd, Knickerbocker A. C., third. Time 39 3-5 seconds.

880-yard championship: Gorman first; Bialis, second; Meyers, third Time 1:32 3-5.

One-mile championship: Bailis, first; Gorman, second; Meyers, third.

Women's 220-yard race: Miss Mueller, first; Miss Brooks, second; orothy Jackson, Iceland, third. Time 24 1-5 seconds.

Women's 440-yard race: Miss Mueller, first; Caroline Brister, Iceland, second; Miss Jackson, third. Time 47 4-5.

Women's 880-yard race: Miss Mueller, first; Miss Brooks, second; Miss Jackson, third. Time 1:45 3-5.

Three-mile Joseph F. Donoghue Memorial race: Moris, first; Bialis, second; Richard Donovan, Endicott, third, time 9:43 1-5.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON DIVIDE JUNIOR TENNIS HONORS

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—New York and Boston divided the first tennis championship laurels for 1926 today in the finals of the national boys' and junior tournament at the seventh regiment armory.

Singles titles in both divisions were carried off by metropolitan youths when Julius Seligson vanquished Edward Jacobs of Baltimore, in a sensational five-set match, 8-6, 2-6, 6-0, 8-7, 6-1, for the junior crown, while Frank Shields won the boys' championship by defeating Walter Thomas of Elisabeth, N. J., 6-4, 7-5, in another hard-fought encounter.

Henry Johnson and Malcolm Hill, of Waban, Mass., captured the junior doubles title for the third straight year by defeating Jacobs and Everett Smith of New York, 6-1, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Seligson's victory capped a brilliant march through the largest and most representative field ever gathered together for the tournament. The Bronx youth was not among the "seeded" stars, despite the fact that he had established his ability by winning the municipal junior championship, but he cut a wide path through the ranks of favorites, eliminating Malcolm Hill, the No. 1, "seeded" player, in the first round.

Today Seligson had his hardest match of the tournament but his superior driving and steadiness offset the picky efforts of Jacobs, who won the boys' championship last year.

Shields' triumph gives him both the indoor and outdoor boys' titles. His opponent today, Thomas, also was his rival for outdoor doubles championship.

The superior team-work of Hill and Johnson enabled them to retain their doubles honors in spite of the individually brilliant opposition of Jacobs and Smith. Their victory in the final followed triumph in the semi-finals over John Millen and Milton Hofkin of the University of Pennsylvania, 7-5, 6-4.

NUTMEGS BEAT C. F. C. FIVE AND CLAIM CITY TITLE

The Nutmeg basketball team defeated the C. F. C. five New Years afternoon at the Y gyms by the score of 39 to 32. The game was fast and hard fought from start to finish although the winners held the upper hand during practically the entire contest.

Playing amateur rules the Nutmegs started off in whirlwind fashion and were leading at the end of the first quarter 12 to 7. In the second quarter the losers staged a comeback so that the count at half time read 18 to 17. At the end of the third period the count was tied at 27 all. However, the Nutmegs, in the final period easily outscored their rivals who seemed unable to locate the basket.

By this victory the Nutmegs lay claim to the city basketball championship. The C. F. C. were recognized as last year's champs so now that the Nutmegs have defeated them on their own floor and playing amateur rules there should be no dispute but the Nutmegs are the champs. If, however there are any teams that wish to dispute this claim they can get in touch with the Nutmegs by answering through this paper or calling 1914.

In Friday's game the shining lights for the losers were Leffingwell and Capt. Brown while Brauman, Capt. Segal and Goodrow put up good games for the winners. Carden, a new comer, J. Burns and Bergeron, also did some nice work for the Nutmegs.

The following is the summary:

PLAINFIELD BEATEN FOR FIRST TIME BY SOUTH KINGSTON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PEACEDALE, R. I., Dec. 31.—Plainfield Town team met its first defeat of the season 31 to 31, New Year's eve at the hands of the fast South Kingston team at Peacedale, R. I. The game was hard fought all through, at the start the Plainfield team surprised the local team with three beautiful baskets from the center of the floor. The local five found itself again and began shooting baskets from all angles of the floor and went ahead of Plainfield keeping the lead throughout the rest of the game. Normandin was the stellar man for Plainfield while Negreili and Marcella were the best bets for Kingston. Normandin brought down the house with a wonderful overhead shot, while being played by Morley, for a basket. Both teams played, a defensive game making the battle slow and uninteresting. MID-WEST AWARDED PLUMS IN A. A. U. TOURNEYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The middle west gains most of the national indoor championship "plums" of the Amateur Athletic union for 1926, according to a list of the awards made so far and announced today. Four out of seven major athletic title meets go to that section, while two are awarded to the east and one to the south.

Chicago will stage the indoor track and field championships March 6 in addition to the men's swimming meet, scheduled the first week in April. Kansas City will be host to the basketball title tournament March 15-20, while St. Paul will hold the four-wall handball championships on the same dates.

Both boxing tournaments go to the east, Philadelphia holding the junior event, March 26 and 27 and Boston, the senior championships, April 5, and 6. The women's swimming championships, will be held at St. Augustine, Fla., February 9-13.

Men—500 yards, Brookline, Mass., January 21; 200 yards relay, Buffalo, January 23; penthathion, Brookline, Mass., March 11; fancy dive, (10 feet), Oakland, Calif., January 15; women 50 yards, Boston, February 22; pentathlon, Buffalo, January 23; medley, Birmingham, Ala., March 6.

O'Dowd Gets Verdict.

GRANGE STARS AS BEARS BEAT TAMPA CARDINALS

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 1.—(AP)—"Red" Grange proved the star of the game here this afternoon between the Chicago Bears and the Tampa Cardinals, when he broke through the stubborn line of the Cardinals in the last quarter and raced 60 yards for a touchdown. The game ended in a 17 to 3 victory for Grange's team.

Grange got away for his long run after shaking off a number of tacklers.

The Bears then began a steady march down the field, and, aided by a 20-yard forward pass reached the five yard line when Sternaman carried the ball over the line and kicked goal.

The game ended with two more plays Grange's team scored three points in the first period when Sternaman made a perfect drop kick. Grange carried the ball three times in the first period but failed to gain in two attempts. The third time, however, he made six yards around left end. A forward pass, Grange to Sternaman, netted 20 yards.

RUSSIA AND FRANCE RESUME ATHLETIC RELATIONS

PARIS, Jan. 1—(AP)—Athletic relations between Soviet Russia and France were renewed today with a soccer football game in Pershing stadium. Although the Parisian Workers put their best teams on the field, the study Bolsheviks won, 4 to 0.

The Workers made a field day of it and yelled themselves hoarse whenever the Russians put the ball through the French goal posts. The Soviet team made a striking entrance in their blooded jerseys, parading behind a flag bearing the Soviet hammer and sickle, to the strains of the "International."

They have downed teams representing Finland, Turkey and some of the central European countries, and have yet to taste defeat.

ALABAMA ELEVEN'S AERIAL ATTACK PROVES TOO STRONG FOR WASHINGTON

ROSE BOWL, PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—(AP)—University of Alabama's football team passed and rushed to triumph here today against University of Washington huskies and wrote the south's first pigskin history in the far west all over the New Year's day Rose Bowl. The score: Alabama 20, Washington, 19. A crowd of upwards of 50,000 witnessed the game.

George Wilson, Washington's great all-American half back, and its tower of strength, crashed near the end of the second period, and with him went the husky hopes as he was taken injured from the field.

He came back in the last quarter, but too late. The Tuscaloosa team had seen and seized its opportunity. Under the brillian field generalship of Pooley Hubert the lads from Dixie crowded enough scoring into a small portion of the third period to carry off the game.

With the reckless abandon of an almost forlorn hope, they cut the husky defense to ribbons with a dazzling succession of pass a, runs and bucks.

Johnny Mack Brown of the southerners hustled the ball across the Purple line thrice in rapid sequence and twice Buckler added the extra point. On the third he failed to clear the bar.

The Crimson tide came out of the south, reputed as a team of tremendous passing. It made good and more. Pooley Hubert threw one of 45 yards that paved the way for Alabama's second score and in doing it he wiped from the record books the great heave by Brick Muller, 57 yards, made back in 1921 when the Bears beat Ohio State.

Lineup and summary:

Washington	Position	Alabama
Schuh	left end	Winslett
E. Wilson	left tackle	Pickhard
E. Brix	left guard	Buckler
Bonamy	center	Holmes
Wright	right guard	Jones (C)
Ericksen	right tackle	Perry
Cutting	right end	T. Brown
Guttormsen	quarterback	Hubert
G. Wilson	left halfback	J. Brown
Patton	right halfback	Gillis
Tesreau (C)	fullback	Barnes

THE GAME BY QUARTERS

First Period

Guttormsen kicked off for Washington, Mack Brown took it and returned it to the 30 yard line, then Brown toured right end for Alabama 15 yards. On the next he got a yard and a half. The Crimson continued its rush, a pass, Hubert to Gillis netting 29 yards when the Alabama half snatched the ball from the air under the nose of a Washington defender. Hubert took the ball through center nine yards toward the husky 17 yard streamer.

Polley Rubert's wide pass grounded. Polley hit the line for one yard and first down on the Purple 15 yard line. Mack Brown was slumped for a two yard loss. Barnes ran it out of bound for one yard gain.

Elmer Tesreau smashed through and dropped Mack Brown for an eight yard loss. George Wilson speared Winslett's pass and carried it back to the northwestern 45 yard section.

Guttormsen slammed right tackle for nine yards.

George Wilson split right tackle for eleven yards.

George made his next pass good to Guttormsen, who went down beyond bounds on the Crimson 15 yards line.

Patton pierced center for two yards. Captain Tesreau went a triple through the same hole on a delayed buck. Wilson fought his way around left end to the one yard line. Patton went over for a touchdown, first blood. Guttormsen's kick went wide.

Score: Washington 6; Alabama 0.

Captain Bruce Jones booted the kickoff to the husky 15 yard line where Guttormsen rushed it back 29 yards. Wilson made seven yards before he was thrown. Guttormsen registered five yards through right guard, first down.

Patton went a yard via left tackle. Wilson punted the next and Brown ran it back to his own 36 yard line.

Gillis punted sixty yards across the Purple goal line on the roll. It was unexpected and Washington's safety man was caught napping. Cole came in for Schun at left end.

Hubert threw a forty yard pass over the line to Mack Brown but it failed. Duglass replaced Cutting at the husky left end. Mack Brown went 13 yards around left end and was thrown with a crash by Wilson, Hubert heaved one to Gillis, but it was incomplete. He tried another, same result. Third down, ten yards to go. A faked forward pass which resulted in a short one from Hubert to Winslett netted three yards on an end run.

Wilson came up to an obligate of cheers from the stands.

Gillis punted over the Purple goal and the ball was Washington's on it's 20 yard string.

Gottormsen went eight yards through right guard on a quarterback sneak as the quarter ended.

Score: Washington 6, Alabama 0.

Second Period

The huskies resumed their charge and George Wilson put his toe under it for a 45-yard punt across the Tuscaloosa goal line. Pat Wilson went out and Herman Brix replaced him at left tackle.

Gillis made six yards through center and Mack Brown was run out of bounds for a one yard loss. Gillis punted outside at Washington's 43 yard line. George Wilson went three yards through right tackle.

Tesreau was stopped with no gain but George Wilson, taking the ball galloped 33 yards after smashing the Alabama secondary defense. On the next play he passed to Cole and the latter made a touchdown. Guttormsen hit the cross bar with his kick and lost the extra point.

Score: Washington 12; Alabama 0.

Gillis kicked off and Guttormsen ran it back 22 yards to his own 37 yard line. George Wilson was stopped by the Tuscaloosa wall. Patton circled left end for a trip of nine yards.

George Wilson jumped right tackle for two yards. Guttormsen followed his interference eight yards off right tackle.

Tesreau made two yards and first down. He repeated for three more. Pickhard broke through and dropped Patton for a two yard loss. George Wilson shot a pass to Guttormsen for an eight yard gain. He slid under Alabama's left end but failed to gain and was injured again. Alabama took the ball on its own 30 yard line.

The big Washington half back had to be taken off the field and Louis Tesreau, brother of the husky captain took his place.

Barnes got three yards through center and Mack Brown, grabbing the ball from punt formation advanced around left end to his own 40 yard line.

Louis Tesreau signalized his entrance by spearing Hubert's pass and traveled 30 yards but his brother Elmer had committed a holding eror and Washington was penalized 15 yards. They retained the ball on their own 35-yard line and Louis Tesreau punted. Mack Brown grabbed it and dodged the husky tacklers and went forty yards before he was stopped.

Mack Brown's interference failed and he was stopped for no gain.

Hubert attempted a loss pass to Gillis but Washington spoiled it.

Johnson took Caldwell's place at the Crimson full back job. Fourteen yards were added to Alabama's march on a pass, Hunbert to Mack Brown. The period closed with the ball on Washington's 22-yard line.

Third Period

Guttormsen kicked over the goal line and Alabama took it on its 20-yard line. Barnes made it first down on his own 32-yard line in three plunges Mack Brown loped 13 yards off right tackle. Alabama lost six yards when Gillis was smeared by Schuh. Wright went out with a lame ankle. Cook replaced him at right guard.

Mack Brown was stopped dead at center. Gillis failed to complete the pass. Fourth down, 16 yards to go. Gillis punted to Guttormsen, who was downed as he stood. Louis Tesreau lost four yards behind the line.

Louis Tesreau punted. Gillis grabbed it on the bounce and was tossed out of bounds on Washington's 42 yard line.

Hubert got away through left tackle and kept going turowing one tackler after another for a 26 yard run to the Washington 15 yard line.

Polley thrust again through center and Guttormsen stopped him only at the five yard mark. Hubert added another two at center. Alabama huddled for conference.

Score: Washington 12; Alabama 7.

The crowd gave the southerners a tremendous ovation.

Jones kicked off for Alabama and Washington ran it back 20 yards. Elmer Tesreau passed to Guttormsen for a six yard gain.

Louis Tesreau punted and Mack Brown hoofed it back seven yards to his own 32 yard line. Washington was missing George Wilson who watched the play, injured, from the bench.

Barnes, of Alabama, went 17 yards on three plunges.

Mac Brown struggled for two yards. Then came the climax, a pass, Hubert to Mack Brown, 65 yards and a touchdown.

Buckler kicked the extra point and the score stood:

Alabama 14; Washington 12.

Hubert's tremendous pass set a new record in the west, outshining Brick Muller's famous 57 yard toss in 1921 against Ohio State.

Jones kicked off to Louis Tesreau, who was collared on his own 35-yard line. Louis fumbled a bad pass and Alabama grabbed the ball. Hubert pulled another touchdown. Buckler failed to kick goal.

Score:

Alabama 20, Washington 12.

Hubert was on his 40-yard line when he threw the ball and Brown caught it as he was crossing the line beneath the goal cross-bar H. Brix replaced E. Wilson at Washington's left tackle.

Jones kicked off to Cutting, who escorted it back to his own 34-yard line and Patton ran it out of bounds after a two yard gain.

Louis Tesreau tossed one to Patton and netted a six yard advance. Louis Tesreau failed on an attempted pass to Guttormsen. Hubert shoved Patton back for a yard loss. The period closed.

Score:

Alabama 20, Washington 12.

Fourth Period

The biggest husky of them all, George Wilson, came back to the game and a wild Washington roar split the air. Johnson made three and Hubert slid off left tackle to the Northwesterners 13-yard mark.

Hubert failed by an inch to make it first down on the 13-yard mark and next tried to pass. It dropped too low. Washington took the ball. George Wilson went 18 yards around left end. His attempted pass was incomplete. Patton slipped 29 yards around right end, shaking off half a dozen tide men.

Wilson was dropped for no gain at left end. Wilson split left tackle for three yards to the Alabama 37-yard mark. He passed to Guttormsen for the first down on the 31-yard line. The big fellow found his way through center for four yards. Wilson slammed a long low pass to Guttormsen who went to a touchdown. Cook made the extra point.

Score: Alabama 20, Washington 19.

Eight minutes to play and Guttormsen kicked off. Johnson caught it on his 20 yard mark and took it back 15 yards.

Mack Brown once more took the ball for 14 yards around left end and out of bounds on Washington's 48-yard line. Hubert splattered his way through center and continued 33 yards to Washington's 13-yard line. Washington was caught napping, looking for an end run. Hubert tossed a pass right into Cole's arms and the latter ran it back to his own 28-yard mark. Wilson went 20 yards around left end, lame and game.

Hubert made three yards over left guard. The husky line held Hubert to a lone yard gain. Guttormsen fumbled Gillis' punt, but the Washington quarter recovered on his own nine yards. Patton crashed for two yards on two plunges through right and left guard.

The gun sounded and the crimson tide had engulfed the purple tornado.

Final score:

Alabama 20; Washington 19.

PLAINFIELD SWAMPS TEAM FROM JEWETT CITY, 42 TO 13

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 1—The Plainfield quintet took Jewett City's measure in their first clash of the season before an enthusiastic crowd of fans, 42 to 13, here tonight. The rivalry between these two towns made the game the most terrific from whistle to whistle that has ever been witnessed in this town. There were about 700 fans in the hall, the largest crowd of the season, when the referee blew the whistle for the game to start.

In the first half the local quintet had every thing their own way, preventing Jewett City from scoring a full basket. They run the visitors off their feet in their attempt to get the ball. During the first half Jewett City shot from the court three times at the basket. They shot three fouls in the first half.

The second half was just as interesting to the fans as the first half, was Plainfield holding Jewett City down to four field goals and two fouls. The local five used their passwork to good advantage, scoring 20 field baskets and two fouls throughout the game. Norris, local center, starred for the home team, scoring six basket and doing very good field work. Crowds from both sides hooted, howled and booed throughout the game at some of the decisions rendered. The game was one of the roughest played on the local floor. The score:

Jewett City

In the preliminary the Buddies defeated the All Collegians, 23 to 11. The game was a hard tussle for both teams, the local boys having the edge.

TAFTVILLE WINS FROM WEBSTER K. OF C. TEAM

The Taftville Five decisively beat the Webster, Mass. Knights of Columbus team New Year's afternoon at Parish Hall, Taftville, by a score of 50 to 23. The Taftville team took the lead early in the game and held it throughout, the score at half-time being 18 to 13. Taftville showed mighty fine teamwork and every man played a good game with Gauthier being the high point scorer. Dwyer starred for the visitors. Early in the game Tom Coleman, Taftville's sterling guard, badly twisted his ankle and was forced from the game. His injury will keep him out for several weeks.

In the preliminary game the Plainfield Buddies were defeated by the Celtics 31 to 16. The summary:

THREE WORLD'S RECORDS BROKEN AT BROOKLYN POOL

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—(AP)—On an exhibition at their home tank today, members of the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. aquatic team, established three new world's records for backstroke swimming.

Robert Hoole, Ray Smith, Walter Spence and Victor Kiffe lowered their own marks of seven minutes 25 1-5 seconds for 600 yards, negotiating the distance in 7 minutes, 28 seconds. The same four swimmers and Henry Lewis then swam 750 yards in 9 minutes, 25 4-5 seconds, bettering their former record by 2 2-5 seconds.

With a sixth member, August Weinrich, added to this quintet, the team shattered its third mark by covering 900 yards in 11 minutes, 24 4-5 seconds, 15 and 2-5 seconds faster than the old record.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
THE NEW YEAR

Old Time, with ceaseless round comes bringing
The dawning of the glad New Year.
And we, entranced, salute the ringing
Of morning bells, and join the singing
Of welcome cheer.

The Old Year's dead, and sadly dying
We heard—Ah! who can tell?
Perhaps the old man's frosty sighing
Across the waste of snow, outlying
The tolling bell.

The year now gone has brought us pleasure,
And many a happy, peaceful day;
Our garners filled with bounteous measure,
Our caskets stored with many a treasure
Of golden ray.

Here in our city, proud, uprising
Its glittering spires against the sky,
Our progress has been most surprising,
Our people earnest, enterprising,
Our fears—passed by.

Our schools, those temples grand of learning,
Advancing upward on their way,
Have known no faltering or turning,
But kept their altars brightly burning,
And won the day.

And we, in this our first endeavor
To wield the magic press,
How have we turned the wondro s lever!
With well aimed power? oh, may we ever
Receive your answer—"Yes."

And may this year, in its outgoing,
The same as when begun,
Leave City, School and Press all showing
No good a work, the Master, knowing,
Shall say—"Well Done."

Happy New Year

Happy New Year! Something magic
In the words that stir the heart!
Old year's gone, with annals tragic,
And we'll take a fresh, new start.
Pass up all our frets and troubles;
Turn our backs on trials and riles;
Let them fade away like bubbles;
Treat the year that's here with smiles.

It is futile, friend, to worry,
Over past mistakes and frets;
Only gets us in a flurry,
Fills us full of vain regrets.
Yesterday is gone forever,
And today is bright with cheer;
Now's the time to make endeavor,
For another year is here.

Keep your thoughts upon tomorrow,
Look not backward, with a sigh;
Wipe away each trace of sorrow;
Let your heart with hope soar high,
Joy you'll get, if joy you've giving,
As the precious moments flit;
Now's the time to do your living;
Now's the time to do your bit.

Put old past mistakes behind you!
Let old might have been take flight;
Don't let forever failures blind you
To the presents promise bright.
Just go bravely forward sowing
Seeds of happiness and cheer;
Let your cup be overflowing
With the joys of this New Year.

MORE MEMBERS SHOULD WRITE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What has become of all the old writers? There were so few letters in last Saturday's paper! Wake up sisters, and try and write, at least, once a month. It only takes a few minutes to write a little letter and I am sure we all want to see our Corner page full, so let us all try and fill it every week. Some of the sisters have said there will be enough letters without me writing. Don't feel that way. If there are too many letters our editor will hold them over for the next week.

Next Wednesday Jan. 6 is our meeting day and I hope to see a large number of you at Club Number 2 in Odd Fellows hall. You knew Club No. 2 has a birthday in March and we want to have a big time, so come Jan. 6 let us talk it over. I hope all the members of Club No. 2 will come prepared to take part in our regular entertainment Jan. 6. Don't forget to bring a cup, plate, and something good to eat. We had such a wonderful dinner at our last meeting. I hope it will be as nice this month.

Wishing our Editor and all Social Corner sisters a happy New Year I will sign off.

WETONA.

A SYSTEM FOR SAVING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I realize I have been a slacker the past few weeks with several others. Christmas has come and gone once more and now many of us will eat some sewing out of the way.

Crimson Rambler: You sure have been one of the faithful few.

Teena: I was interested in your letter. For a number of years when the pay envelope came I took out one quarter of my month's rent, a certain amount for clothes, a certain amount for fuel, a certain amount to be put in the bank. These were all put in separate envelopes and what was left went for groceries, etc., and if anything could be saved out of that that was saved for something extra. The envelopes were never borrowed from unless absolutely necessary and in this way my rent money was always ready. I have always found that whether you get your pay once a week or once a month that if you take a portion of it to be saved then, you will save it. If you wait till the end of the week or month and plan to save what you have left, you won't save so much. I do not believe in one's denying themselves of all pleasures and good things to save but do think every one who is able to work should have some kind of a system of saving and live up to it. We can't always work. I think there is no truer saying than a dollar is one's best friend.

Silent Stranger: I am so sorry for you and yours.

O. D. and Tatting: Many thanks for cards. A most happy and prosperous New Year to the whole Social Corner family and of course every one knows the editor is the head of it.

E. L. M.

MAKING OTHERS HAPPY

Dear Editor, Social Corner Sisters and Brothers: Here I am again and I wish you all a happy New Year. Never has Christmas been so pleasant to me as the last one. We enjoyed every minute. First let me thank all those who sent cards to me. I tried to answer every one. We had a tree and 15 little boys and girls came to enjoy the good things. Three of the older boys and myself went to the woods for the tree. They wanted the largest one they could find, but as I had to do most of the hauling a small one was plenty large and heavy before I got home with it.

Biddy Ann has taken these 15 chickens under her wing. She has had them a long time and has done ever so much for them. They are children from large families and are very poor. As we have more time than money we did what we could to help Santa out. Biddy made and dressed seven dolls. The dolls were made from stockings. Stuff stocking with cotton, tie a string near the top for a head shaping it round, slit the stocking up a short way for legs, stuffing it plump with cotton. Biddy dressed them even to hats. One was a sailor and he looked fine in blue with white trimming. One was a Boy Scout in tan with leather boots made from old gloves. One doll was dressed as a farmer with overalls and jacket. One as a nurse in white with white cap. The farmer wore a wide straw hat. I cant tell what these rigs were made from or how they were made but it was all materials we had on hand. Biddy ran short on cotton and used an old sweater after unraveling it. We popped corn, Biddy colored some red and some pink with some cake coloring I got it some way at an auction. She made each child a candy Santa Claus by filling a small bag with candy kisses trying a string around for Santa's waist, putting a few kisses in a paper napkin and twisting it hard to form a head, she marked eyes, nose and mouth, a little red for the cheeks, put the twisted part into the bag tied a string for his neck and used two sticks of candy for his arms, dressed him in red paper with cotton for trimming and a bit for his whiskers. There were a delight to the children. I made sleds for all who had none using tub hoops for runners. They worked all right. I ought to know. Didn't they make me ride down our street going like the wind right up over the steam car track? Gee whiz! Your Uncle Wylie was scared! I tried it only once and had to walk back. The hill was slippery and me all done up with rheumatism. I made three tool chests from boxes I got from the grocery for five cents. After going over them with sandpaper and some walnut stain they looked very fine.

I made a picture frame for one little fellow to put his school picture in. It seemed it was the dream of his young life to have this picture framed. He had kept it hidden from the young children done up in newspapers. This little fellow was ten years of age and had never had his picture taken before. We made our own tree trimmings using pictures taken from catalogues after pasting them on cardboard. Biddy had, early in the fall, taken cuttings from a rare geranium. These made fine gifts in their decorated tin cans, one for each girl. Biddy made a hanky for each girl from a salt bag after boiling out the letters. She crocheted an edge for them from pink or red twine split to make a finer thread. These colors are not bell proof.

I made two cradles using a box, cut a circle of wood, cut the circle in half and nailed the straight edge to bottom of box. These are for rockers and they will rock which is just what is wanted. I made three tables 18x12 about 18 inches high. More sand paper and walnut stain made them look like store goods. From a blue serge coat, sadly out of date, Biddy made a dress for one little girl using a plaid scarf for collar and cuffs. It looked mighty fine.

The children came about eight and helped us trim the tree. After they had gone home Biddy and I were very happy putting the gifts around the tree. On one of the small tables was a doll bed set, a mattress, pillows, sheets, a tiny quilt, the blocks about two inches square. It was with the greatest of pleasure we watched them undo their gifts but best of all when they first beheld the tree and toys. 'If eyes can talk, eyes said, it can't be true! I must be dreaming!" It took me back to a boy of nine and sister 13 left orphans and living with a farmer and his wife. I hung my stocking along with one of Sis's across a broom stick on the set kettle in the swill house only to find nothing in it next morning. It was the end of my Santa Claus. Sister never told me Santa died with mother and daddy. I am an old fellow but never have forgotten that Christmas. I want every body to be happy especially the children. A thousand times I am repaid for what I did to make others happy. Now I must close as this letter is getting too long. With best wishes to all. May the sick and sorrowing ones find comfort and strength from above.

LULAR WYLIE.

GREETINGS FROM KENTUCKY WONDER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Now that the busy season is over—the holidays—I am going to wish all the members of the Social Corer a very happy New Year. It is a long time since I have written, but have thought of each member often. Today is the picnic of Club 4 in Putnam, and I had planned to attend, but had to give it up for reasons not planned. I was glad to read a letter from Potlatch. She is so far away that we never expect to see her, but hope she will write a letter often.

Received birthday cards from sisters and will answer soon. I did enjoy them all.

Balsam Fir: I received your nice card and am glad you are on the gain.

Rural Delivery: Please write often as your pieces are very interesting and right to the point.

I have a piece of poetry that is very apropriate at this time so will send it along.

Good-by, Old Year!

Good-by, old year, you're going out,
Your reign is ended, close the book,
With all its fear, its joy, its doubt,
No more within its pages look;
We'll meet its record by and by,
You're going out, old year-good-by.

Good-by, old year, you have been true
You kept the promises you made
Of spring and harvest time. We view
The heaps in barn and storehouse laid,
With thankful hearts, but you must die,
Your time has come, old year, good-by.

Good-by old year, the new year comes,
Her hands are filled with hope and cheer
We greet her gladly; yet we turn
To drop for you a farewell tear
To dimly hear your parting sigh,
You're going out, old year—good by.

KENTUCKY WONDER, (Sept. 11.

LABOR

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have been thinking of writing to the Corner for some time but have kept pretty busy and was not well during the summer.

Balsam Fir sent me a card at Christmas for which I was very thankful.

If it is not too late I would like a pin and thank the editor in advance.

Perhaps "labor" is not a very appropriate subject for those who have had to get turkey dinner for 15 in the family at Thanksgiving and Christ-, but that is my text.

Having been taught that labor is a necessary evil, cursing man ever since the time of Adam, is it any wonder that people think the less they have of it the better? Labor is endured only because it prevents a lack of products or money necessary to life and comfort. This is a dangerous view of the nature of work, for it is incomplete.

The right amount of activity of body or mind is not injurious to human beings, but is of benefit. Productive labor is no more objectionable than the same activity used for sport. There is scarcely an occupation that is not used as a pastime by some men and women, as raising vegetables, chickens or live stock, rowing a boat or sawing wood. Many persons would prefer to continue their productive labor even if they were suddenly given ample yealth.

Money is not the only reward for worth-while labor. Other compensations are love for the work, pride in doing something skillfully or the pleasure of being approved by a pleasant employer. Work is what we live for and rightly done makes all the dignity of life.

Proper recreation is of course essential for the effective doing of work and perhaps this was often neglected in the past. Men would never thrive with all leisure but would be utterly miserable. By taking along a merry heart fatigue will be forgotten, little rubs will furnish merry jesting and chance acquaintance will furnish kindly companionship. The journey of life ill be a pleasure trip, rich with contentment. People ought not to cherish sadness but a merry heart, which finds joy in little things.

Our nation seems to be suffering from a mania for pleasure without work. The great amount of time spent with pleasure automobiles, dancing, football, basket ball and many other sports is not altogether wasted but the people are going to extremes and could more profitably get "A" in class work or the highest aproval of a good employer first and then take a proper amount of relaxation.

No grown person with good health is doing his duty to his country unless he does more than 30 hours work a week. If he does two-thirds of the wrok which he is capable of doing, he is two-thirds an idler.

Our legislators have made many holidays and the cry of labor is, "Cut down hours," until it seems as if only minutes would be left for work. The schools and colleges have the same spirit, which often originates in the homes. Most children think they must be paid for all the work which they do. They are continually receiving many benefits but are not taught to appreciate them.

If everyone would begin at once to do more work, each person would give and receive much better service than at present. Most people are not ready to start until others do better work. The builders of progress are those who begin at once without waiting for others.

Rome fell because her people loved riches and were too selfish to work for themselves or others, imagininng that work was a disgrace. Our government may fall for the same reasons unless duty becomes a joy. The golden rule should be followed and the work carried out with the energy of the disciples in Bible times.

Giving a sum of money to a person in need may do more harm than good. Greater good may be done by finding some renumerative work for a man. Few men know how to hire men to establish industries, but those who do are more worthy of honor and respect than those who gives alms.

Would the worker get along better with his employer if he lived where machines do almost all the work so he could have much leisure and luxury or would he be better off where congenial work alternates with simple pleasures?

With best wishes for the success and happiness of the editor and each member of the Social Corner for the New Year.

ROSARY.

WHERE AR EFORMER WRITERS?

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner—The Christmas of 1925, has come and gone. It has brought many joys to old and young, and those of us, who helped to make it a day of cheer can enjoy the satisfaction that we did something to make this holiday memoriable. As I pen these few lines, we are on the threshold or the gateway, between the old and the new year, but as sisters and readers read this simple message, the midnight bell will have rung in the year for 1926.

We are all hoping for good things in the future days, and if it were not for hope our hearts would grow faint. Those who do not enjoy the host of health, are eager, that in the coming year, strength and ability be restored. There are many conditions, which surround us; we would be glad for an improvement. So it is quite natural, just at this particular dividing line, to wonder what way may be in store for us, after the sun has risen in the early New Year day.

In the Bulletin of Dec. 19, the sentiment at the head of the Social Corner page, offers many suggestions for deep study. "The gatherer of roses must not be afraid of thorns." We might construe the same into another version, "There's ne'er a rose without its thorn." Undoubtedly we may have all had similar experiences, doing those things to help some one in need or trouble, only to have it counteracted by indifference, or cold shoulder. The thorn that has pierced our feelings, is never quite forgotten. I trust we may all enjoy many pleasures in the coming new year, that we may all be more careful that the thorn does not supercede the beauty and fragrance of the rose.

Spry Bird: My sympathy goes out to you in the loss of your sister L. H. K. I met her once, at the picnic, held at Coventry lake in 1912. She and I were partners in the grand march, which preceded seating at the dinner table. She asked me to write in her Social Corner book of addresses, which I did; also she wrote in my book. I shall ever remember her with pleasant memories.

Aunt Alice: I received your Christmas greeting, and appreciate it, with many thanks. I do not think I have your present address, or I would answer you personally.

Irva Lynn: I enjoy your letters very much. I agree with you, the Hudson river, and its beautiful scenery, on both sides is wonderful.

Potlatch: Glad to see a letter from you in your far western home. Hope your health may improve, and you be able to write more often.

North Dakota: Where are you these days? Your letters are always interesting. Hope you will write again soon.

There are many former writers, we seldom hear from. Where are Sarah Ann, Tige and Enid? Their letters were always interesting. I hope all the sisters who can possibly attend the club meetings will try and do so, get acquainted and enjoy friendships.

Best wishes.

JENNIE.

WORTHWHILE SUGGESTIONS

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have read the Social Corner page a number of times and thought I would like to join.

Many people do not realize that feather pillows can be washed successfully at home.

The only requirement is a tub of sufficiently large so that the suds may be worked up and down through the pillows freely.

Make a great quantity of lukewarm suds. A mild soap or soap flakes is desirable for keeping the feathers soft and pliable.

Soak the pillows in the suds for several hours, then wash by swishing the suds up through the pillows. This may be accomplished with the hands with one of the mechanical appliances devised for the purpose, or better still, a washing machine if one is accessible.

Change the suds as soon as it becomes soiled, repeating the washing until the water remains comparatively clear. Rinse thoroughly in clear water and hang in a sunny place to dry, turning frequently to change the position of the feathers in the tick.

With proper care a well laid linoleum floor will last almost indefinitely, continuing to look well under very hard use. But without proper care it will soon graw gray and grimy and the surface will become so roughened and scratched that it can never be made to look clean.

When a new linoleum is laid, it should be varnished or waxed immediately before it is walked on. A thin coat of varnish or wax well rubbed into the pores of the fabric will preserve the surface intact. After this first treatment, frequent washing with a mild soap and warm water will keep the floor clan and in good condition with very little effort.

A perfectly neutral soap is generally the most satisfactory cleansing agent for a linoleum surface, though a stronger soap may be necessary when a floor becomes very dirty. In any case the soap should be thoroughly rinsed off and the surface well dried.

Whenever the varnish or wax shows signs of wearing off, it should be renewed. Twice a year is not too often to rewax. As soon as the raw surface of the linoleum is exposed, the dirt and water sinks down into the pores and, once below the surface, they can never be removed.

Washing powders or harsh soaps should never touch linoleum. They will only roughen up the surface and make it catch and hold the dirt more easily.

I will take as my pen name.

NUMEROUS REMEMBRANCES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I am going to tell you how I enjoyed Christmas. I felt pretty good and I was real happy. As the time and days went by I would go to the door and there would be a letter or a postal or a package. I sat down and opened and read them. Oh, how happy I was. I had three letters with money. I had 14 cards from friends, and nine from the Social Corner sisters. There were Mittie, Lo, Maple Leaf, Malba, Calla Lily, True Blue, Whirlwind, Savilla and one that had no name. Well, I thank you all for the cards, and I also had a lovely gift in one. She knows who it is and so does Catnip, and many thanks. I hope to see you soon. If nothing happens I expect to be at our next meeting in I. O. O. F. hall.

Olga: How are you? Have not heard or seen you for a long time. How is Bachelor Maid. How are her eyes? Mine are bad. I cant see much. I go out only a little.

Dahlia: Would like to shake hands with you. Glad you think of me once in a while. I wonder where Lois is. I have not seen her since Bumble Bee's party. Hope she is well.

With best wishes and a happy New Year for all the sick and shut ins, and hoping we all will have a happy New Year.

CLUB NO. 1 MEETS JANUARY 13

Dear Social Corner Friends: Unfortunately, on account of the fire in the Windham bank building, we are unable to have the Chamber of Commerce rooms for our next meeting. But, through th courtesy of one of our local business men, I have secured rooms at the Y. M. C. A. for Jan. 12th.

Bring your dishes as usual also food, and for entertainment we will have a general contribution of readings, recitations, music, etc So come prepared to help, each and all.

Hope this cold weather lets up before long. I like the cold but the last few days have been too cold for comfort especially the biting winds. I'm sorry for those who haven't a warm fire and shelter. Last week a man was seen cooking his breakfast over a little fire by the roadside. No one knew where he slept. No home and no fire to sit by.

How thankful we ought to be that we have plenty.

Best wishes to our editor and all friends of the Corner.

APPRECIATED CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Dear Social Corner Friends: You all knew I am a "slacker" as a Social Corner member for I have not written one letter a month as good Social Corner members should do and can't remember when I did write last. However I have read all the letters on the Social Corner page and enjoyed them. Have been glad others did their duty even if I didn't. When the page hasn't been filled I have told Jack's wife that she should do her duty and write to the Social Corner more often and what she replied was, "Practice what you preach." Now I want to tell you about some Christmas gifts I received which I value much—simple things in themselves but given with the true Christmas spirit, I'm sure.

A young friend (ten year old boy) who knows that I want a tiny tree at Christmas time sent me a dear little Christmas tree which he had chopped down, and I had it decorated and I enjoyed it just as much as a child would. I even bought a candy cane to hang on the tree. (I had a candy cane every Christmas when I was a child. They are as nice now as they were then too.)

Another gift I received was a linen center piece, embroidered and designed by a 14 year old boy, then a cute match scratcher (which was made by another ten year old boy.) That was made of a ten inch square of cardboard covered with wall naper. In the upper corner is a picture of a red bird. In the lower corner is a large square of sandpaper and then at the center top is a red ribbon loop and bow to hand it to the wall. I also received a wash cloth folded to form a pocket (fastened with pins) which held a "tar soap baby."

I had other lovely gifts of course but those were the sort of thing one always receives. A friend who works in the mill and is obliged to do her housework, cooking, etc., at night, received a gift which appealed to me, also. A friend sent her a large work basket—which contained a loaf of cake, some cookies and tiny mince pies. It certainly was a gift worth having and it was appreciated, too, for those of us who work outside of the home, know its not easy to work all day—then go home and do another day's work before one can retire.

Ah well—Christmas 1925—is a thing of the past, and when you read this, the New Year will be with us—so I will end this by wishing everybody a happy New Year.

LOST ON CHRISTMAS EVE

Dear Social Corner: Have I forfeited my right to my pin? I hope I haven't. No, I'm not lost, strayed or stolen but I am living out of town about 110 miles but I am now home visiting so will try and make up for lost time. Now, I have presented my case we will have the editor to be the judge of whether I forfeit my pin or not.

Now I shall try and describe what a lovely trip we (my husband and brother and myself) had coming up here. We came up in what some people would call a car (Mr. Ford's special but which if you ask me I would call a piece of worn out junk.)

We started at 6:30 Christmas eve on what is really a four hour drive but which took twelve hours. All went well until we got to Milford where we got off the road and were completely lost. In addition to that our steed got balky and would go about a rod, cough and then stop. Just about as soon as friend hubby would get back in from cranking, the contrary thing would stop and cough again and out again he'd get. Well we finally did remedy that and after inquiring we finally found out we were nearing Middletown. We got to Middletown after a while out as soon as we got out of Middletown we got lost again and this was worse than ever. Wherever we were I can never tell you but it was out in some p lace where they get the news once a year. Then finally we got out into what must have been immense wods, with a lot of different roads. We would go down one only to find a sheet of ice, back that one and over another only to find a cow pasture and so around and back until we finally neared civilization once more only to find ourselves in Portland only ten miles from Middletown after riding about three hours. We certainly were discouraged. Finally we got onto the New London road then we had a flat tire and we let it go flat finally the tire came off and the rest of the way to Norwich we came on the rim. Finally with much noise and clatter at halp past six Christmas morning we arrived in Norwich tired but so happy to get home alive. I do hope none of the readers will ever have to enjoy a time, like that.

Must close for now, with best wishes to all.

OLD FAITHFUL.

FORGIVENESS

Dear Corner Sisters: "To err is human, to forgive, divine," and how many times we fail to prove our divinity! It is often hard to forgive, but in a queer little country, in the northern part of France, we find the simple peasants actually making a business of this divine act of gorgiving. All the this divine act of forgiving. At the beginning of the year in Britanny a week of holiday is decreed. All work is suspended, and the people attend solemn, prayerful services in the churches, and following the service feasting is held in nearby hostelries and here, indeed, th barrira fall, for every man must settle every difference that has arisen between himself and his neighbor during the year, and the differences must all be adjusted. What a happy thought and how impressively at peace must be their hearts as they leave the place of reconciliation, leaving broken bread with one and all in an overwhelming gracious spirit.

And now dear sisters let us as a body, of true Christian women adopt this method, be divince and forgive the small differences that have arisen during the past year. I miss many of the faces and I trust many miss mine. As we go forth into 1926 let us resolve to be true to our name of Social Corner, that we may make it a hapy New Year and whole year for all.

Effie M: The gift is a delight to my eye and a joy to my heart.

Maple Leaf: So sorry not to see you Christmas day.

White Dawn: I did enjoy those trips. Many thanks to you and the Mr.

Chocolate: I am still guessing.

Necia: Pancakes? Yes.

TRUE BLUE.

CHRISTMAS IN MAINE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Here is wishing all a happy New Year. I want to thank you all for your kind remembrances, letters as well as cards. I was not forgotten, outside the Social Corner.

I trust that all enjoyed Christmas. It worried people in Portland for fear there would not be a white Christmas, but there was. Two weeks ago I was in Portland for the week. Such crowds a body could not breathe in some of the stores.

Several hundred men put of work and yet everybody seemed to have plenty of money.

I did not go to do Christmas shopping. I went to see the sights and have a good time, for I knew I was going to be shut in when the snow did come for keeps.

It was one round of pleasure after another, theater, and whist parties. I enjoyed an evening with the Wilson club and had a fine time. Then went to Thornton Heights to visit a sick friend just home from hospital then to theater and believe me I was getting tired and although the play was one of the best I went to sleep looking at Charlie's Aunt.

City life would not agree with me now. My friend Bubbles is some sport. Only wish you could meet her. You know she was quite ill for a few hours while I was visiting her, only a cold though, so she wanted me to take her place at the whist club and I did and won the booby prize, a china tea pot. One of the club had just celebrated her golden edding and so she was presented with a $10 gold piece.

I had a fine time out to lunch after theater and then listening in when we got to 79 Walnut street. But home and country for mine. Christmas day, we went out to neighbor Swan's to dinner and had a very nice time. Today Sunday has been the coldest yet, 6 below this morning, and it is snowing tonight. But with only a few inches on the ground now we can stand some more just as well as not.

I trust all will enjoy a very pleasant New Year and that those sick or in sorrow, may find comfort and happiness in the good old summer time. Many thanks, Hope, for your box.

I enjoyed letters telling about Long Society. My mother lived there when a child.

Good night and best wishes to all.

BALSAM FIR.

NEVER FAILING DUMPLINGS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I must take time to write a few lines as I thought there would be room enough for a bit in the Corner as I noticed in the Saturday's Bulletin that it was pretty short of writers. As some one said, where are all the writers? I am busy these days but it doesn't take long to write. If they didn't write a very long letter it would help to fill the page. First I want to thank all the sisters that sent me cards and letters. I think Santa was pretty good to me this year as I had numerous cards and letters from other friends besides the Corner sisters, a number of packages and sums of money included. Don't you think I fared pretty well? I think there was more made of Christmas this year then there has been for several years which is right. It should be the most important holiday in the whole year.

Primrose: I will try to attend your meeting of Club No. 4. What a big club we have got to be! We ought to have a meeting more often then we do for you know that we never lack for food and abundance every time. I will tell the sisters of a joke I saw in the paper. I think that will make them laugh. A woman walked into a store and said to the clerk, "I want a small narrow comb about so long for a slightly bald man with celluloid teeth."

I will send in a recipe for never falling dumplings as I have heard some people say they had trouble with them not being very light. Here is the recipe.

Dumplings: Put four rounding teaspoons of baking powder into one quart of flour, 1 teaspoon of salt and sift all together and then wet it with cold water and stir it very stiff. You can drop it with a spoon or you can add a little more flour and cut it out like biscuit. Be sure and have the kettle at a boiling point before you put the dumplings in and then cover and steam just 20 minutes by the clock and see if you don't have some very light dumplings. Try this and see. I hope to hear a report from this recipe as I know it is all right.

A little verse I saw in the paper I thought very appropriate at this time of year.

Farewell

Good bye old year, I love you
I would not see you go
For you have brought me pleasures
I had not thought to know.
For you have brought by gladness
Beyond the bliss of dream,
Along your shining pathway
My eyes have glimpsed the gleam,
Into the house of happiness
You led me ere I knew.
So I shall love you always
Farewell old year to you.

Regrds to all.

RURAL AUNTY.

GET BUSY AND WRITE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Happy New Year! Happy New Year all.

I hope every one had a happy Christmas and that Santa was as good to everyone as he was to me.

We only had a few letters the last two weeks so let everyone make a good resolution to write a few letters.

Are we going to let a modest little Forget-me-not get ahead of us.

I see Crimson Rambler is holding up her end of the Corner. Come again C. R., we all enjoy your letters.

I do hope the weather man will give us a day like this Wednesday next week.

Hope: Are you all set? Roll up your sleeves now, plenty of work for you to do.

Well, I hope to meet all old friends and lots of new ones this year.

Rosy Posy: Thank you. It's good of you to think of me, but fudge or no fudge try and come down.

Effie M: How many pounds have you lost?

I guess this is enough for this time, for I hope to see our page full Saturday.

Once more wishing everyone a great big happy New Year.

Yours in the Social Corner.

BLACK EYED SUSAN.

THE NEW YEAR

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Another year has rolled around and brought many changes. Some are good, some not so good but all work together for the one great plan. There are so many things we cannot understand, yet they work together for some good purpose. We often sit and ponder upon these things and as we look out into space we see there the same great problems as we see nearer to us so we can only say God knows best what we should have and leads us on to that great goal of the future which we are not able to fathom. So as we live may we ever strive to do our best at all times and may the New Year hold many blessings for us all as we work together in unison for the greater unison here and hereafter. May each and every one have a very happy and prosperous New Year is the wish for all the Social Corner sisters and editor.

Club No. 5 meets at the Buckingham Memorial, Jan. 6, 1926. Hope to see as many as possible at the meeting.

ALTA.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Editor and Cornerites: Having been a guest at one of your meeting and being very much impressed by the sociability and the good feeling that existed I would like to join the Corner and add my name to the long list of members of Club No. 2.

I will take for my pen name

PEACEFUL.

CHRISTMAS GIVING

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters and Readers: I wish you all a happy New Year. I want to thank the sisters and readers for their cards and I am thanking you also for asking why I do not write that I will simply state I thought I was using space which belonged to some of the other 1200 members, but I am sure the space seems to be in evidence just the same.

I was reading in one of my magazines concerning Christmas Gifts. "The secret of successful giving," and receiving too, I may add, is the secret of success in all social life, the tact to perceive another's point of view, or as Addrienne Thum expresses it, "the sympathy to put oneself in another's place."

Of course, he says this is a natural gift with some, but others of us are more obtuse. Thought and consideration on this subject are a great help in this, as in all other questions of life, great or small. I suppose the few of use have not had the problem of sending and receiving Christmas gifts to and from someone who had the same interest as ourselves, but whose interests through separation have changed thus diminishing our zest and pleasure in exchanging gifts. We know that the other person feels as we do, yet both parties are reluctant to cease so this little burden which is a pleasure to neither is continued when the courage to stop would relieve both. I thought this plan of sending a card or some slight token that will make the recipient feel no obligation a very good idea. It takes an extreme amount of courage to do this, for each one feels that the other will send a valuable gift and of course she does not wish to be the first to discontinue giving. He goes on to say, "You may be well assured your silence on your little card will call forth a sigh of relief and more gratitude than has been felt for many a Christmas in the past." This situation is one so unusual that I have no doubt the reason similar advice has not been given before is it seems ungracious at this season of love, good will and peace, but if the joy of the heart goes not with the gift then the gift is but poor indeed.

I was talking with a lady today who said her greatest pleasure was to give to the poor children and try and make all children happy.

Adrienne Thum said, 'I once asked a lovely lady of means who gave many gifts. At Christmas time, she told me, one of her greatest pleasures was a custom she had established when her boy was a very little child. We would have $10 changed into quarters and dimes and on Christmas eve would stand in front of the five and ten cent store windows and see the poor little boys and girls come and press their faces against the glass and look longingly in at the toys and candy they had no money to buy. My little boy would give to each one a piece of money and we would see the longing change to delight. Heaven only knows, what trash they bought, but the gladness that the children and I felt was more than I gave or received by all the gifts I exchanged with my friends."

Poor children often get presents, but the joy of choosing is seldom theirs, who is to judge what trash is? Surely it is not the gift that give the most pleasure.

The giving of ourselves is the best gift that any of us have to offer, and it would be well if we could bring back, the simple hospitality of the olden days and have less of the making of elaborate gifts.

I think in giving a piece of one's handiwork and knowing it was made for them is giving of yourself. I am sure it is such.

I want to thank the sisters and readers who sent me birthday and Christmas cards, as I received in the neighborhood of 150 cards. It is splendid to be remembered by ones friends. I am most grateful to you all for them.

I want to thank the telephone operators and all the post who sent me cards. If I haven't reciprocated I shall, in some way later.

KITTY LOU.

GREETINGS FROM SISTER READY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I wish you all a happy New Year. I thought I would put that down first so I would be sure it would be in my letter. It is now off my mind and I feel betted knowing it is done. We are certainly having it cold. I had a lovely time this morning. I did my washing and after hanging them on the line the clothes froze stiff and the clothes line only broke twice. I felt thankful I got out of it as easily as that. Well I have always found out that nothing is so bad that it couldn't be worse. The ground was all covered with nice clean white snow, so I did not have to send the clothes to the laundry to be washed. Well, well, I am so busy keeping up the fire, preparing three meals a day, sweeping down cobwebs, and chasing coal dust and ashes. I guess I will not have any time to make New Year's resolutions. If I did make any I should forget them before night and if I wrote them down I would misplace the book and when I wanted it to see which one I wanted to keep I would not have time to hunt it up. So I will keep right on doing what is meant for me to do.

But I always mean to do something for some one before the day is done. For the benefit of those who like cats, will say we have a lovely one, black and white with fur just like silk. Only the best is good enough for him.

Aunty No. 1: Do not faint if you see me walking in some Sunday. Am up that way very often now.

Best wishes from

SISTER READY.

FINDS HELP IN CORNER

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: I do enjoy reading the sisters' letters so much and I think there are many things to help one in doing their different kind of work. I am going to try making rugs of old silk stockings. I have crocheted them in rag rugs and they help out wonderfully.

It is so nice we can meet our old and new friends at the Social Corner. Hope we will have a nice day Jan. 6th and hope that U. C. E., Ora and Bumble Bee will be there.

Will you please send me a pin if not to late.

HILLTOP.

CLUB NO. 2 MEETS

All Social Corner Sisters: Social Corner Club No. 2 will meet January 6, 1926 at Odd Fellows hall, Norwich.

Each sister is asked to bring her own dishes.

Yours, with a hearty wish to our Social Corner for a prosperous New Year.

HOPE.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: Having attended several of your meetings and having such a nice time I would like to be one of you so will sign myself

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The attention in the Norwich Almshouse was brought to the attention of Norwich people a half century ago, for insane people were being kept there as well as poor people and this did not meet with the approval of many citizens of the city.

News of the week as taken in part from the files of the Norwich Bulletin of 1875, is as follows:

Monday, December 27, 1875—A. F. Willoughby, selectman, has called the attention of the citizens of Norwich to the fact that there are now three raving maniacs in the almshouse and that this is no proper place for them. He declares that they should be sent to Middletown, but, as that place is filled, this is impossible. Under these circumstances, he declares, the town should take immediate action looking both to the comfort of the almshouse poor, and the p... care of its insane inmates. Sane and insane people, he says, should not be kept in the same building and Norwich must solve this problem in the immediate future.

A new Wagner sleeping car, called the City of Stonington, has been put on the through mail train from New York to Boston.

Tuesday, December 28, 1875—A bold burglary was committed Sunday at the home of Mrs. George Perkins on Union street. The house has been closed for the winter and the burglars gained entrance through a rear door and ransacked the house. What has been taken is not known as members of the family are not in town.

The jail is now filled to capacity and what Norwich can do with its additional prisoners is becoming quite a problem. Three more prisoners are awaiting housing the jail at the present time but there is no room for them.

The last of the telegraph poles for the new fire alarm system in Greeneville have been set and connections are soon to be made.

At the regular meeting of Uncas lodge last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: James Cherry, N. G.; E. H. Berry, V. G.; Thomas A. Hall, secretary; E. A. Fitch, treasurer.

Wednesday, December 29, 1875—The chords of the new Shetucket bridge are all in position and it is expected that by tonight the structure will be able to hold itself up by the waistbands as it were, in case the supporting trestle is removed.

The Uncasville Manufacturing company will start on full time on January 1, but with a reduction in wages, which has been accepted by the employes.

The mystery of the burglary in Colchester has been solved in the arrest of a young man who has admitted that he entered the tailoring shop of Mr. Phillips and stole clothing to the value of about $400. The arrest was made when tracks in the snow led to the house where the young man makes his home.

The contents of the missionary box, recently packed and sent off by the ladies of the Park church, the third, by the way, within a year from that organization, were valued at $370 at the lowest estimation. This is probably the most valuable missionary box ever sent out of Norwich.

Thursday, December 30, 1875—Among the oil paintings recently added to the centennial collection on exhibition at the Phoenix bank building, is a charming landscape by Louis C. Tiffany, "Old Bridge at Norwich." The subject is a picturesque old bridge over the Yantic, not far above the noted falls of that river—the same bridge that is sketched in "Drake's Nooks and Corners of the New England Coast." The season is autumn, and the rich foliage of the trees that crown the immense rock that rises on the west bank of the Yantic, is painted with that brilliancy of coloring that marks all the nooks of this favorite artist. The frame of the picture is Moorish and was designed by the artist himself, who sailed from New York last week for his third visit to the Orient, which has afforded the greater part of his subjects. This tour will be mainly in Algiers.

We mentioned some time ago the plan of a number of residents chartering a schooner to go to the centennial and living aboard of her during their stay. A schooner for this purpose is now building at Mystic. It will have 300 staterooms and the cost of the round trip including one, will probably not exceed ten dollars.

St. James lodge of Masons has decided to remove its lodge room to the large hall in the bank building on Shetucket street, which will be handsomely fitted for the purpose. The other Masonic bodies intend to refurnish and decorate their present quarters in Union hall.

The telegraph poles erected on Broadway for the new fire alarm system do not add to the beauty of the street and many residents claim that they would look better is hung from limbs of trees along the street.

Friday, December 31, 1875—The report of the condition of the Thames National bank has been made by E. N. Gibbs, cashier, sworn to by F. Nichols, E. Learned and I. M. Buckingham, directors. Resources total $2,574,556.00 and liabilities exclusive of the surplus total $2,274,556.00. Surplus totals $400,000 and the capital is $1,000,000. Undivided profits total $47,850.45 and the bank has $306,000 in circulation.

Broadway is in wretched condition and teams are unable to make their way through the street. It is a pity that the new pavement was not put in last fall.

An "old fashioned kitchen dance" was given at Hyde Tavern last night and many people from this city attended and enjoyed a delightful evening.

Harvard has been swung over to vote for New London for the holding of the annual regatta of the Rowing Association of America. Yale has already come out in favor of this change and it is understood that other members are willing to see the Thames for the regatta after next year.

Saturday, January 1, 1876—At the annual meeting of the Delaney S. F. E. Co. No. 5, held last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Daniel A. Delaney, foreman; Joseph N. Phillips, first assistant; Charles Huntley, second assistant; Patrick F. Kelley, secretary; Howard L. Stanton, treasurer. Under the new officers it is planned to reorganize the company and put it in a greater state of efficiency.

Floyd M. Crane, who was formerly in the law office of the late George Pratt, has formed a co-partnership and located in New York city, for the transaction of all kinds of law business.

On the day when the city taxes were due Collector Cobb turned over to the city treasurer $154,000, the largest amount, we believe, ever turned over on a similar day.

John Benson, oldest member of the police force, died yesterday after a long illness. He was at one time bookkeeper in the office of the Norwich and Worcester railroad company and in 1862 was appointed special constable and afterward night watchman. He joined the police force on its organization and served as clerk for a number of years. He was 86 years of age.

HENRY FORD'S AIRPLANES AWAIT DISPLACEMENT PARTS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 1—(AP)—With gaping holes in the wings of three, Henry Ford's fleet of four all metal stout-Ford airplanes en route to Florida to enter commercial service, tonight were at Blackwood Field where they will remain until replacement parts ordered immediately after the accident early today reach here.

The mishap which resulted only in damage to three of the planes, occurred when the "Miss Fort Myers," taxiing to take off on the hop to Montgomery, Ala., crashed into the "Miss Tampa" and "Miss Miami," zipping a big hole in a wing of the former and smashing a wing tip of the latter. The propeller of the "Miss Fort Myers" was destroyed in the smashup and both wings were badly damaged.

Only the "Miss St. Petersburg," hitherto the hard luck ship of the fleet of "tin geese," escaped injury.

Officials with the fleet tonight stated that repairs would probably take a week or more.

FINDS MOVIE ACTING HAS MORE THRILLS THAN DANCING

BERLIN, Jan. 1. (AP)—Tamara Karsavina, idol of lovers of the artistic dance, has gone into the movies because she finds film acting more exciting than dancing.

"The wonderful thing about film acting is that one always feels as though it were a first night performance," she said. "Everything is final, never to be repeated. The least important role requires short but complete concentration. There is a charm of creative acting about it that is nowhere to be found on the stage."

London, New York, Berlin and other large cities, however, will continue to see Karsavina's unique dances, because dancing, after all, is her life's work.

RECORDS OF 1925 LIQUOR SEIZURES IN THE STATE

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 1—(AP)—Records in the office of the United States marshal, Jacob D. Walter, show that 14,839 cases of assorted liquors valued at approximately $500,000 were confiscated during 1925.

Most of the liquor seized was taken from vessels, more than 20 of which became government property as a result. Some were sold, some released on bond, some released entirely and others impounded for future disposal.

Whiskey, champagne, burgundy, port, sherry, benedictine, chatreuse, punch ale, stout, cider, beer and gin were among the many varieties of intoxi[illegible] far off country, in a humble manner, without bomb or splendor, but through the transformation that the years have brought and out of the mist of legend and fable, the traditional manger story has developed into a stupendous festival, observed with the greatest pagentry and rejoicing. This is also the anniversary of the ancient Druids Yule-tide festival. The clarion notes of the trumpets on the porch of St. Paul's chapel held the attention of the multitude. The chimes of Old Trinity rang out the carols of the olden years. Wall street, the financial center of the world was given over to merriment, and the staid business people were gathered around a huge Christmas tree, where a band of music drew every lingering footstep. The sternest workers were the greatest rejoicers, and it is the New Yorkers who know how to rejoice. Office workers laid aside their pens, and told the tales of youth, and recalled the Christmas cheer of youthful days. Oh! for the faith of childhood.

Every church door was opened. All the missions celebrated with feast and song. Christmas trees were standing in every public park. Santa Claus worked his way through the crowded stores, and throngs of people pressed in every direction.

But it seemed that the child sentiment was in the midnight masses and candlelight services in the Catholic cathedrals and Episcopal churches where the high ritualistic ceremonies were observed in all splendor.

At the church of the Paulist Fathers, Columbus avenue and sixtieth street, the doors were opened to the waiting public at 11 o'clock on Christmas eve. In 15 minutes there was not a vacant seat in that large cathedral, which is said to seat 10,00 and standing room was hardly available.

The writer pushed along one of the side aisles, about midway of the cathedral, and stood from 11:30 until 1 o'clock.

A few minutes in advance of the midnight hour, the great organ notes announced the coming of the choir, and the soon nearer chanting of the world-known Paulist choristers, whose exquisitely modulated tones lifted the hearts of the vast throng as they silently seated themselves on either side of the high altar.

The cathedral and the high altar were decorated with Christmas greens, with an occasional tall tree and tied with red. The candles glimmed in the wavering light. Adown the side aisles the altars and decorations were lost in the gloom, and the light of the flickering candles alone made the heads of the standing people visible.

The officiating priests wore white robes, also the choristers were robed entirely in white, excepting some of the younger singers, who wore black skirts over a white surplice. It was a beautiful picture.

The chanting of the Paulist church choristers is of the world's finest. The solo anthem O! Holy Night, the stars are brightly gleaming, lightened the heart of many a weary soul. The never-tiring German Christmas hymn Silen Night, Holy Night, the lighter soprano voices first leading, then the heavier voices taking the air, and then the entire chorus in unison, was as if the angels who circled the Madonna were announcing the "Glad Tidings," "Come All Ye Faithful" was one of the familiar hymns, and then the entire band of choristers gathered at the left of the altar and sang "The Star Spangled Banner," after which they grouned in front of the altar and received holy communion.

THE LITTLE SPINSTER.

A DAY OFF FOR MOTHER

Dear Sisters: I have a letter from P. A. which I think worth passing on. She says, "Like most housekeepers I long have pondered on the fact that in my home I never had a moment when I was really relaxed and free from the feeling that at any minute I might be called upon. Even when in my own bed room, some of the family were sure to burst in with a momentous question to be answered at once. And yet I would not have had it otherwise. One of the dearest things in my life is the fact that the first words my children and husband utter upon entering the house—are, "Where is Mother?" I never would curb this habit of pouring out to me their day's adventures: not for words would I discourage my husband, in the belief that my office from the time he arrives in the evening is to talk to him, to listen to him, or just to sit beside him. For this is my office: to be all that a mother and wife may be to her family, but the conviction has certainly been growing upon me that I fill it better if I do not fill it so continuously." I turned the matter over in my mind until hit on a solution so simple that I wonder I had not thought of it before. I would take a day off. Not a day in the city nor one of social diversion but a day of absolute rest at home. I chose Friday, because by that time the week's duties are well out of the way, and because Saturdays and Sundays are the most strenuous days.

"Immediately after lunch on Friday I retire with instructions that I am out to callers and the phone, and that unless the house is actually in flames no one is to come to my door. If you have not tried it, you simply can not imagine the bliss of knowing for the next nine hours you will not hear a human voice. I put on a frivolous dressing gown and slippers and go to sleep in the unspeakable delight that I do not have to awaken until the next morning. So, of course I do awaken in about an hour, very much refreshed, and then I revel in my ease. I manicure my nails: I cold cream my face: I read my magazine and the new books. At 4 o'clock there is a tap at my door. I open it leisurely, and though no one is in sight, the tea tray reposes before me with its fat little pot and its plate of toast. I drink my tea slowly then sit down and write a long, newsy letter to a college friend whose letters before the new regime, I never had time to answer. At 6:30 there comes another tap and my dinner is before me. It is a part of the game that my children who bring up the tray, never allow me to see them do it. At 10 o'clock I emerge to say good night to my family and the holiday is over for another week. It is a splendid plan. ever since I was married have I done so much work without getting tired; never have I been so well posted on current writings and events, and there are advantages I did not see when I instituted it.

"At dinner on Friday night my 12 year old daughter sits in my place at the table and takes care of her father's wants and entertains him. I am sure she is learning, easy and naturally, lessons that will stand her in good stead when she is head of her own home. After dinner my husband having no wife to turn to, talks to the children more than usual. They, having no lessons to prepare, have time to play with dad, and from the sounds that rise dimly to my ears, I gather that they are having as good a time without me as I am without them. Yes, it is a splendid plan and I felt I wished to pass it on to the readers and members of the Corner.

suit themselves or their needs. It reads that it is worth any amount of tonics, and I really think it would help the rest of the family also. The children would learn to cooperate and to take responsibility, and you would find a sweeter air of mutual helpfulness would prevade the house hold as dooh oft.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS

Dear Editor and Members: Though I'm rather late my wishes are sincere, and Sassy wishes each and every one of you, including Dear Editor just the bestest and happiest of New Years.

Now that the holidays are past it is kinder nice to get back to normal once more. Suppose you have all made good resolutions and perhaps broke the most of 'em like myself. But as Susie 66 the sport page says, "there is a kick in breaking them."

I wonder how many of the sisters read Susie's letters to the sporting editor. I enjoy them so much. Susie and the Boy Friend seem like old acquaintances now.

Stanza: Where are you? I still continue the "exercises" and they did help, but am not satisfied yet.

For-Get-Me-Not: I liked the beautiful piece of poetry The Thing That Counts very much indeed. Do send in more like that.

Arlin: Have you moved?

With best o' wishes to all.

TROTZKY ONCE WORKED AS AN EXTRA IN BIG MOVIE FEATURES

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 1.—(AP)—If things go bad for Leon Trotsky in Russia, he always can come back to the movies.

His work as an extra in My Official Wife and The Battle Cry of Peace has not been forgotten by the director who hired him, even though most film fans are unaware that he ever was an actor.

It was in placid pre-war days, of course, that the man who later became lord of the soviets made his motion picture debut.

In My Official Wife, a Vitagraph feature filmed in New York, the script called for a scene showing a group of anarchists plotting fearful deeds in a cellar. The director asked a Russian employe of his fellow countrymen who could be made to "look like anarchists."

"Look like anarchists!" snorted the Russian. "I will get you anarchists what is anarchists."

He came back with a bewhiskered and earnest group, of whom one of the mildest and least bewhiskered called himself Leber Bronstein. This mild man was a real estate operator in a small way in the Bronx. He also wrote for certain foreign language newspapers, but his earnings on both were modest, and he was glad to get the $5 a day as a movie extra.

Later, and so when the director needed some more Russian atmosphere for The Battle Cry of Peace, a film released in 1915, the payroll of extras again included the name of Bronstein from the Bronx.

This was the last Bronstein's director saw of him, but he read plenty later. He has not yet recovered from his surprise at the sudden rise of Leber Bronstein to the Leon Trotsky of world fame.

"He was a good extra, as extras go," the film man commented, "and if he came back we could use him."

Many a man has been known to get a peck of trouble out of a pint flask.

NINETY-THREE FIRE ALARMS IN WHOLE TOWN DURING 1925

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 1.—The Westerly fire department responded to the first fire alarm of the year Friday afternoon, when shortly after 1 o'clock, alarm No. 73 was sounded from the box on Canal street, near the power house. The fire was in the rear chimney of the large wooden frame tenement house of Louis Deutsch, 100 Canal street. The Rhode Island One's truck responded and firemen with ladders on the roof emptied the contents of several extinguishers into the blazing chimney, and the fire was soon put out. The chimney has given Chief George Egger's department trouble on several previous occasions. During 1925, the Westerly department responded to sixty-three alarms for fire and the Pawcatuck fire department was called upon thirty times for their services, so that on both sides of the Pawcatuck river, ninety-three fire alarms were sounded.

CONNECTICUT TROOPERS FIND BOOZE AT SAVONA'S

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 1.—Guiseppe Savona of 26 Cherry street, Pawcatuck, received a visitation from two Connecticut State Troopers from Groton barracks, soon after 10:30 o'clock, New Year's eve. These premises were visited just before Christmas by members of the police department of the town of Stonington, when the search was fruitless. More successful were the state police for not only were men found in the place, but it is said, they procured some wet goods and as a result Savona was lodged in the Pawcatuck lockup on Liberty street for the remainder of the night. Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock he was before Judge William A. Wilcox in Pawcatuck, when he was released on $2,000 bail for which Salvatore Savona and Thomas F. Durkin went surety. His appearance is required in Stonington town court in Borough hall Monday next at 9 a. m., to answer to charges preferred by Stonington Prosecuting Officer George F. McKenna for alleged keeping for sale intoxicating liquors.

The Reo sedan of John O. Gledhill, 107 Friendship street, Providence, skidded at the junction of Granite and Broad streets, Thursday morning, when brakes were applied suddenly. In swinging down the grade it smashed into the rear end of the Hupmobile of Westerly School Superintendent Willard H. Bacon, which was parked in front of the Broad Street high school. The sedan sustained a smashed fender, twisted axle and broken radiator, while the left fender and running board of the Bacon machine were broken. Officer George H. Champlin investigated the accident which will be settled by the insurance company.

New Year's was ushered in Friday in Westerly without any large formal or informal gathering, although there were a number of smaller and private parties. There was no New Year's ball at the state armory on Dixon street as has been the custom in years past. A dance largely attended was held by the Knights of Columbus and Daughters of Isabella at the Rhode Island hotel. The Westerly Hi-Y club held a New Year's eve dance at the Girl Scout hall, High street. Scotch residents had their observance at Caledonian Hall and the two card teams of the Westerly Masonic club played a regular Scotch game in their intra-club series at the Masonic club rooms. This was followed by the serving of light refreshments.

A watch night meeting was held at the Broad Street Christian church, services beginning at 8:30 o'clock in charge of the pastor, Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, who spoke on The Unsubmitted Self. Other pastors who took part in the service were Rev. Byron A. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church and Rev. Lewis A. Walker pastor of the Calvary Baptist church. Chorister George E. Dawding of the First Baptist church led the song service. After the formal program adjournment was taken to the vestry where the evening concluded with the serving of light refreshments. At exactly 12 o'clock the chimes of Christ Episcopal church, corner of Broad and Elm streets, played a number of hymns ringing out the old year and ringing in the new.

Holy week, or the Week of Prayer for the Protestant churches of Westerly will begin at 7:30 o'clock each night of the coming week, when services will be held in the various churches as follows:

Tuesday, January 5—At Pawcatuck Congregational church, speaker, Rev. Marvin S. Stocking, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church.

Wednesday, January 6—At Broad Street Christian church, Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor, in continuance of the regular Bible reading circle service at 7 p. m.

Thursday, January 7—At Grace Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Ernest E. Morrill, pastor of the Pawcatuck Congregational church.

Friday, January 8—At Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Clayton A. Burdick, pastor.

Friday a legal holiday, no session of Third District court was held, all cases having been continued. Over the old year end no arrests were made by the Westerly Police department and there was no call for any session of police court.

Early Friday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Court York at Anguilla, occurred the death of Mrs. Jennie Lee Potter, 70, widow of William J. Potter, a Westerly resident for more than sixty years. She was born at New Shoreham, Block Island, July 4, 1855, the daughter of Thomas F. Mitchell and Elvira W. Littlefield. When a child, she moved to Westerly with her parents.

Nov. 24 1878, she was united in marriage with William J. Potter, who died several years ago. She was a member of the First Baptist church.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Ralph E. Steadman, Miss Vera Potter and Mrs. Court York, and a sister, Mrs Mary M. Clark, all of Westerly.

Mrs. Mattie Taylor, 80, widow of Frank W. Taylor, who died Monday in Hartford, Conn., was a former resident of Westerly and had many relatives here.

She was born in Fairlee, Vt. Coming to Westerly when a young woman, she was united in marriage with Frank W. Taylor, a Civil War veteran.

She lived here until 1890, when she moved to Hartford. Her only near relative is a daughter, Miss Grace Horner Taylor, of Hartford. Another daughter, May F. Taylor, who was educated in the Westerly schools died about four years ago.

Automobile number plates in Westerly this year remind one, so far as those of Connecticut registry are concerned, of those carried last summer by the many Pennsylvania automobiles which visited here and the new Rhode Island plates, are not unlike the old Massachusetts [illegible]

bers of the Westerly police force, who were kept busy reminding the thoughtless, the dilatory and the rank offender.

New Year's day holiday hours were observed at Westerly post office, the Town Hall and the banks were closed all day. The plant of the American Thread company was about the only industrial concern closed. Westerly and Pawcatuck public schools will open the winter term Monday next.

WEDDING
Lewis-Blake

New Year's eve at 8 o'clock in the rectory of Christ Episcopal church Miss Almyra Georgia Blake of Ashaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Blake and Harry Babcock Lewis, son of Horace G. Lewis of North Stonington were married by Rev. G. Edgar Tobin. They were unattended. The bride was gowned in flat crepe of rosewood color and had a corsage of lillies-of-the-valley. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left on a motor trip. The bride has made her home in Ashaway, where she has been postmistress for a number of years. Mr. Lewis, a graduate of Hopkinton High school and Wheeler school of North Stonington, is engaged in farming with his father near Boom bridge. He is a representative from the town of North Stonington to the Connecticut legislature.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Johnson of Westerly were guests Friday of relatives and friends in Norwich, making the trip by automobile.

Miss Gertrude C. Tuite, school nurse at the West Broad Street school, Pawcatuck, has been the guest for the week of relatives and friends in Somerville, and Trenton, N. J.

Many Westerly people were in New London New Year's eve.

Miss Harriet Russell of New London was the New Year's eve guest of the family of Charles H. Richmond in Pawcatuck.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perry left Friday morning for a visit in Boston.

James McKenzie, Jr., will return shortly from Worcester, Mass., where he has been for several years, to continue his residence in Westerly.

Miss Hilda K. Young returned Thursday night from Hartford, to pass New Year's with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Selden M. Young, at Haversham.

Charles E. Champlin returns to his duties in Bridgeport this week end after being the guest of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Champlin, in Westerly during the past week.

The S. D. B. Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church is to hold its January meeting Sunday evening at the home of Miss H. Louise Ayers.

Moses Pendleton of Stonington borough was in Westerly Friday.

MYSTIC

The universal week of prayer is to be observed by the Protestant churches in Mystic by united services as follows: Tuesday, Jan. 5 at the Methodist Episcopal church; Wednesday at the Congregational church; Thursday at the Union Baptist church; Friday at St. Mark's Episcopal church. Each service is to commence at 7.30 p. m.

GALES FERRY

The Men's Bible class, of the Methodist church, has been holding a membership contest for the past six weeks. The Nimrods had Joseph Davidson, captain, and the Hobabs had Alton Chapman, captain, the Nimrods winning. The entire class with their wives or young women friends was given a supper, New Year's eve in the vestry. Three long tables were arranged, and a Christmas tree electrically lighted stood in the center of the room. At 7:45 o'clock all were invited to the vestry where the electric lights were turned off and the tables looked very attractive lighted by pink candles. During supper the lights were turned on. Fifty-seven people were seated and the following menu was served: Beef loaf, mashed turnip, mashed potato, pickles, rolls, cake and coffee. Rev. Geo. Smith Brown, leader of the class was toastmaster and called on Supt. Courtland S. Calver, for a speech, then on John Harold who spoke in a humorous vein. Walter T. Clark, followed and made a hit. Captain Avdson of the Nimrods said the Hobabs were an easy mark. Captain Chapman of the Hobab's responded. During the time colored balloons were floating over the tables and the speeches were interspersed with singing of glee and parodys to familiartunes, also with yells. Mrs. George Smith Brown was at the piano. Upon suggestion of John Harold all joined hands and shouted "Happy New Year."

Rev. Mr. Brown, made an address on the coming of the new year, its possibilities and the hopes and desires for the good of the Men's Bible Class, and the entire community, asking all to begin the new year with prayer. Nelson Parker, to whom much praise is due for the success of the contest and supper made the closing address and was listened to with interest.

The schools resumed their sessions Monday, after the Christmas recess, but closed for New Year's day, Friday.

Friends are in receipt of post cards from Mrs. Charles F. Bartlett, who accompanied her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Townsend, of Uncasville on their cruiser, early in the season to Florida. They visited Charleston, St. Augustine and Palm Beach and other places en route but located in Miami, for the winter.

R. Irving Hurlbutt, assessor from this section of the town, attended a meeting of the board of assessors, at the office of the town clerk, William I. Allyn, at Ledyard Ceter, Wednesday.

Mrs. Eddie Simmons entertained her sister, Mrs. Frank Schikert of Bridgeport, for the week end and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Parker, and daughter, Miss Margaret Parker, were guests, Tuesday evening, at the Christmas ball, given by the combined afternoon class of children and the evening class of adults with Mrs. Walter Duffy teacher, in Odd Fellows' hall.

Mrs. Donald Irwin and daughter, Miss Barbara Irwin spent the holiday, with relatives in Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Miss Barbara Irwin returned to the home of her grand mother, Mrs. Frank A. Aplin here, Wednesday, accompanied by her father Donald Irwin, who returned to Mt. Vernon Thursday.

Railroad ties have been assembled for the New Haven railroad at the yard at the station here by Thomas Baudre, contractor, were being shipped on freight cars to Montowese, Conn., Thursday.

Mrs. A. O Paford went to Providence Thursday to spend New Year's day.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Satterlee and daughter Rebecca, with Miss Marguerite Rockwell, all of North Haven motored here Sunday, and Mrs. Charles A. Satterlee and his sister, Miss Alice Satterlee.

HUGE SALES BRING CENTER OF ART WORLD TO AMERICA

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—(AP)—The American art collector and buyer, who formerly went to foreign countries to do his shopping this year will have left between ten and twelve million dollars as tribute to New York's enhanced reputation as an art center.

The number of foreign collections brought to the United States this year, together with an increased sale of domestic gatherings, is evidence to dealers here of a new assumption by Americans in world art affairs.

A representative of the American Art Galleries said the income tax reductions also was an influence.

"I have had numerous persons ask me to again place their names on our catalogue lists, explaining that the income tax had been taking money which they once had spent on art."

Another dealer pointed out how closely the pulse of Wall Street is felt in Art Row. When prosperity is having its sway on the Street, art sales are heavy. When depression spreads gloom among the brokers, nearly always there is a drop in sales.

The excellent condition of the art market has resulted in many fine and large collections being offered for sale which had been withheld because of a reluctance to sacrifice them.

As for sending foreign collections to New York for disposition, the opinion prevails here that this is only natural because of the large number of Americans who for many years have frequented the galleries of London and Paris during auctions. It is a case of placing the objects nearer the best purchasers.

These collections, however, are not being given up without protest. Witness the Ashillito Chiesa gathering of Flemish and Dutch paintings and Italian primitives, part of which recently was sold by the American Art Galleries for $123,160, and the Leverhulme assortment of furniture, pictures, chinaware and other objects to be auctioned by the Anderson Galleries early next year.

When financial embarrassment made it necessary for Chiesa to sell the objects, the Italian government sought a way to preserve the collection.

After the sale was decided upon, the government exercised its legal right and inventoried certain paintings and objects as national treasures. But it was not in funds to make the purchase and neither were Italian collectors.

Mitchell Kennerly, of the Anderson Galleries, made a special trip to London to obtain the Leverhulme collection and his success brought disappointment to the English dealers and the following remark from one of them:

"The real reason the Leverhulme treasures are going to America is because just now she has the money to spend and an insatiable appetite for acquiring the Old World's famed art treasures."

Immediately following this acquisition came the announcement that Warwick Priory, a sixteenth century landmark, had been purchased by an American for shipment and re-erection in Virginia as a reproduction of Sulgrave Manor, home of Washington's ancestors in Northamptonshire.

Whereupon, The London Daily Mail remarked:

"We cannot prevent Americans from acquiring our famous pictures, our old furniture and rare books but when it comes to pulling down ancient and beautiful buildings, which are the bony skeletons of history and the eloquent reminders of our great past, it is time to cry hands off. England without her historic remains would not be England, while these same remains, transplanted to America, would lose all their meaning and romance."

Some of the outstanding sales here during the year were the Henry Griffith Keasbey collection of European arms and armor, which brought $105,610; the Joseph Dabkai collection of Italian and Spanish furniture, Majolica, glass, terra cotta and textiles, for $68,349; the Remsen-Walker-Howland-MacNeill-Read collections of English, French and Italian furnitures, rugs and other objects for $123,400; an early American furniture assortment, belonging to Jacob Marzoll, for $79,000, and the Isaac Guggenheim collection of tapestries, which brought a large sum.

Eighteen negroes were lynched in this country during 1925, compared with 16 in 1924, the National Association for the advancement of colored people announced.

NEW LONDON FLAGMAN DROPS DEAD ACROSS TRACKS AT SO. NORWALK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—Ambrose C. Edwards, 58, of 98 Washington street, this city, a flagman in the passenger service of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, was found dead on the tracks near South Norwalk station this morning. Edwards was stricken with a heart attack as he was about his duties. Edwards had been in the employ of the railroad about 30 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Edwards, a son, Fred Edwards and a daughter, Miss Helen Edwards, all of this city; a brother, William Edwards, Providence and three sisters, Mrs. Edith Tillinghast, Philadelphia; Mrs. Edna Butler, Troy, N. Y., and Mrs. Marie Osborn of Staten Island.

Edwards was one of the best known railroad men on the New Haven system. He was yard conductor for a number of years in the Union station yard and transferred to the passenger service about 15 years ago. He was flagman of The Everglades, a train operated between Palm Beach, Fla., and Boston, which is scheduled to arrive in New London at 5:15 p. m. daily. The New Haven train crew operates the train from the Pennsylvania station, New York, to Boston. Edwards and the other members of the crew took charge of the train this morning about 3 o'clock. When the train arrived at South Norwalk it came to a stop because of another train ahead of it having come to a standstill. Edwards, in his duties alighted and went back along the rail a distance of over 200 feet for the purpose of flagging any other train that might approach on the eastbound rails. When the signal was given for Edwards to return to the train he failed to put in an appearance, so a trainman was sent back to look for the flagman. Edwards was then found lying across the rails, having been stricken by a heart attack, dying almost instantly. The body was forwarded to New London this noon.

New London was favored by escape from bad fires during the year that ended at last midnight. The department that fights fires had a smaller number of alarms to respond to than is usual in twelve months and by good work when they did respond the loss was kept down to comparatively small figures. The equipment of the department—completely motorized—is such that the speediest response is made to all calls for help to the department.

There are a number of New Londoners in Florida at present, some of them trying their luck with real estate and in business ventures.

Trolley cars were run to every section of this city and its precon, leaving State street at 1.20 this morning, to accommodate celebrants of the coming of the new year. Busses also carried late celebrators to their homes at the same hour.

Niagara Engine company is to feast with its new officers Wednesday evening.

New London celebrants of the birth of the new year conducted themselves pretty nearly as their parents, would have them, apparently, for the police found but a single fellow who did not walk in the straight and narrow path during the revelry throughout the city as 1925 passed into history. The lone offender a youth, was in the police court this morning at a person who defies the efforts of those who would enforce the prohibition laws. This fellow was very drunk on Golden street—so intoxicated that he could not get his feet under his body, so he lay down. Policeman Clifford gathered him in and Judge Crandall read him a lecture on the folly of drinking liquor. Then judgment was suspended so that the youth might "sleep it off," and get to work tomorrow, even though that day will be the end of the week.

Children of the B. P. Learned Mission had their Christmas feast this afternoon and enjoyed gifts and gifts made possible through the generous support the mission has received throughout the year that closed yesterday. Supt. Mansfield made a special effort to provide for the little ones and to bring into their lives happiness they would not realize were it not for what he and others had done. There was singing and instrumental music interspersed with recitations and talks. The tree was well laden with gifts though perhaps all that was asked for by the children in letters to Santa Claus was not furnished. The exercises began at 3 o'clock.

John Kimber of 2 Meres avenue, Groton; Mrs. Frank DeWolf and infant daughter, Waterford, and Mrs. Ray Hill and infant son, Niantic, patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, were discharged today.

An automobile owned and operated by Antone Verdon, 28 Squire street and a machine owned and driven by Thomas A. Payne of East Lyme, were in collision last night at the corner of Ocean and Glenwood avenues, both cars being damaged. Jordan lodged a complaint of reckless driving against Payne, alleging that the latter was responsible for the crash. The state police were requested to order Payne into court this morning and did so, but the accused arrived at the police station too late for the court session. He was accompanied by an attorney and as court had adjourned, Payne was advised to confer with Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky.

Julius Benowitz, 46, of Oakdale, where he had been a farmer several years, died at Lawrence hospital Tuesday night from bronchial pneumonia, having been under treatment at the institution but 48 hours. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. May Squire and Miss Dorothy Benowitz, and by three sons, Louis, Ruby and Harry Benowitz, all of Oakdale.

Captain Charles A. Pinney today appointed Station House Keeper Francis Corcoran court officer. Heretofore a street sergeant and a policeman have been performing the duties of court officers, which fact resulted in two regular officers being off street duty anywhere from half an hour to a half day.

Mrs. Julia S. Buddington, 83, widow of James M. Buddington, died this forenoon at the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Sawyer, Poquonoc Bridge, death resulting from an illness of about ten days with pneumonia. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William H. Chapman, Mrs. Seymour Buddington and Mrs. Moses H. Chapman, all of Poquonoc Bridge, and two sons, Edgar C. M. Buddington and Percy G. Buddington, both of Groton. Mrs. Buddington was born in Mystic, the daughter of the late George Woodward and Nancy Burrows. A half century ago she moved to Mystic and had resided there continuously since.

Mrs. Edward Hennessey, of Franklin street, is entertaining Miss Mary O'Neil, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Cox and son, Alton, Jr., of Williams street, are spending a few days as guests of Mr. Cox's mother, Mrs. William Cox, in North Franklin.

Mrs. Raymond Manahan, of New York, is spending several days with her father, Thomas F. Salter, of Saunders street.

Mrs. Oliver, a resident at 27 Crystal avenue, late this afternoon communicated with the police, informing the authorities that she was speaking for a woman occupant of the house, who declared that a fight was in progress on another floor and desired the police to suppress the row. Sergeant Nelson Smith was assigned to the complaint, but when the officer arrived at the house the fight had ended and the fighters had disappeared.

Harold Winslow, 30 West street, employed by the Connecticut Power Company, who, with his wife, was injured Christmas eve when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on the slippery highway at Branford causing the car to crash against another car, was released from New Haven hospital yesterday and returned to his home here. Mrs. Winslow, however, who suffered abdominal injury will be a patient at the Hartford hospital for some time. Her wounds is healing slowly, it will be some time before her condition will permit her entering to her home. Mr. and Mrs. Winslow were on their way to New Haven to spend the holiday with a relative when the accident occurred.

Egnete Sgrenski, 135 North Bank street, was taken into custody late this afternoon, charged with breach of the peace and will be in the police court tomorrow morning. Sgrenski had been drinking and while on North Bank street he encountered Tony Buska, 19 Belden street. Sgrenski, it is claimed, approached Buska and demanded $2, which amount the former declared he had loaned Buska several weeks ago. A war of words followed with the result that Sgrenski picked up a stone and pounded Buska's left ear with it, causing the lobe to be partially severed. Buska lodged complaint with the police and Patrolmen Edward Daniels and Augustus Ray placed Sgrenski under arrest. Sgrenski was taken into custody Christmas day on a charge of breach of the peace made by Pawel Buogkowski, and the following day when in court the charge against Sgrenski was nolled, judgment being suspended.

SAILOR MAY LOSE AN EYE, AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—John McDonnell, chief machinist's mate, United States Coast Guard, stationed at the local sectional base, No. 4, state pier, is a patient at Lawrence hospital and Edward Bentz, also a sailor, stationed at the sectional base, is under treatment at the pier hospital, suffering from injuries they sustained early this morning when the automobile of Bents was wrecked at the New London approach of the Thames river highway bridge. McDonnell is the more seriously injured and it is probable that he will suffer the loss of one eye. Bentz is not so seriously injured, for his wounds comprise lacer ations and severe bruises.

McDonnell and Bents had been enjoying the New Year's eve celebration about the city and were on their way to the state pier in Bentz's automobile. Bentz was driving the car, a Studebaker touring machine and as the car continued along the bridge approach, Bentz evidently lost control of the steering gear for the car left the highway and going off the side of the concrete surface, crashed against and partially over a granite abutment. The collision caused McDonnell and Bentz to be hurled from the car and a short time later the two sailors were found by passing autoists lying prone in the highway. The police were notified and Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolmen Edward Riordan and George McCaskey soon arrived in the police speed car. By that time Bentz had been taken to the coast guard hospital and Earl J. Sherwood, also a coast guard sailor, had had McDonnell transferred to the New London hospital. At the institution this evening it was stated that there was practically no hope of saving the injured eye as the eye-ball had been ruptured.

THIEF PINCHES FUR FROM THEATRE PATRON'S NECK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1—A new breed of thief has come to attention in the theatres of New London, the sort that takes a fur collar off the neck of the wearer while the latter is struggling for a place in the crowds entering or leaving the house. Such a case came to public notice Wednesday, Discovery of the loss was made immediately, but the collar was not recovered.

CHARACTERISTIC NEW YEAR OMMENT BY LADY ASTOR

LONDON, Jan. 1.—(AP)—A characteristic New Year comment was made today by Lady Astor, the former Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia.

"There is nothing new t day, and there is nothing new to do," she remarked. "If the Christian nations could remember the Christ message, 1926 would be a new year well worth while."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

If you haven't already seen the bill at the Palace the last half of this week don't fail to see it to-day. The show will start at 1:30 and run continuous to 10:30.

The Four Casting Aces open the vaudeville with the greatest casting act in the show business. There is also a Queen in the act and is the only woman flyer in the world. The tricks performed are most daring and thrilling.

Frank Jerome follows with a very novel act executing some difficult tumbles while dancing.

Mandell Sisters, two snappy little girls sure please, the audience with their catchy songs and chatter. Kramer and Griffin furnish a line of hokum that is a sure knockout, they keep the audience in one continuous roar.

The Carson-Kane Revue close the show with a very clever and neat dancing act. Their settings and costumes are the most lavish.

Wm. S. Hart appears on the screen in "Tumbleweeds."

Noted Musician at Y. M. C. A. Sunday 4 p. m.

Pietro Mordelia, the noted Italian piano-accordion artist of Boston, who has charmed Norwich audiences in the Y. M. C. A. courses in former seasons will present one of his choice programs of unusual music in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on the coming Sunday at 4 o'clock. Mr. Murdelia will render several religious selections as well as other appropriate numbers. The father of Mordelia was one of the original manufacturers of accordions, and himself a noted musician, and the son has evidently inherited fine musical talent from his worthy parent, and in addition has been a constant student on the accordion for many years, with the result that he has made for himself an enviable place in the musical world, having presented programs in various parts of America, and always with great success; his ability is unquestioned and his audiences are always enthusiastic. Rev. J. H. Graham will deliver a brief and timely message.

Both men and women are cordially invited to hear this fine program, and boys and girls may come if accompanied by their parents or guardians.

Breed Theatre

Elinor Glyn productions have come to mean beauty, intrigue and exotic romance. To those pictures which bear her name and which are assured of her own personal touch, magnificent sets, correct detail and a perfect type cast are to be expected. Definitely establishing herself and her own personality in her Three Weeks she followed that with another success, His Hour. Now her third personally supervised production has been put on the screen. Man and Maid, adapted from her novel and acclaimed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will come to the Breed theater on Sunday.

Madame Gly, as usual, offers a fund of surprises. Her cast is headed by Harriet Hammond and Lew Cody. The former has been away from the screen for two years due to a long and serious illness. Previously she was a Sennett bathing beauty. She plays the part of the heroine, Alathea. In Man and Maid, and under the guidance of Madame Glyn has emerged a player of unmistakable talent ready to take her place beside any of the great dramatic actresses.

In sets there has never been anything more delightfully presented. The boudoir of the bride was designed by Madame Glyn, and is an exact replica of one of the rooms in her Paris house. It has a wide open fire place, soft carpets, cheery bright chintzes; a four poster bed set upon a dias and canopied with heavy rose brocade.

The Paris apartment of the hero, Sir Nicholas, is all that is desired in the way of comfort and elegance and again the hand of Madame Glyn is seen in the detail of each bit, which is perfect.

Broadway Theater

Positively the most outstanding photoplay of the current season will be unwound on the silver sheet tomorrow night at the Broadway theater. Lying Wives is the unusual film because of its almost phenomenal array of real stars we have ever seen at one time in the same cast.

Cast your eye over this magic cast and if you are a movie fan it will delight your heart. Among the most prominent stars heading the cast are Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Edna Murphy, Niles Welch, J. Barney Sherry and many more too numerous to mention.

Lying Wives is from the original story by Ivan Abrahamson who also wielded the directorial megaphone. This is the biggest production yet made by the famous author-director, and will make a strong bid as one of the screen masterpieces of the year. Lying Wives is undoubtedly one of the finest emotional photodramas seen on the screen this season.

It has a simple story yet it is unfolded in a most convincing manner by a coterie of eminent artists. The theme is based on the pernicious strategy and subtle lies of an impassionate woman in her fight to win the love of a man.

Lying Wives marks the triumphant return to the screen of that charming and accomplished actress Clara Kimball Young. Miss Young is one of the foremost stars of both the stage and the screen and during her meritorious career on the screen she has starred in over two hundred photoplays.

The companion feature for Sunday night only is a fast and thrilling picture of the great outdoors with Buffalo Bill, Jr. in On the Go.

An enlarged orchestra, new comedy and New Kinograms all for 25c admission, completes this mammoth program.

The Lines' Reminder

The H. Wales Lines Co., of Meriden has issued its handy annual reminder, a memorandum book that fits many needs. Among other pictures contained therein of work completed by this concern is the Nurses building at the Norwich state hospital.

Next week at United Congregational church, the cabinet of the Woman's Guild will meet in Miss Pullen's study at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

The executive committee of the missions department of the guild meets at the home of its chairman, Miss Nancy E. Lucas, 94 Sachem street, at three o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Mid week worship, Thursday evening, at 7:45. Mr. Abbott will speak on the phrase from The Lord's Prayer: "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive us our debtors."

The Junior Guild will meet in the church school rooms at half past seven on Friday evening, for a most important discussion of business and further program, followed by a social hour.

The regular Camp Fire meeting will be held at the Community House at 7:15, on Friday evening.

Norwich Music Association

Members of the Norwich Musci Association are promised another delightful musical evening for their December meeting which will take place on Monday evening, January 4th, in Slater hall annex.

The program for the evening will be presented by Miss Marion Armstrong, a Scottish-Canadian soprano, assisted by Miss Lily Leuttman at the piano. Miss Armstrong possesses a pleasing voice and personality, and makes a special feature of her Scotch songs.

The program will be as follows:

Aria—Suicidio from La Gioconda Ponchielli
Apuisement Flegier
Invocation to the Sun-God Troyer
The Lady Picking Mulberries Kelley
Piano solo
Miss Elly Leuttman
Auld Scotch Sangs
Oh, Sing Tae Me The Auld Scotch Sangs

When You and I Were Young Maggie

Palace Theatre.

The Paramount production of "The King on Main Street," is the culmination of a dream Monta Bell, the director, and Adolphe Menjou, the star, have entertained for three years.

Nearly five years ago, when Mr. Bell, whose early career was in newspaper work, was with the Wheeler Syndicate, he met Fontaine Fox, the cartoonist, one night and Mr. Fox asked him to go to the theatre. They went to the George M. Cohan theatre and saw Leo Ditrichstein's play "The King." The story impressed Mr. Bell immediately with its film possibilities, though at that time he had no thought of affiliating himself with motion picture work.

A little later, however, he found himself as an advisor to Charlie Chaplin on the filming of "A Woman of Paris." During the making of that picture Mr. Menjou and Mr. Bell became very good friends, and one day Mr. Bell confided to Mr. Menjou that he would like to become a director. Mr. Menjou replied that he thought Mr. Bell had the qualifications of a good director.

Then Mr. Bell told Mr. Menjou about "The King;" Mr. Menjou liked the story and placed himself under option to Mr. Bell to make the picture.

When "A Woman of Paris" was finished Mr. Bell went to every producer in Hollywood and the east, but was unable to sell his idea. Adolphe Menjou is all right, and if the story is O. K.," they told him, "but who are you"?

Well, about all Mr. Bell could say at the time was, "I'm Monta Bell." But that wasn't sufficient.

After much hullabaloo, Monta Bell convinced Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president in charge of production of Paramount, that here was a story.

And you'll be of the same mind when you see "The King on Main Street" on the screen at the Palace theatre on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Menjou is starred. Greta Nissen and Bessie Love head the supporting cast in featured roles. Other prominent players include Oscar Shaw, Joseph Kilgour, Edgar Norton, Mario Majeroni, Carlotta Monterey, Marcia Harris and Edouard Durand.

Douglas Doty wrote the screen play.

Rapid-Fire Photo Prints

A Chicago manufacturer has perfected a machine that can produce 4,000 prints an hour or about 32,000 a day. Although the machine was designed especially for the rapid-fire production of prints for newspapers and similar photographic service it is adaptable to the uses of firms making a specialty of developing and printing pictures for amateurs. Not only does the machine expose photographic prints at remarkable speed, giving to each the varying intensity and duration of light required, but it develops, rinses, fixes and washes them, counts them out and sorts them with absolute accuracy and prints descriptive matter on the backs. All this is a continuous operation, which resembles in a way the action of a printing press and in which the negatives, contained in a frame, correspond to the type. The sensitized photographic paper is led into contact with the type casting in a cylinder press.

Round Pegs

The late Lord Northcliffe in conducting his newspaper enterprises had little patience with square pegs in round holes. The guillotine was always falling at Carmelite house. But if some people were pushed down, others were pushed up. A stamp-licking subordinate of one day would be, much to his surprise, elevated to a responsible position the next. As used to be said, "One never knew from day to day if one would be running the lift or running the paper."

The story is told by Charles Hands, then a reporter and later a director. Coming up in the "lift" one day with Lord Northcliffe himself, he took off his hat and bowed politely to the diminutive lad in buttons who clanged the gates after them.

"I wish you wouldn't do that sort of thing," said Northcliffe, when they were out of earshot. "It only makes you look foolish."

"Well," said the imperturbable Hands, who was generally regarded as a licensed buffoon, "it struck me as rather a sound plan. You see, one never knows when that boy will be running the paper and will be able to sack me."

Baby Bats

There is a great variety of bats frequenting the Carlsbad Cave which have been given some investigation recently by persons exploring the cave. It seems that some of these "rooms" are especially suited for bat hibernation and during the hibernating season thousands of them are to be seen hanging from the walls and ceiling of the cavern. A species known as red bats was observed in some parts of the cavern in great numbers while there were none in other parts. The families of these consist of from two to four young which cling to the bodies of their mother constantly from the time of their birth to the time when they are able to take care of themselves. The combined weight of the little ones is often much more than that of the parent, and yet it seems that she must carry them about with her in making her flights in pursuit of her regular prey, which consists of the insects captured in the air.

NOANK

Muriel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Carpenter, at Elm street, suffered a broken leg Thursday afternoon when she was struck by an automobile owned by Kenneth Butson, of Noank. The girl was crossing the street in front of her home and did not see the approaching machine. The driver of the machine swerved the car into the trolley tracks to avoid hitting the child but the fender hit her, throwing her to the ground. She was carried into her own home where Dr. W. M. Hill when called, found the two bones in the ankle broken but at that time could find no other injuries.

The king and queen held a series of New Year's receptions at the Quirinal palace, Rome, lasting from this morning until late afternoon, for the cabinet members, senators and deputies.

A MOTHER'S MAD HAPPY

"The children and I had colds," writes Mrs. Nancy Meiser, Richwood, Ohio, "and the first dose of Pyler's Honey and Tar helped us right away. We surely got quick results. A small teasp n or more all the time." Thousands of mothers have found in Pyler's Honey and Tar the ideal cough and cold remedy for their children. Contains no opiates. Children like it. HOW THE NEW YEAR WAS WELCOMED IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Philadelphia today welcomed the sesqui-centennial year 1926. Almost before the solemn tones of the Liberty Bell had died away at midnight, breaking a silence maintained by the bell for 90 years, ten thousand worshippers at the shrine of mummery were gathering.

A few hours later this host of fun descended upon the city in the annual mummies' parade, a column four miles long, resplendent with color and finery. The harlequins held the city in their jesting grasp for three and a half hours, the time required for the marchers to pass the reviewing stands.

Thousands of Philadelphia residents, augmented by other thousands who flocked hither from neighboring states to witness the annual pageant, crowded the line of march. The costumes, were more lavish and bizarre this year than ever before.

The activities of General Smedly D. Butler in prohibition enforcement, the coal strike, income tax dodgers, hit and run drivers, real estate booms, the Prince of Wales, and generally municipal affairs, and the coming sesqui-centennial celebration, furnished material for the comic sections. General Butler was portrayed as having taken the count of ten from "can't drink," in "Butler's last fight."

A total of $26,000 was distributed in prizes. The William F. Funston Club was awarded first price of $1,700, in the fancy division, and the League Island Association captured similar money for first prize in the comic division. The first prize of $1,000 for string bands went to the Hegeman Club.

PRINCE CAROL CAUSED EXCITEMENT IN RUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 1.—(AP)—Carol's renunciation of his position as heir to the Rumanian throne, with the loss of all his royal prerogatives and membership in the royal family, has caused great excitement throughout Rumania.

The king, who yesterday made it known that he had acceded to the request of his son, submitted in writing, from some place outside the Rumanian capital, that he be permitted to give up his rights to the throne, today summoned a crown council to meet at Sinaia, the royal country seat, and presented the situation thus created to the councillors.

King Ferdinand asked and obtained an agreement permitting the succession rights to pass to Prince Michael, Carol's four-year-old son who was born of the union with Princess Helen of Greece.

Although yesterday's announcement of Carol's renunciation came after the crown prince had been absent from Bucharest for several weeks and his whereabouts had caused the king and queen some concern, just what prompted his act has not become known. His dislike of anything savoring of royal form has been no secret, and this together with his love affairs in the past, has caused the spread of all sorts of rumors.

The crown council today included representatives of all the political parties, as well as the cabinet ministers, the chief patriarch of the orthodox church, the presidents of the senate and chamber and General Presan, who was commander-in-chief of the Rumanian army during the war.

Parliament will meet on Monday to pass on the legal formalities necessary for a change in succession.

MISS FRANCES DAVISON WEDDED TO WARD CHENEY

LOCUST VALLEY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Miss Frances Davison, daughter of the late Henry P. Davison, member of the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company, was married to Ward Cheney, son of Charles Cheney of South Manchester, Conn., today in the Episcopal church of St. John's of Lattingtown. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton school and father of Mrs. F. Trubee Davison, and the Rev. Charles W. Hinton, rector of the church.

Among the messages of felicitation to the bride was one from the queen of the Belgians, who, with the king, was entertained at the Davison home on their visit to America shortly after the end of the World war.

In some South American country a gentleman is expected to kiss every woman to whom he is introduced, but they don't run Sunday excursions to that place.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Johnny Chuck's Closed Doors

How simple things seem when you know
Just how and why they happen so.
Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit himself never has a closed door. Until he had bumped his nose against the closed door in Johnny Chuck's house he hadn't known that that any of his friends ever had closed doors in their homes. He had supposed that all those with houses under ground left the halls or passageways open. He had been in a number of old houses, and he never had found a closed door until he had bumped against that one in Johnny Chuck's house.

So when Johnny had told him that he had closed that door himself, closed it from inside, when he and Polly went in to sleep for the winter Peter was still curious.

"Do you ever close a door that way in summer?" he asked.

"Sometimes," replied Johnny.

"When?" demanded Peter.

"When there is need of it and I have time," replied Johnny.

Peter scratched a long ear with a long hind foot. "What do you mean by 'when there is need of it and you have time,'" he asked.

"Just that," replied Johnny. "It is too much work to close a door unless there is need of doing it, and there must be time in which to do it. It doesn't take me long, but there must be a wee bit of time."

Peter thought it over. He was still puzzled. Johnny Chuck's bright eyes twinkled, but he said nothing. Peter wriggled uneasily. It seemed to Johnny Chuck that if he looked hard enough he could see the next question squirming around on the tip of Peter's tongue. Finally Peter could keep it in no longer.

"When do you ever have need to close a door excepting when you go to sleep for the winter?" he asked.

"When someone tries to dig me out," replied Johnny. "But this is a secret, Peter Rabbit, and you mustn't breathe a word of it to any one because some one I have fooled before might hear it and then the trick wouldn't work."

Peter promised not to breathe a word of it, and Johnny Chuck explained the trick. "It has happened more than once that I have had a home

"Do you ever close a door that way in summer?" he asked where there were no rocks to keep the Hound or Reddy Fox or Farmer Brown's Boy from digging it open. Farmer Brown's Boy tried it once. That was before he had become the best friend of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. With a shovel he started to dig me out. Now I had a little side bedroom in the house, so I went in there and shut the door. That is, I packed the doorway to it full of sand. Farmer Brown's Boy dug right down past it. To this day he doesn't know what became of me.

"More than once Bowser has tried to dig me out. Then I have closed the door in his face. I can dig faster than he can. I have filled my hall, and when he has come to the end of the tunnel and that somehow I had escaped. At least, I suppose that is what he supposed. Anyway, he always stopped digging. When I can dig faster than the one who is after me there is time to close the door. Do you see now what I mean?"

Peter saw, and increased respect for Johnny Chuck sprang up in him. Johnny Chuck was smarter than Peter had thought him to be. And all the time he wondered how many other folk knew anything at all about Johnny Chuck's closed doors.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING TO AMERICAN PEOPLE

the intelligence and work of their children toward the prosperity and greatness of the starred republic, raise aloft the best wishes to a friendly nation which is going still farther on the road to world civilization."

Count Volpi, Italian finance minister:

"The cleared-up relations on the war debt were concluded with equanimity, and that transaction illuminates the renewed intimate spiritual communion between Italy and the United States.

"The possibility of future misunderstandings, as one of the most authoritative members of the American government said, owing to the loyal accord between the two peoples, has vanished.

"Italy, young, strong and sure of her destiny, is the sincere friend of the United States in continental Europe, while the starred republic is the great friend of Italy across the ocean.

"I will preserve all my life a most cherished memory of the United States, with a desire to return there in order to know better that people without equal, to whom I send my heartfelt greetings and good wishes for the year just dawning."

Baron Kijuro Shidehara, Jananese foreign Minister:

"It is with pleasure that I extend to America heartiest felicitations for a Happy New Year, and continued prosperity, and for her general good will toward the peoples of the earth.

"America and Japan have been friends for many years. The United States guards one side of the Pacific, while Japan guards the other. Both have made mistakes in dealing with international problems. But our intentions have always been to preserve peace. Our hearts have always been in the right place.

"As long as that condition exists, the friendship, between America and Japan, the freedom of the Pacific, and the altruism of the two powers will sweep aside all difficulties that may present themselves in the future."

Captain-General Primo De Rivera, premier of Spain:

"I am pleased, through the medium of the Associated press, to greet mankind in the name of Spain at the beginning of the year 1926 and to exted well wishes, because during this year the peoples may tighten their bonds of fraternity and renew in the world those principles of order without which no peace is possible.

"I am convinced that peace, order and progress will reign in Spain during the year just born."

"Greetings to all the peoples, and peace and prosperity to the nations of North, Central and South America."

Emile Vandevelde, foreign minister of Belgium:

"The year 1925, from the viewpoint of the relations of my country with the great American nation, has presented exceptional importance. For one thnig, the United States will remember that Belgium was first among the nations of continental Europe to send delegates to Washington to settle the debt problem, and that by the grace of mutual goodwill this problem received there a solution with which both peoples have been able to declare themselves satisfied.

"For another thing, Belgium knows that the United States, which so generously came in aid of her invaded provinces during the war, is contributing in decisive fashion at the present hour to place her finances and credit on unshakeable foundations.

"In more general fashion let me rejoice in the name of my country, which more than any other has had need of security and peace, to note that the American government will not remain aloof from the great efforts being prepared with a view to the reduction of armaments."

Dr. Alexander Tzankoff, premier of Bulgaria:

"Today our hearts go out to great America, in the opening of the year 1926. The year 1925 passes into history as a year of failures and distress. We earnestly trust that during 1926 patriotism will touch the soul of our nation deeply and make the new year hopeful and full of achievement."

Angel Gallardo, foreign minister of Argentina:

"Upon the commencement of this new year, I wish to express my very ardent desire that, during its course, the cordiality that governs the relations of the peoples of the American nations will be strengthened by an even greater support of the means for peaceful settlement of international questions of which this continent has given an example to the world."

Girardo Machado, president of Cuba:

"Cuba never forgets the friendship and gratitude which it owes the American people, and therefore it is a pleasure for me to especially send to the United States and its government, presided over today by one of its most illustrious citizens, my great friend, the cordial greetings of my people and my government."

Jose Serrats, president of Uruguay:

"The United States, as a great human democracy, merits the attention of the world. Its civilization is complete, politically, intellectually and economically.

"Its marvelous development and the wealth that it commands create for America great moral and historical duties to humanity, which at present is troubled and filled with uncertainties. I do not believe that the country of Washington, Lincoln, Madison, Jefferson and Wilson will fail to heed that clamor for life and love."

Rodolfo Chiari, president of Panama:

"The new year just beginning will without doubt be rich in the ideas of peace, justice and harmony such as are at present receiving serious attention from all humanity. At least it seems certain that those ideas and the moral atmosphere of all America now are ripe for the establishment of a firm basis of understanding and cooperation, and a more ample conception of solidarity and international justice among the different nations of this hemisphere."

Sir James Craig, premier of northern Ireland:

"Ulster is triumphing over her difficulties, politically and economically. She has weathered the worst of the storm, she is on good terms with all her neighbors and looks forward, full of confidence and hope, for the sunshine of abundant prosperity.

"In that hope she says to all her people: 'Grow old along with me. The best is yet to be.'"

BRICKYARD EMPLOYE WAS KILLED BY TRAIN

MERIDEN, Jan. 1.—(AP)—The crew of a freight train found the dismembered body of Thomas O'Neil, a Berlin brickyard employe, scattered along the main line of the railroad near the Berlin station this morning. It is believed that the man had been walking along the tracks, when he was struck by an express train, probably number 35, which does not stop at Berlin. No relatives of O'Neil have been located, and the selectmen of the town took charge of the body.

CARDINAL MERCIER ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

BRUSSELS, Jan 1.—(AP)—Attendants at the bedside of Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, who underwent an operation early in the week, say that complete recovery now is only a matter of days. The cardinal is able to take broths and milk.

Now that the noted prelate is well past the crisis, the doctors admit that the first night after the operation was disquieting on account of strong heart palpitations necessitating injections of sedatives. Since then, however, his condition has been satisfactory, the cardinal sleeping six hours the second night. Last night was equally good. His temperature this morning was given as 98.2 fah., with pulse 75.

CONSIDERING COLOR SCHEME FOR AUTOMOBILE MARKERS

HARTFORD, Jan 1.—(AP)—The color scheme for the 1927 automobile markers is already being considered by the state motor vehicle department, although the 1926 markers were put into general use only today. The work of making the plates, which is done at the Connecticut reformatory, takes considerable time and the specifications must be available as early in the year as possible.

Officials at the department are confident that this year's markers, the color scheme of which is black lettering on a chrome-yellow back-ground, will be satisfactory from a standpoint of visibility. Satisfaction has also been expressed with the quality of the workmanship in the plates which are slightly heavier than last year's.

A manly man likes to acknowledge his faults to a womanly woman who tries to convince him that he hasn't any.

QUARTER MILLION GILPATRIC MONEY UNACCOUNTED FOR

HARTFORD, Jan. 1.—(AP)—After seventeen months' investigation of the financial tangle left by G. Harold Gilpatric, more than a quarter million dollars of the money he embezzled remains unaccounted for. The examiners have followed one trail after another off into thin air in an effort to ascertain where all of the missing $360,000 went.

It is this mystery which has led Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman to consider the advisability of sending Lawrence A. Howard, counsel for Trustee Arthur E. Howard, Jr., of the Gilpatric bankrupt estate, to interview Gilpatric in the Atlanta penitentiary.

That the former cashier of the First National Bank of Putnam, concealed a substantial amount, to be available for his use whenever he shall be released from the federal penitentiary, is doubted by practically everyone who in any way has been connected with the investigation. The opinion prevails among these people that Gilpatric would have fled when he saw that the discovery of his defalcation was imminent, if he still had enough funds at his command to get out of the country and live elsewhere in luxury and comparative safety.

The fact that, instead, he fired a bullet into his temple, considered together with what has come out of the financial investigation appears to have satisfied those most interested that he has nothing hidden. Rather they are of the impression, which is said to be shared by his family, that Gilpatric made outright loans to many of his friends which were not only not secured but not even recorded, owing to the ex-cashier's utter carelessness about details. Some of the authorities feel that Gilpatric would recall the names of some such people if confronted by an interviewer from Connecticut. He has shown a disposition to discuss the case more freely since his imprisonment in Atlanta began and has made the direct charge that a certain personal and business friend whom he named got nearly $100,000 from him by deception. For a long time after his arrest, he declined to make any comment concerning his relations with this man.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

The Woman's auxiliary of Fletcher post, American Legion, is to meet next week Friday at the home of Mrs. William I. Bogue, at which time the annual Christmas party will be held. Every member has been notified to attend and bring some gift of small value. These are to be passed out during the evening when it is expected that considerable pleasure will be afforded as a number of them are interded for this purpose. The Christmas party takes the place of the regular meeting of the auxiliary which was scheduled for Monday evening.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

The Christmas entertainment which was held in the Armory last Sunday afternoon for the children of this community under the auspices of Mercier assembly proved a real treat for the children. The committee in charge of Miss Eleanor Donovan as chairman, left no stone unturned in the way of providing goodies for the children. The installation of the officers elected for 1926 will take place Sunday afternoon, January 3rd, at 2 P. M. in St. Mary's Memorial hall and will be conducted by the state president, Mrs. James J. Dutton of this city. The degrees will be conferred on a large number of candidates in charge of Mrs. Hannah Eirmann. There will also be an exhibition of the work done by the drill team. It is expected a large number will attend the installation, including a delegation from the assemblies from different parts of the state. After the work refreshments will be served in charge of the officers for the past year.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS

Hiawatha council, Degree of Pocahontas, held election of officers at its meeting in Haymakers' hall, New London recently. Mrs. Florence Bliven was elected pocahontas. Others elected were:

Winnona—Mrs. Sara McCarthy.
Prophetess—Mrs. Grace Keeney.
Powhatan—Lawrence Fargo.
Keeper of Records—Mrs. William Payne.
Collector of Wampum—Mrs. Elsie Harrison.
Keeper of Wampum—Mrs. Edward F. Prevost.

Officers will be installed by Mrs. Nettie Kinney of Norwich and her staff on Jan. 14.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS.

Buckingham council, No. 14, held the regular weekly meeting Wednesday evening with Past Councilor Fred Shappee presiding, calling the meeting to order promptly at 8 o'clock as there was considerable business.

The election of officers was held and the following were elected: Past councilor, George Wallen; councilor, Geo. Faulkner; vice councilor, Donald Whitney; recording secretary, Ralph Chapman; assistant recording secretary, George Ayres; financial secretary, Elmore Leseman; treasurer, Fred Wilson; conductor, George Stewart; warden, Allyn Brown; inside sentinel, Walter Krohn; outside sentinel, Martin Stapleton; chaplain, Floyd Pierce.

After the election of officers the entertainment committee reported that the masquerade and box social is to be held January 20. They have planned a very good reception.

It was voted to secure a junior past councilor's badge for Brother LeRoy Brainard, who has held the financial secretary's position for four consecutive years, therefore being entitled to one.

The Boost or Forfeit list was read and several new names were added to the list. The time was extended until Jan. 30.

The Norwich council has practically formed the bowling team that is to represent Norwich in the bowling match between this council and New London for a silver trophy cup.

Next Wednesday evening there is to be degree work, also installation of officers and a large attendance is being prepared for.

The fourth degree of Dusty Knights is to be held Saturday, January 9, at New London, and several members plan to attend including several candidates.

After several short talks the meeting was closed about 10.45.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

Members of Richard Hourigan post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, members of their families and friends made a merry New Year's eve in the post rooms at 161 Main street. The affair was one of the largest ever staged by the post and proved to be one of the best events in the history of the organization.

Dancing was enjoyed until about 2 o'clock Friday morning and other entertainment was provided in whist and pinochle tournaments held in the card rooms. Refreshments were served by members of the woman's auxiliary and the beautiful floor basket, donated by a member of the auxiliary, was awarded to George A. Turner. Music for the dancing was furnished by Werth's orchestra.

Among the guests was a large delegation from Harley P. Chase post, V. F. W., of Westerly, R. I., also members of the auxiliary of that post.

Whist prizes were awarded as follows: First, ladies', Mrs. Cornelius Hoelk; second, Mrs. Annie Semineau; consolation, Mrs. Ida Fairbanks; men's first, G. A. Turner; second, Cornelius Hoelk; consolation, H. Gauthier.

ODD FELLOWS

At the regular meeting of Shetucket lodge, No. 27, held in Odd Fellows hall, Tuesday night, officers for the ensuing term were elected as follows: Noble grand, Frank R. Jones; vice grand, Hazen Jones; recording secretary, S. Howard Bishop; financial secretary, Luther G. Andrews; treasurer, Edward F. Kinney; trustee for three years, J. F. McNeely.

The officers will be installed at the meeting of the lodge to be held on Tuesday, January 12th, at which time installation work will be in charge of District Deputy Grand Master Fred L. Avery and staff of Willimantic. Appointments will be made on that night and all officers will be installed.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance at the meeting and the entertainment commitee has arranged for refreshments to be served following the work of installing the new officers.

Some women don't care very much what church they attend just so the pews have soft cushions.

TAFTVILLE

Miss Anna M. Morse, of Newark, N. J., is the guest of her aunt, Miss Anna M. Beardow, of Providence street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Scott, of Pawtucket, R. I., are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hindle and family, of North Third avenue.

The deaths of several dogs in the village from distemper have been reported. Each year the disease seems to break out worse than the previous winter, and each year it carries off a number of high priced specimens. One peculiarity of the disease is that it affects the thoroughbred dogs more seriously than the mongrels, and puppies under six or eight months of age rarely recover from it. Accompanied by a high temperature, many dogs take pneumonia and die, others are left blind, deaf or paralyzed. Although the American Kennel club and the Distemper committee are spending large amounts annually in an attempt to discover the cause and prevention of distemper, their efforts to date seem to be of no avail. Inoculation does not appear to be certain, as many dogs that have been inoculated take the disease and die. Local people should try to keep their dogs away from others at this season of the year when the disease is spreading.

The many friends of Mrs. Herbert P. Hoyle, will be glad to learn of her discharge from the William W. Backus hospital, where she has been a patient, and of her return to her home on South B street.

Motor magazines are calling their readers' attention to the opening of the new road from Clayville, R. I., across the new Providence reservoir and into Providence. This was the historic Providence and Norwich turnpike, running through Taftville at a point near Baldwin's store, and along the road now known as the Mohegan trail as far as Central Village. In the old days, the turnpike passed through the Prentice farm, which later became the Bolduc property. The articles describing the history of the famous turnpike call attention to the many old houses still standing on the route, which were once inns and taverns, where passengers in the stage coaches could rest and obtain refreshments and where the horses were changed.

Most all the automobiles that passed through Taftville Thursday were sporting their 1926 registration plates.

A merry gathering to greet the New Year was held Thursday night at the Taftville Mannerchor club. The big banquet hall was gaily decorated for the event, and there were songs and dancing. At midnight, the members, their wives and lady friends, sat down to a delicious turkey supper. The affair was highly successful and enjoyed by all those present.

POLICE MAKING SEARCH FOR RUNAWAY BOY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 1.—The New London police are making a search for J. F. Jones, Norwich youth, who ran away from his home today, conducting the search at the request of the Norwich authorities. The youth is known to have boarded a Connecticut Company trolley that left Norwich for New London at 8.15 o'clock. The youth is described as being 16, light complexion, and when he disappeared from home, wore a blue suit and blue overcoat and a light hat. A watch for the youth was maintained and inquiry for him at the Y. M. C. A. was made, but no trace of the young man was found.

GOLDEN WEDDING DAY WAS QUIETLY OBSERVED

Mr. and Mrs. Savilian E. Chapman observed their 50th wedding anniversary at their home in Flanders road, Niantic, on Friday. The day was observed quietly due to the ill health of Mr. Chapman, who is in his 81st year. The only guests were their sons Perry E. Chapman, of Hartford, and Postmaster Clifford S. Chapman, of Niantic. The couple were married in Branford, the home of Mrs. Chapman. For many years Mr. Chapman conducted a blacksmith shop at Niantic. He is the son of Solomon Chapman and a native of East Lyme. Mrs. Chapman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hervey Bishop, who removed to Branford from Meriden.

NORWICH TOWN MAN TO ENTER IN NEW ENGLAND FIDDLERS' CONTEST

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Eighteen fiddlers between 68 and 83, from fiddlers between 68 and 83 years from notifications that they will participate in the all-New England fiddlers contest which opens January 4. More entries are expected.

The first group will appear at the luncheon January 4, of the Town Criers, of Rhode Island, which is sponsoring the contest. Other groups will appear each night at the E. F. Albee theatre.

The list of entrants follow:

Dan Elliott, 82, Old Soldiers' home, Bristol, R. I.; Forrest Mowry, Woonsocket Hill, R. I.; Alanzo Wood, Hope, R. I.; William A. Spink, Chepachet, R. I.; Jonathan Whitford, Eastford, Conn; Joseph Motyle, Central Falls; Joseph Shippee, Plainfield, Conn.; Charles Dagle, East Boston, Mass.; Joseph Shippee, Plainfield, Conn.; P. G. Colleary, Marlboro, Mass.; Ernest Summer, Foxboro, Mass.; Henry Pray, Ballouville, Conn.; O. A. Gallpeau, Chicopee Falls, Mass.; William Mitchell, Providence, R. I.; Peter Nelligan, Cambridge, Mass.; Frederick Cochran, Brockton, Mass.; James Gaffney, Providence, R. I., and William Henry Whitman, Norwich, Conn.

William Henry Whitman, of 232 West Town street, Norwich's entrant is a man of 78 years, one of those "young" men who keep up with the times and likes a joke as well as the next fellow. The story of his life and how he came to be interested in "fiddlin'" reads like a book.

In an interview, Friday night, Mr Whitman laughly said that he was not looking for publicity and possibly was talking too much about the contest, but that he intended to compete if his health permitted. "Anyway I'll be there to see the fiddlers," he said. "and perhaps I'll see some of the fellows I used to meet with in the old days when I was playing at dances in Rhode Island towns."

"I was born in Coventry, R. I., on September 25, 1847," said Mr. Whitman, "my father being Stephen Whitman and my mother Waity Potter Whitman. I was a little chap when I left that place and I grew up near Westerly, in Hopkinton, remaining there until after the Civil war. In the final year of the war, at the age of 16 years, I enlisted in Battery F, First Rhode Island light artillery. I did not actually get into battle for this battery had been shot to pieces when I joined, but it is claimed that we were the first to enter Richmond, men in the battery speeding up their horses to get there ahead of the other batteries. Most of our campaigning was around Dutch Gap and the battery saw action there, the captain and many of the men being taken prisoners in a surprise attack.

"After the war I came to Norwich and for a number of years lived in this city or in New London. I was a painter by trade, also a carriage maker and had shops in Lebanon, Jewett City and in Rhode Island at various times. I've really done no active work for about 12 years now."

One of his pleasantries, and he often got in a bit of humor, came when he told of his marriage, for he said: "I married Henry Ford's daughter, not the millionaire Henry, but the Henry N. Ford, of Salem, my wife's maiden name being Minnie." At this time his voice broke somewhat and he told of their only child, a son, who died when 17 years of age. "We're alone now," he said.

"But you want to hear about my "fiddlin'," he said. "Well, you see I'm one of these fellows who never took a lesson." Asked when he first began to fiddle, he replied, "I began fiddling when a boy. A neighbor had a fiddle I wanted but he asked $5 for it. I told my father and the neighbor came over to show the instrument. My father didn't believe I could learn and only offered $1.50 for the fiddle. It was a fine fiddle and I began to shake for fear I wouldn't get it." He laughed and continued by saying that his father finally got it for the $1.50 and he had his first fiddle.

"I suppose I'll have to play at Providence," he said, "but it's hard to remember those old tunes I played nearly 50 years ago. I can remember parts of the Arkansaw Traveller, White Cockade, Turkey in the Straw, Rose of Oak Hill, Flowers of Edinburgh, and several others but when I was fiddling at dances I could start at sundown and play all night, never repeating a tune and playing entirely by memory."

At this time Mr. Whitman picked up one of his violins, a sweet tuned instrument of the manufacture of Antonius Stradiverius, 1737, made in Germany, and played a few bars. There was a growl at this time and Mr. Whitman laughed and said, "My dog is not musical, he always growls or barks when I play." Sure enough, the little bull pup in the room sat up lusty howls and growled away as long as the notes of the instrument reached his ears. When Mr. Whitman stopped playing the dog curled up on the chair and seemed glad the nuisance had been abated.

Tenderly picking up two other old instruments, one of them nearly 200 years old, the other about 75 years old, Mr. Whitman told their history as far as he knew them. The newest fiddle was one of those manufactured by Albert Potter, of Caroline Mills, Rhode Island, and had the date of manufacture, January 7, 1855 inside. Mr. Whitman remembered the manufacturer of this instrument and told of his making fiddles to sell at $100 each. This fiddle was of light pitch and to demonstrate the difference in the fiddles, the old man picked up another instrument, having a deep tone. This was of the manufacture of Jacobus Stainer, in Absan, the card inside bearing the further wording, "Prope Oeneponturn 16." This instrument was purchased last summer by Mr. Whitman, and is alleged to be the Gallup fiddle, once owned by the Gallup family, in Ekonk. The Stradiverius was purchased last summer from a West Side resident and is a sweet toned instrument, the lines of the wood giving it the appearance of having been set together, the grain of wood being clearly defined in straight lines.

"If I go to Providence, I'll take the Stradiverius," said Mr. Whitman, "for it fits me better and I love to play it. I've had several other fine instruments, one over 200 years old, which I sold only last summer. I like this one best however, and that's why I wouldn't let let it go at any price.

"I've loved the fiddles for 66 years now but I haven't played much for about 25 years. I'm practicing a little, however," he continued, "in case they want me to play a tune at Providence. But I guess there'll be too many old fiddlers there to have them all play."

Mr. Whitmas, despite his age is in fairly good health, slightly hard of hearing, but able to travel about as he likes. Before going to Providence, he intends to purchase a new string for the Stradiverius and let it stretch for a few days. He is particular about the tone of his instruments and likes the string set high.

Norwich will certainly await the results of Mr. Whitman's efforts to win at Providence, providing his health allows him to compete, but at any rate, the city may take pride in possessing one of the old time fiddlers who made the square dances of 30 and 40 years ago, the most popular form of entertainment of those years.

WEST SIDE CLUB WINNERS IN PINOCHLE

The West Side Pinochle club was entertained New Year's eve by the Colonial club at the club house on West Main street and in the pinochle play during the evening defeated the entertaining club by a score of 112,370 to 95,585. This defeat failed to dampen the spirit of the occasion and at the conclusion of the fifth game the tournament was brought to a close and refreshments were served.

The menu of oyster chowder, rolls, sandwiches, pickles, cheese, doughnuts, coffee and cigars was served and during the banquet Dave Kenefic, a member of the Colonial club, entertained with a number of selections played on an electric driven Orthophonic Victrola, loaned by the courtesy of the Plaut-Cadden company. This feature of the evening was greatly enjoyed.

The committee in charge of arranging for the annual pinochle party and banquet comprised the following: Chowder, George Burlingham; entertainment, Lloyd Cochrane, chairman, W. Irving Drake and William Huntington.

The scores for the evening were as follows: West Side Pinochle club: Alexander Jordan 9445, C. S. Peckham, 3195, J. A. Parker 8670, Dr. Napoleon Lewis 9590, Everett Peckham 10,065, E. Underwood 9100, A. J. Bailey 9,915, C. V. Pendleton 8930, C. N. Ellsworth for H. H. Pettis, 11,140, J. Jordan 9350, Dr. Boynton 8640, C. Schuler 9250, total team score, 113,370.

Farming pays, but often it only helps to pay the interest on the mortgage.

SUIT ALLEGES RECEIVER WASTED GROCERY ASSETS

P. Berry and Sons, Inc., Hartford have brought suit in the superior court for this county against. Abe and Samuel Levin of this city, claiming damages of $1,250. According to the complaint on Oct. 14, 1924, in an action brought by Joseph E. Jaffee of Worcester against the S. & W. Self Service Grocery Co., having places of business in Norwich and Moosup, Abe Levin was appointed receiver, and filed a bond with the clerk of the court, with Samuel Levin as surety. On Nov. 7, 1924, Abe Levin was appointed permanent receiver.

The plaintiff is a wholesale distributor of butter, eggs, cheese and general produce and from Jan. 7, 1925 to Feb. 11, 1925 delivered to the receiver upon his order at agreed prices, sundry lots of butter, eggs and merchandise of the value of $1,081.80—$1,006.30 remaining due.

The complaint alleges that during the time that Abe Levin conducted said business under the court order he failed to personally supervise and direct the conduct of the business, to employ competent and experienced help to assist him in the conduct of the business, to keep proper account of records to enable him to know or ascertain the results of his conduct of the business and the conditions and prospects of the estate, to file monthly accounts, showing the results of his business during the preceding month as by the rules of said court he was required to do; and he conducted said business in a negligent, careless inattentive, lax and unbusinesslike manner.

By reasons of the omissions, negligence and improper conduct of the business by Abe Levin it is alleged, that from the time of his appointment to Feb. 28 1925, run at a loss by the receiver and the assets of the estate were wasted and lost.

On Feb. 10, 1925, the said corporation was adjudicated a bankrupt and on Feb. 28, 1925, the said receiver surrendered and delivered all the assets then in his hands to the trustee in bankruptcy, without having been authorized by the superior court, and without having first settled his accounts as such receiver and without having paid or made provision to pay the debts and obligations incurred by him as such receiver, it is alleged.

Since Feb. 28, 1925, Abe Levin has not had and has not now assets of the corporation sufficient to pay the plaintiff's claim or any part. On Nov. 6, 1925 the superior court authorized the plaintiff to sue said receiver on said claim.

Unclaimed Letters.

Unclaimed letters in the Norwich, Conn., post office for the week ending January 2, 1926 are as follows: W. Brooks, R. F. D., Miss Bertha Brown, Joseph R. Bowen, Mrs. Irene Roudi, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Simpson, Flora Wheeler.

Fair weather friends are plentiful, but few are willing to hold an umbrella over you during a storm of adversity.

LYON SUCCEEDS WEYMOUTH AT TELEPHONE EXCHANGE

Henry S. Lyon, exchange manager at Putnam, who succeeds on January 4, J. Nelson Weymouth, as exchange manager at the telephone office, in this city, is a young man who has steadily progressed since he entered the service of the Southern New England Telephone company, a little more than ten years ago, and is well equipped by training and experience to capably serve the company and its patrons in this city.

Mr. Lyon was born in New Haven, April 28, 1894, and was educated in the public schools of that city.

Entering the telephone business as contract agent and collector at Winsted, on May 12, 1915, Mr. Lyon early showed his business ability and in November of the same year, his title was changed to that of salesman and collector. In April, 1916, Mr. Lyon was transferred to Torrington to serve there in a similar capacity. He remained at Torrington a little more than two years, or until May, 1918, when he transferred to Winsted, as cashier at the office of the company in that city. His duties there brought him into contact with the subscribers of the company and his engaging personality won him many friends in that place and his work generally proved his capacity for greater responsibilities in the business.

HENRY S. LYON

After three years as cashier at Winsted, an opportunity came for further promotion and Mr. Lyon, who had attracted the attention of the officers of the company by his fidelity to his work and his excellent judgment in business affairs, was selected to fill a vacancy in the Putnam exchange. He was appointed manager there, taking office October 21, 1921, and for more than four years he has efficiently served the telephone company and looked well after the best interests of its patrons in that city, where he made and held many friendships among the business people of the community.

Mr. Lyon also was very popular among telephone workers in the Putnam exchange area and they regret his departure although, of course wishing him the best of success in his new position in the larger exchange here.

Ralph C. Booth, assistant exchange manager at Waterbury, will succeed Mr. Lyon as exchange manager at Putnam. Mr. Booth has had a little more than ten years' experience in the telephone business, excepting about two years in military service during the war.

His six years as assistant manager in the large office at Waterbury, has well fitted him for the responsibilities he assumes following his recent appointment.

Mr. Weymouth, upon retiring from his office here, will be located at the headquarters of the company in New Haven, and will make his home in that city. He becomes secretary of the committee which administers the benefit fund plan, maintained by the company, and from which benefits are paid employes during illness, to dependents in case of death and which also provides pensions for the older employes leaving the service.

Mr. Weymouth will actively administer that fund, a position which calls for a pleasing personality, sympathetic nature and rare business judgment all of which good qualities Mr. Weymouth possesses in marked degree, as his Norwich friends will attest.

Telephone people in Norwich regret the departure of their exchange manager, but wish him well in his new and larger field of endeavor and will extend a welcome hand to their new exchange manager, Mr. Lyon, who is well qualified to carry on the work laid down by Mr. Waymouth.

NORWICH TOWN

To those in this and other communities who each year look forward to the hospitality of the First Congregational church New Year's afternoon and evening, the festivities this year as usual were most interesting and intertaining.

The program opened at three o'clock when the annual business meeting of the church was held. Interesting reports were submitted, concerning its many varied activities.

In the church auditorium where the programme was carried out, an exceptionally large gathering assembled to listen to the forty-fifth annual recital of Herbert L. Yerrington, who in his customary finished way entertained, those present for about one hour with a finely selected list of numbers. Organist Yerrington was ably assisted by Frederic H. Wyant, tenor soloist.

The opening number, Scherzo symphonic in D. Op. 133 No. 2, was by Faulkes, organist of St. Margaret's church Anfield, Liverpool, one of the most distinguished among living English writers for the organ. This number is a bright movement with a quiet trio for the middle section.

Forest Vesper, by Johnston, was a beautiful number, being especially fascinating at its close. Mr. Johnson was born in Scotland in 1879, and died in 1919. He was at one time organist at Cornell University, later in New York city. Following this pleasing number, Mendelssohn's "If With All Your Hearts," from Elijah was finely given by Mr. Wyant. Mr. Yerrington's next number, Night by Cyril Jenkins, was a pretty discriptive piece, while Shepherds' Morning Song, by Arthur Davis, was the pleasing composition of a St. Louis organist. Fantasia (in form of an offertoire) by Berthold Tours, provided a number comprising varied moods. Tours was born in Rotterdam in 1838. From 1861 until his death in 1897, he lived in London. He was the composer of anthems, church services, etc. One of the most popular pieces on organ programs, is Marche Ch mpetre (rustic march) by Boex, which was well given by Mr. Yerrington. Mr. Wyant's closing number was "Lord, Thou Art Merciful," by Vivian P. Lowe. Both of Mr. Wyant's numbers were rendered in true artistic style, in pleasing voice, and with enunciation clear and polished. Vespertilla by Diggle, was Mr. Yerrington's next number. This was a fine composition. Dr. Roland Diggle has been organist of several churches in England and America since 1904. He now is located in Los Angeles. "Finale in A minor," by Cuthbert Harris, was Mr. Yerrington's concluding number.

Although this was Mr. Yerrington's forty-fifth recital he has been organist at this church for about fifty three years.

As usual those present were cordially invited by the church pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, to assemble in the chanel and participate in the parish supper. With those who had already congregated there, more than 250, were guests of this church, when the following delicious menu was served: Cold ham and tongue, rolls, cabbage salad, pickles, relish, an assortment of fine cake, and coffee. Preceding the supper, Rev. Mr. Bailey who acted as toastmaster called upon Rev. A. Norwood Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) to say grace. Seated at the table of honor were Rev. and Mrs. Bailey, organist and Mrs. Yerrington, Mr. and Mrs. Wyant, Rev. and Mrs. Charles E. Reeves, Rev. Mr. Foster, and Rev. Charles A. Northrop of Danbury, a former beloved pastor of the entertaining church, who was one of the special guests.

Among the large assemblage were guests from Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., South Hadley, Mass., Hartford, Danbury, Dover, New Hampshire, New London and Providence. The visit clergymen at the request of Rev. Mr. Bailey gave impromptu humorous talks, while the company was seated around the tables, following the supper.

The committee in charge of the supper comprised Mrs. Dwight W. Avery, chairman; Mrs. Frank E. Sterry, Mrs. Clyde M. Beebe, Mrs. Earl Browning, Mrs. Michael Buckley and Mrs. Orrin F. Merry, also Mrs. Frank Wheeler who assisted in the kitchen. The waitresses were Misses Doris Browning, Elizabeth Avery, Esther Durr, Ruth Sterry, Minnie Durr, Grace Wheeler, Louise Sterry, Lucile Browning, Rose Durr, Dorothy Heath, Ethel Whaley, Dorothy Waterman and Louise Avery; waiters, Ralph H. Marsh, Reginald Avery, Dwight W. Avery, Luther Whaley, Nathan Wheeler, Woodard Wheeler and Arthur Avery.

In the corner of the chapel auditorium was a large Christmas tree lighted by electricity.

The Community Christmas tree on the Norwich Town green, which has been brilliantly illuminated each evening during the Yuletide season is to be dismantled until another year, the various colored lights being turned on for the last time New Year's night. This has been a beautiful sight during the moonlight nights of the past week. It has been the center of attraction each evening for those who take a stroll after supper.

POETRY

Miniver Cheevy

Miniver Cheevy, child of scorn,
Grew lean while he assailed the seasons;
He wept that he was ever born
And he had reasons.

Miniver loved the days of old
When swords were bright and steeds were prancing;
The vision of a warrior bold
Would set him dancing.

Miniver sighed for what was not,
And dreamed, and rested from his labors;
He dreamed of Thebes and Camelot,
And Priam's neighbors.

Miniver mourned the ripe renown
That made so many a name so fragrant;
He mourned Romance, now on the town,
And Art, a vagrant.

Miniver loved the Medici,
Albeit he had never seen one;
He would have sinned incessantly
Could he have been one.

Miniver cursed the commonplace
And eyed a khaki suit with loathing;
He missed the medieval grace
Of iron clothing.

Miniver scorned the gold he sought,
But sore annoyed was he without it;
Miniver thought, and thought and thought,
And thought about it.

Miniver Cheevy, born too late,
Scratched his head and kept on thinking;
Miniver coughed and called it fate,
And kept on drinking.
—Edwin Arlington Robinson.

A Fig-Tree Bore

Where all the winds were tranquill,
And all the odors sweet,
And rings of tumbling upland
Sloped down to kiss your feet!

There, in a nest of verdure,
You grew from bud to bough,
You heard the song at mid-day—
At eve the plighted vow.

But fate that gives a guerdon
Takes back a double fee;
She bored you from your homestead
And put you in the sea.

And every bowling billow
Bends down your barren head
To hearken if the whisper
Of what you knew is dead.
—Harrison Smith Morris.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Are you the little girl who said she would be a perfect lady?

Yes, daddy, but it isn't time yet.—Detroit News.

That's old Dodder just come out of the telephone box. He's turned 92.

Heavens! How old was he when he went in?—Answers.

A burglar broke into our house last night.

What did he get?

West—Why do you persist in calling Agnes, Ann?

Hall—Oh, she's such an indefinite article.—Colgate Banter.

You don't say?

Yes, he's a teller down at the bank.—University of California Pelican.

What do you think gave the motor stage fright when he made his first appearance? asked the manager.

Premonition, replied the press agent. He knew what his acting was going to be like.—Washington Star.

A man couldn't read, but wanted people to think he could. One day he had a newspaper upside down. A friend walked up to him and asked, "What's the news, Sam?"

"Terrible wreck on the sea," was the answer. "Here's a ship upside down."—Good Hardware.

Say, sexton, what d've make of it?

That's an 'richt' mistake. The sculptor went ower near the edge o' the stone. He didna' leave room for the letter 'e'"

A professor in Berlin recently had the curiosity to weigh first the wearing apparel of his assistant and then the wearing apparel of the assistant's wife. He found that the man's boots alone weighed as much as the woman's entire clothing, and that in every detail the woman's garments were greatly lighter than her husband's. The result attained has led a woman to write on men's dress in the Spectator, London. She points that while in the last 20 years woman has steadily decreased the amount of clothing that she wears, there has been little fundamental change in male attire, and asserts that it may possibly be that man catches cold because he wears too much clothing and clothing of the wrong kind.

WAS STEALING FROM BANK THAT GILPATRICK WRECKED COLLUSION NOW CHARGED

Guy L. Baker, Assistant Cashier of the First National Bank of Putnam, Voluntarily Surrendered Himself to Federal Authorities—Admitted That He Had Stolen $16,300 During Three Years Prior to Its Closing in 1924—Story of Metal Anguish is Given in Detail—Authorities Believe Baker Blackmailed Into Confessing His Embezzlement—Also Believe That Baker Knew of Gilpatric's Transactions.

HARTFORD, Jan. 3—(AP)—Collusion between G. Harold Gilpatric and Guy L. Baker, in at least some of the financial manipulations which wrecked the First National bank, of Putnam, of which they were cashier and assistant cashier, respectively, was charged today by authorities engaged in the case.

Baker's statement following his surrender and confession of Saturday that although both he and Gilpatric were stealing from the bank at the same time, neither knew of the other's dishonest operations, was said to be contradicted by certain evidence that has been turned up. On the strength of this, it is said, that Baker did not discover Gilpatric's embezzlement until some time after 1920, and even then was under the impression that it was to be made good in a short time.

A further development today had to do with investigation of a clue that Baker was blackmailed into confessing his embezzlement of $16,300, and that the amount he acknowledged falls considerably short of what he personally misappropriated.

That Baker had no intention a few weeks ago, to surrender as a self-confessed embezzler, but was hounded to it by a relentless blackmailer who knew his story and pursued him almost to the door of the district attorney's office, is indicated by the fact that only recently he presented a bill to Howe and Marot's school for girls at Thompson, for services rendered as treasurer of the school corporation, frm January 1, 1924, to August, 1924. The bill was to be presented to the next meeting of the board for consideration. The amount requested in it is not given out, but the authorities are interested to ascertain if it was not to satisfy the demand of a blackmailer to whom Baker had confided his wrongdoing that he was in quest of money. It is held that, in that event, Baker's conscience would be relieved to tell only so much of his story as he had disclosed to anyone other than Gilpatric.

The present estimate of Baker's defalcation is between $25,000 and $30,000, although it is said the amount may prove to be much higher. In fact an effort will be made to discover Baker's connection, if any, with fourteen transactions involving theft of $256,985 which Gilpatric steadfastly disclaimed while facing prosecution with the remark: "I was not the only one who had access to the vault."

Gilpatric was sent to the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, after pleading guilty to twenty-five counts charging him with embezzlement of $206,000, but Gilpatric's total indebtedness to the bank has been fixed at $637,411, in Receiver George M. Coffin's claim against his bankrupt estate which has been filed with Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman. This claim includes several of the counts to which Gilpatric, although professedly in a hurry to start serving his time, refused to plead guilty to.

A forged note for $10,000 bearing what purported to be the signature of Miss Mary Louise Marot, president of the school corporation, was found in the Putnam bank after Gilpatric's attempted suicide, August 7, 1924. Miss Marot denied having ever made the note, and Gilpatric, while freely admitting other forgeries and thefts, emphatically denied that he was guilty of this forgery. The authorities are working on the theory that the note was forged by either Gilpatric, or Baker, or was prepared by both. It was in the "live note" file of the bank, which Baker, as assistant cashier consulted daily, and Baker was the treasurer of the school corporation headed by Miss Marot. It is considered unlikely that Gilpatric would have dared to leave such a forged note virtually under Baker's nose for nearly two years unless Baker was aware of circumstances concerning it.

Miss Marot said tonight that the forger had evidently clipped her signature from the bottom of a document which came into his hands, and leaving enough blank space over her signature to write a check and note for $10,000 dated October 18, 1922.

She explained that in signing her name to the document in question, she evidently had left quite a little space between her signature and the body of the document, which made possible the fraudulent use of her signature. She is strongly of the opinion that Gilpatric did the forgery as he had been her financial advisor and would be more likely to handle her documents.

Baker, she said, became treasurer of the corporation in January, 1924, and Gilpatric was a director. She said Baker, although holding the title of treasurer, appeared to be Gilpatric's "understudy". She said Baker resigned a few days after Gilpatric's exposure. Miss Marot had scarcely any dealings with Baker, but did her business chiefly with Gilpatric.

Gilpatrick got a $35,000 loan for the school from the state school fund, of which he was treasurer, and the loan was secured by a mortgage on the school property. When Captain Anson T. McCook was appointed state treasurer, to succeed Gilpatric, and thereby became treasurer of the school fund, he ordered an appraisal of the school property, it was learned tonight, as a result of which he had the amount of the mortgage loan reduced somewhat.

Discovery that Gilpatric forged Baker's signature in the advancement of his embezzlement led to a careful search for evidence of "reciprocal forgeries" by the two embezzlers working under the same roof, on the theory that, if it should be found that both deemed it necessary to resort to forgeries of that nature, it would show that they had not been in collusion.

Gilpatric forged Baker's signature as late as 1920, but it cannot be found that Baker forged Gilpatric's signature, nor that Gilpatric found it necessary to imitate Baker's signature after 1922.

Gilpatric had handled the funds of Mary Gardner of Putnam. When she died in 1920, he was appointed executor of her estate. He had been stealing her funds since 1912, it is now found, so that only $1,100 remained of an original principal of about $18,000. After Mary Gardner's death, it was necessary for him to produce a certificate from the bank showing the amount she had on deposit there. He produced a certificate purporting to be signed by Baker, as assistant cashier, certifying that Mary Gardner had on deposit in the Putnam bank when she died $16,000. This certificate was given to Ernest B. Kent and Elbert Kinney, appraisers of the estate.

This forgery is considered significant as showing that, at that time, Gilpatric did not trust Baker with the secret of his defalcation. The recognition by Baker without question in October, 1922, of the forged Miss Marot note is taken, together with other disclosures, to indicate that by that time Baker was in collusion with his chief. The opinion is generally held, however, that while Baker knew about this deal, Gilpatric was the beneficiary and that Baker was given to understand that the fraud would be straightened out without loss to Miss Marot or the bank in due time, when Gilpatric got the funds.

In he investigation of the Mary Gardner funds, it has been determined that Gilpatric began to steal from that source within the bank as early as 1918, five years before he became state treasurer, that he often made restitution to the Mary Gardner fund of money he had taken, and that his theft from that source at a single time ran as high as $6,000 in one instance

DETAILS OF MISTAKES OF CONSCIENCE STRICKEN MAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 3—Guy L. Baker, assistant cashier of the First National bank, of Putnam, voluntarily surrendered himself to the federal authorities at Hartford Friday morning, admitting that he had stolen $16,300 from the bank during the three years prior to its closing, October 11, 1924.

He told Assistant District Attorney George H. Cohen that he had been impelled by remorse, that he wanted to make a clean breast of everything and to take what punishment the law might impose. He insisted, however, that he was not connected with his chief, G. Harold Gilpatrick, in any of the latter's transactions which wrecked the bank, that he did not know of Gilpatric's use of bank funds until after his attempted suicide, and that Gilpatric knew nothing of his (Baker's) peculations.

Freed from groundless rumors and sensational speculative theories, the facts as known are these:

Baker returned to Putnam Monday evening, December 21, from Florida where he had gone two months before to try and find, as he declared employment of some kind. His wife joined him at St. Petersburg, a few weeks later. When he stepped off the evening train from Hartford, he got into the taxicab of Eugene Muir and had him drive to a grocery on a side street where he purchased a quantity of provisions in cans, and from there he was driven to a three-room cabin which he owns at Lake Alexander four miles south of the city. He asked Muir to say nothing of his being here and Muir respected his confidence.

The following three days he passed alone in his cottage, which must have been comfortless and cold. It is known that he had a quantity of liquor with him, which he drank. Where the liquor was secured is not known. Christmas eve he started to walk from his lake cottage to Putnam. At Attawaugan, the same taxi driver saw him on the road, and stopping his car asked him to ride. Baker accepted the invitation, but got out at the outskirts of the town from where he walked to the City hotel and telephoned a friend to meet him in the alleyway back of the hotel building. The friend arrived a few minutes later and after a word of greeting, Baker asked him for $50.

"I don't want you to lend it to me," he is reported as saying, "for you will probably never get it back; I want you to give it to a man who is down and out, and whom you may never see again."

He got the $50 and with it the advice to brace up, that he was young and that the future was filled with possibilities. After a little further talk, Baker extended his hand with the remark, "Do you want to shake hands with a man who is as big a crook as Gilpatric, and one whom you may never see again, or certainly not for a long time?" The proffered hand was taken and his friend again admonished him to pull himself together.

According to the report, which is believed correct, Baker showed evidence of having been drinking, but he was not drunk. His face was haggard, however, he had not been shaved for three or four days and his general appearance was much at variance with that of the trim, well groomed figure with which his friends in Putnam were familiar.

Later in the evening, with a clean shaven face and his clothes brushed and pressed, he appeared at the lunch room at the New Haven station where

Prohibition Review By Wayne B. Wheeler

There Were 38,925 Convictions in Federal Courts in 1925, an Increase of 1,317 Over 1924.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—A statement reviewing the 1925 progress in prohibition activities" was issued tonight by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel on the anti-saloon league.

"Prohibition," he said, "made advances in legislation, judicial decisions, administrative efficiency and as a hygienic and economic force in 1925.

"The 68th congress rejected all wet legislation, voted $11,000,000 for enforcement, including $1,300,000 for narcotic enforcement, $50,000 for posters appealing for law observance, $150,000 for special counsel for the department of justice for prohibition prosecutions, and provided for storage of all liquors in government warehouses where such are available. The coast guard was given surplus naval vessels, an appropriation of $14,500,000 for rehabilitation and $9,000,000 for maintenance. The use of forfeited automobiles and other vehicles by the coast guard and prohibition unit was authorized.

"The 69th congress in its first test vote, in December, defeated the wet attempt to cripple enforcement by limiting the purchase of evidence of illicit sales. Only 17 wet votes were cast to 139 drys, although over 175 dry members were absent.

"Anti-smuggling treaties with eleven nations have been drafted and nine are now in effect. The senate approved three of these treaties last year, with Canada, Panama and the Netherlands. Those with Mexico and with France have not been completed.

"The re-organization of the prohibition enforcement activities under an assistant secretary of the treasury, supervising 8,000 customs officers, and 8,000 coast guard officers besides the prohibition agents, will simplify administrative problems.

"During the last fiscal year, there were 38,925 convictions in federal courts, an increase of 1,317, with twice the length of jail sentences imposed in 1923 and an increase of 90 per cent. in injunction cases. These cases do not include those brought in state courts. In some states 90 per cent. of cases made by federal officers are tried in state courts totaled $7,934,854.69, nearly replacing the $9,201,534.06 expended for enforcement.

"The United States supreme court during the year upheld the right of officers to search an auto without search warrants when they had reasonable cause to believe liquor was being illegally transported; upheld the Georgia prohibition statute which makes it unlawful to possess liquors acquired before the law became effective; and establish the power of congress to regulate manufacturing and distribution of non-beverage alcohol.

"State enforcement codes were strengthened in Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, and Wyoming. Massachusetts repealed the law requiring an annual vote on license.

"The popular approval of this policy of government has been increased by the improved health of the nation, the drop in drunkenness, crime and alcohol insanity, the economic gains registered in steady employment, stimulated retail trade and home building, multiplied savings and insurance, and more wholesome recreation."

SPECIAL OFFICER SHOT INSPECTOR AND COMPANION

WAYLAND, Mass., Jan. 3—(AP)—Anthony Cumbra, a special officer of the local police force, has confessed to the shooting of Arthur J. Blake, a Chelsea police inspector, and his companion, Tony Orlando, which threw 500 New Year's revelers at the Mansion inn in Cochituate village into a panic early Friday morning. Blake is recovering in a Natick hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen and Orlando is suffering from an injured hand, shattered by the same bullet which felled Blake. Cumbra insisted that he acted in self defense.

Cumbra's confession, made last night before Police Chief Edward F. Dorsheiner of this town, Assistant District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex county and State Detectives O'Neil and Sherlock, cleared up a mystery which had sent the state police chasing clues in half a dozen cities and towns surrounding Boston.

The investigation swung toward Cumbra when it was revealed by members of Blake's party that the man who had done the shooting had displayed a police badge. Blake and his friends asserted that when the man showed his badge they had taken it away from him in fun.

Cumbra said that his chief assigned him to duty at the Inn and that soon after midnight he went upstairs after a waiter had told him that one of the parties was staging what looked to be a free-for-all fight. He displayed his badge, which was taken away from him. Members of the party then started to beat him. He was struck in the face, knocked down three times and thrown into a hall.

As he lay on the floor he drew his pistol. Three men were coming towards him including Orlando, and thinking they were going to kick him he fired to scare them, he shot in self defense and not to hit anyone, he asserted.

When Blake fell Cumbra left the Inn, returned later while his chief started an investigation and then drove the chief home. He did not tell the chief that he had done the shooting, he said, because he was afraid Blake was going to die and he would be charged with "doing something wrong."

Cumbra furnished bail on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon and will be arraigned in the Framingham district court tomorrow morning. Assistant District Attorney Bishop said that he would present the case to the grand jury tomorrow.

France Hopeful at Outset of New Year

Minister of Finance Doumer Working For Budget That Will Be Airtight Against Politics.

PARIS, Jan. 3—(AP)—France at the outset of the new year has the balance of foreign trade in her favor, is keeping two million foreign workers busy, paying them wages that make life easy for them and maintaining in circulation a mass of money that furnishes unparalleled business activity throughout the country.

That undisputed economic fact, in the opinion of financiers and business men, accounts for the patience with which "the average Frenchman" has suffered the irritating complications of politics and the vicissitudes of the financial situation. It also explains why the French people, notwithstanding the fact that the year end has left the financial problems of the country in the air, greet 1926 with easy confidence.

Looked at from the government angle, a consistent and safe policy persistently followed will, and must, put French finance on a plane with the economic situation.

"A budget that is balanced so that it will stay balanced a sinking fund for debts that will be airtight against politics," is the way M. Doumer, minister of finance, expresses the essentials of financial restoration and the stabilization of the franc which may reasonably be hoped for and which would be the new year's wish uppermost in the French mind.

"Confidence is the first essential," in the opinion of M. François-Marshal, leader of the nationalist wing of the opposition in parliament, who adds: "a national union truce in partisan quarrels and a united effort by all classes will bring about that confidence."

The leader of the communists, the other wing of the opposition, thinks that "a dictatorship of workmen and peasants is the best thing the new year can bring.

"Divisions in the ranks of the labor organization," he continues, "made it impossible for use in 1925 to prevent the government from pursuing a policy of spoliation of the working class, but great progress was made toward a united front by all the proletarian elements. Nineteen twenty-five passes into history as the year of Morocco and Syria, as well as the year of Locarno. Those geographic names symbolize hypocrisy, pacifism, bourgeois democracies."

The real spirit of the common people of France, according to Lucien Besnard, dramatic author, one of the persons outside of political circles engaging in the crusade for the renovation of finances is shown by the contributions of certain small towns.

FIDDLING CONTEST OPENS IN PROVIDENCE TONIGHT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Old King Cole would need but to whisper in Providence these next three days and he would have "fiddlers three" aplenty. All the best fiddlers in New England will be gathered here during the next three days, not at the beck and call of King Cole, but just as anxious to do their best at the old fiddling game. For the New England title is at stake and it means just as much to these veterans as does a touchdown to "Red" Grange.

So great has been the interest shown in this contest that what was first expected to be only a single night affair, has grown and grown until three nights will be devoted to it at the Albee theatre here. The first actual competition starts at 8:30 tomorrow night but several of the fiddlers will be guests of the town criers, sponsors of this unique contest, at their regular weekly luncheon at Biltmore. At that time, the playing of four or five will be broadcast.

The final reward is the title. What does $50 in gold, as well as all expenses of coming to the contest, mean to a man whose fiddling is so dear to his heart? It is the title and the gold medal accompanying it which means the most. The medal is the size of a silver dollar and bears upon it the following inscription: "All New England Fiddler Champion. Awarded by Town Criers of Providence, January 6, 1926 to ———." Space is left for the winner's name.

GOV'T LIQUOR WAREHOUSE IN MARYLAND RAIDED

WESTMINSTER, Md., Jan. 3.—(AP)—A band of thieves said to have numbered at least fifty men last night broke into government liquor warehouse of the Industrial Grain Products Corporation at Tannery, four miles from here, bound three guards and four other men in the building, and hauled away a cargo of between 75 and 100 barrels of whiskey. The liquor was valued at $80,000 by the warehouse manager.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Edward S. Gaylord.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Dr. Edward S. Gaylord, for sixty years a practicing dentist in this city and for fifty years holder of various offices in the National Dental societ, for which he was president in 1910, died here tonight in his 86th year. He was supreme master of Delta Sigma Delta, national dental fraternity.

Dr. Gaylord, a native of Gaylordsville, was graduated in 1865 from the Baltimore Dental college, from which he received an honorary degree in dental surgery in 1918. Upon graduation Dr. Gaylord came to New Haven. During the sixty years of his dental practice, he had never failed to attend the annual convention of the national association.

He was a charter member of the local dental association of which he was president from 1889 to 1902. He was president of the state society in 1893.

Until two weeks ago, when he contracted a cold, he had been in good health. The cold turned into pneumonia which resulted in his death tonight.

Dr. Gaylord was the first telephone subscriber in New Haven and at his death possessed a copy of the first telephone book issued here, which contained fifty names.

GREECE PRACTICALLY UNDER A MILITARY DICTATORSHIP

Premier Pangalos Has Announced That He Will Take Over Control of the Entire Government Immediately—Will Rely Solely Upon the Power of the Army and the National Conscience in Order to Save Greece—It is Understood That a Proclamation Will Be Issued Today.

ATHENS, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Premier Pangalos today announced what amounts to a military dictatorship. He will take over control of the entire government immediately. The announcement was made at a banquet given in honor of the premier by the democratic regiments.

After paying tribute to the patriotic conduct of the army in the grave national crisis since 1919, Premier Pangalos declared that he was compelled for reasons that he would make public to modify his attitude as from tomorrow. Henceforth he would assume entire responsibility for the government of the country and rely solely upon the power of the army and national conscience in order to save Greece.

Some of the other ministers attended the banquet, but not the heads of the foreign or naval departments. In the course of his speech M. Pangalos contended that since the revolution of 1909, the man who had made Greece powerful (Venizelos) had tried the experiment of parliamentary government. But from that time the power of Greece had waned. Then came disaster in Asia Minor, followed by the revolution of 1922. That revolution was only a partial success, for it failed to produce a condition of healthy politics.

At the close of his speech Pangalos was accorded an ovation. A guard numbering 200 then left the hall and paraded the principal streets, acclaiming Pangalos.

It is understood that an official proclamation will be issued tomorrow. Elections to the senate have been definitely postponed, but quiet prevails everywhere. It is declared that both the navy and the army are ready to support the premier.

General Pangalos, Greek premier and minister of war, intimated as early as last August, two months after his military coup, that he would establish a military dictatorship.

Pangalos is essentially a soldier and politically a republican. He was among the leaders who ousted King Constantine and put Crown Prince George upon the throne. He became minister of war in the Gonates cabinet, but resigned to join the Greek army in Thrace fighting the Turks.

During the campaign he advanced to Generalissimo of the Greek army.

He resigned the army command in 1923, and then began a series of political military maneuvers designed to overthrow the existing dynasty and establish a republic. He was appointed military governor of Athens, and in December, 1923, he proclaimed a republic and demanded the resignation of the Gonatas government.

Last June he overthrew the Michalakopoulos government by means of a military coup, and assumed the premiership. One of his first acts was the banishment from Greece of Colonel Plastiras, also a revolutionary, but at the same time arch foe of Pangalos. He ordered the assembly closed and new elections held. About that time an armed conflict with Bulgaria occurred; Greek troops invaded Bulgaria, but a halt was called to hostilities by M. Briand as president of the League of Nations council.

NO NEW PLAN FOR THE COAL STRIKE SETTLEMENT

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 3.—(AP)—No new plan of settlement of the anthracite strike has materialized over the week end, it was indicated tonight by representatives of the miners and operators who are at their homes in the hard coal region pending the reconvening of the joint conference in New York on Tuesday.

The United Mine Workers' officials have given no indication that they will recede from their opposition to any plan which includes arbitration of wages or conditions entering into a working contract. The operators' attitude that arbitration of disputed points is the only way out of the deadlock, is unchanged so far as can be learned.

Reports emanating from New York to the effect that the operators, as individuals, intended reopening their mines to their former employes on the expired scale of wages and with the same working conditions that were in effect previous to the suspension went without verification in the anthracite field, W. W. Inglis, chairman of the anthracite operators' negotiating committee, and A. M. Fir[illegible] a member of the negotiating committee, who have been in this city since the adjournment of the New York conference last Thursday, will leave for New York tomorrow afternoon. It was denied here tonight that the operators were to meet in Philadelphia previous to the New York meeting Tuesday, although there have been rumors that the operators might confer in Philadelphia Monday before returning to New York to resume the conference.

POSED AS EDDIE TRYON, COLGATE FOOTBALL STAR

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 3.—(AP)—After posing for a week as Eddie Tryon, Colgate football star, and leading point scorer of the east, the past season, Jack Weeler, giving his address as Rensselaer, N. Y., was arrested today and is held under $1,000 bond on a technical charge of idleness. He is alleged to have collected several hundred dollars from persons he met while basking in the limelight as Eddie.

Weeler, a nattily dressed youth of decidedly collegiate appearance and seemingly well educated, made his debut in New Haven a week ago, and immediately introduced himself to local sport writers as Eddie Tryon, famous football player. Since that time he has given out interviews on his intended plans of turning professional and has been feted at theatre parties and dinners. Several of those he met lent him money "to help him out of embarrassing situations.

ZIONISTS AFFIRM FAITH IN DR. STEPHEN S. WISE

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(AP)—The national executive committee of the Zionist organization of American today adopted a resolution affirming its faith in Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of the Free synagogue, and instructing representatives on the executive committee of the united Palestine appeal to vote against acceptance of his resignation as the appeal's chairman.

The resignation of Dr. Wise was offered to the appeal, an organization formed to raise $5,000,000 for the rehabilitation of Palestine after a controversy in Jewish religious circles started by a sermon of Dr. Wise on Dec. 20, in which he said that Jesus was "a man, not a myth," and discussed the ethical contribution of Jesus to the world.

Although the vote by which the resolution was passed was 70 to 1, two members not voting, its passage was preceded by a heated discussion lasting three hours.

DUKE OF LEINSTER HAS ARRIVED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(AP)—Under the name of Edward FitzGerald, the duke of Leinster, prominent among British hereditary barons, arrived today on the White Star liner Adriatic. He refused to discuss the purpose of his visit and informed officials of the line he intended to proceed at once to Washington.

The duke brought only two small handbags as luggage and was met at the pier by a young woman with whom he departed in a taxicab.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS CONFRONTING CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—With the Christmas recess behind it, congress will reassemble tomorrow to remain continuously in session for probably at least six months.

All of the major problems which faced it when it first met a month ago still are to be solved and new ones are yet to be met.

While the world court is the unfinished business before the senate and appropriation bills are the order of business in the house the most troublesome problem confronting the administration leaders is that of working out some means of handling surplus farm crops.

Conferences looking to this end have been called for this month by Secretary Jardine, but meanwhile, members of the Iowa congressional delegation will introduce surplus crop bills and seek immediate hearings before the house agriculture committee this month by Secretary Jardine, but meanwhile, members of the Iowa congressional committee will introduce surplus crop bills and seek immediate hearings before the house agriculture committee.

Fiscal legislation will be taken up tomorrow by committees of both houses, the senate finance committee beginning closed hearings on the tax reduction bill and the house ways and means committee taking up consideration of the foreign debt settlement agreements. Secretary Mellon will appear before both committees during the day.

Although the world court has right of way in the senate, it probably will be displaced temporarily by the Nye case, in which is involved the legal right of the governor of North Dakota to fill a senate vacancy by appointment. Leaders hope to dispose of this matter within two or three days.

TWO U. S. ARMY OFFICERS HAVE BEEN LOST IN MEXICO

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Two of four American army officers who went into Mexico last week on a hunting trip have been lost since Thursday, presumably between Nuevo Laredo and Rodriguez, state of Nuevo Laredo.

The missing men are Lieutenant C. S. Thorpe of Brooks Field, army air training school near here, and Lieutenant Marion T. Pharr, fourth field artillery, Fort McIntosh.

Two airplanes were sent from Brooks Field today to continue the search for the officers which since Thursday has been carried on by horsemen.

Lieutenants Thorpe and Pharr left the hunting camp established near Rodriguez, some sixty miles southwest of Laredo, Thursday morning.

They took different routes, it being arranged between them to meet at a designated place, and return to camp at noon. After waiting their return and instituting a search by cowboys, their companions, Lieutenants Fred Hamilton and D. P. Buckland, Twelfth Cavalry, Fort Ringold, returned to Laredo yesterday with news of the officers' plight.

Two civilian planes from Laredo setarched the territory yesterday and today without success.

The missing men are believed to be without food, in a wild, mountainous region. The bad weather also is a cause of worry to those making the search.

WALLINGFORD CHURCH WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

WALLINGFORD, Jan. 3—(AP)—The Advent church, on North Whittlesey avenue, Wallingford, was destroyed by fire about 9:30 o'clock this morning. The building which was of frame construction, was erected over thirty years ago, and was one of the flourishing Advent churches of the state.

The fire, it is believed, was caused by an over-heated furnace, as the fires had been started up in order to prepare the church for the morning service at 10:30 o'clock. The building and all the contents are a complete loss. After the fire nothing of the building remained but the front elevation and the steeple. The latter leaned so perilously that the firemen pulled it down to prevent its falling and causing damage.

The loss is estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000.

EAGLEVILLE YOUTH WOUNDED BY STATE POLICEMAN'S GUN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 3.—Edwin, 20 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McKinney of Eagleville, is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound in his left leg, caused by the accidental discharge of a revolver which it is claimed was owned by State Policeman Gataley Stanard and which young McKinney was examining at his home, about 11 o'clock Saturday morning. McKinney was resting comfortably at the hospital Sunday.

Officer Stanard is a frequent visitor at the McKinney home, having previously resided in Storrs where he was at one time caretaker at the armory and employed by Louis B. Tenney of that place. He joined the police force last fall. Just how the gun happened to be in the possession of young McKinney could not be fully established, due to the silence of members of the family and others who tried to keep the name of the state officer from being known. Up to Sunday evening all efforts to get in touch with the officer were fruitless. A physician stated that the bullet was from a 44 calibre revolver. The regulation state officer's revolver is of 38 calibre.

Mr. Cote will leave for Providence today (Monday) taking along his aged fiddle and the best wishes of an entire population.

MR. AND MRS. G. H. WORDEN MARRIED FIFTY-ONE YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 3.—Mr. and Mrs. George H. Worden celebrated their fifty-first wedding anniversary last Sunday afternoon and evening at their home on Conantville. A fine turkey dinner was served at two o'clock with about twenty guests present from Pittsfield, Springfield and Westfield, Mass., Hartford and this city. Mr. and Mrs. Worden were remembered with many presents. Both are natives of the Berkshires. George Henry Worden, who is 75, was born in Lee, Mass., August 16, 1849. His wife, Charlotte Augusta Lathrop Worden, is 71. She was born in Great Barrington, Mass., October 29, 1854. They were married in Lee, Mass., December 23, 1874. They have two sons, Rutherford H. Worden of this city and Harry A. Worden of Providence, R. I., and a daughter Mrs. Edna, Business of Pittsfield, Mass., also four grandchildren.

Miss Alma Rose Foss, daughter of Joel Foss, of Weston, Ms., became the bride of Raymond Frederick Gates, eldest son of Sheriff and Mrs. Charles A. Gates at a ceremony performed at the home of the latter, 477 Pleasant street, this city, at two o'clock, Thursday afternoon. Rev. Frederick G. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church officiated. Miss Rachel Foss, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Ralph B. Gates, brother of the groom, best man. Mr. and Mrs. Gates are in New York and will visit Washington on their honeymoon. The groom is a graduate of Windham High school where he was prominent as an all-round athlete. At present he is head of the department of state agencies and institutions, with an office at the capitol, Hartford.

Clarence Roswell of Walnut street will be police court this (Monday) morning to answer to a charge of assault. Roswell kicked his wife in the side a concretely Saturday night about 10:30 o'clock that she received the attention of a physician. Roswell has been before the court on previous occasions for causing trouble. His wife complained of the assault and left, was inclined to forgive her husband but the authorities advised her to allow the man to suffer for his inhuman act.

The bearers were Ray Manning, Ernest Manning, Bert Wall and Paul Wall. Avery and VanZandt had charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Eileen Raslestwas hostess at a New Year's party at the Al-Pierre Tabarin, Friday afternoon, for members of her children's dancing class. Little Miss Rita Macon led the opening march. Irene Nolan and Teresa Dennehy gave a fine exhibition of ballroom Charleston. Then came Santa Claus (William B. Sweeney), who caused much mirth among the children. Little traveling bags filled with goodies and a little gift were distributed. Ice cream and lady fingers were served. Mrs. Racicot was assisted by Mrs. William Burleson, Mrs. T. J. Connolly, Mrs. William B. Sweeney, Mrs. Rufus Rood, Mrs. Bixby Morrill, Miss Mildred Moulton and Mrs. William A. Costello. The hostesses received many pretty gifts from the pupils. Claire Mathieu and Master Jack Costello led the closing march.

If there was liquor consumed here on or about New Year's day—and it is evident that there was—the Thread Cityites certainly carried it well. It took three out-of-towners to soil the clean record of no arrests on New Year's. They were John Gaffney of Fall River, Daniel McGlynn of Lowell and John McNally of Manchester, Mass., who were singing carols and popular songs near Main street. In police court Saturday morning they pleaded guilty and Judge Foss fined each $15 and costs, amounting to $22.15.

Frank St. Martin, one of the eleven presented on a charge of violating the liquor law at Christmas time, was discharged by the court Saturday morning, when his continued case was taken up. Prosecutor Gaucher informed the court that he had investigated the case and failed to find sufficient evidence for a conviction. He asked the charge be nolled and this was complied with by Judge Foss. St. Martin established the fact that the liquor found at his home was a small quantity that had been overlooked by the officers when they raided his home on Thanksgiving eve, last. He had not purchased any more nor sold any, since that time.

JEWETT CITY Jan. 3—The first fire alarm of the year was Sunday afternoon and called the firemen to the Caleb block, corner of Oak street and Water avenue. The blaze was in a barrel in the cellar and filled the place with smoke, but was extinguished in short order with a small amount of chemical.

MRS. THEO. BROMLEY'S DEATH SUDDEN AND TRAGIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 3—The body of Mrs. Theodore Bromley, 29, was brought from New York Thursday for burial in the Ames cemetery in Lisbon. Mrs. Bromley was instantly killed in an automobile accident at the entrance of Bronx park, New York. The accident happened about half past ten at night, caused by an automobile appearing around the curve at a terrific speed on the wrong side of the road. Mr. Bromley was close to the gutter and in order to avoid being struck threw his wheel clear to one side and stepped on the gas to get out of the way. His machine crashed into a steel telegraph pole bending it double, bringing the pole and wires onto the top of his machine. His wife was instantly killed. He was taken to Fordham hospital in an unconscious condition and remained so until nine o'clock the next day. His head was badly cut, but he was able to accompany his wife's body to Lisbon Thursday. Mrs. Bromley was an English girl, living in Atlanta, Ga., before she married. She has no relatives in this country, her parents dying shortly after she was married, four years ago. Mr. Bromley is the son of Duane and Dora Phillips Bromley and was born in Lisbon. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bromley were present at the marriage of Miss Helen Phillips in Lisbon in November. Tree Conservation

When the pioneers entered Kansas they found it practically treeless. The Indians had burned over vast areas of forest as a protection against hostile tribes. About the only trees left were those along the streams. The settlers stopped this wholesale destruction of timber, and homesteaders were required by the government to plant trees on each section of land taken up. As a result timber began to spread, so that now Kansas has more trees than were found there by the early settlers, in spite of its present population and many cities and towns. Residents of the state take pride in the trees and plant them in every available space, as well as assist the forestry patrols in aiding to prevent and to combat fires in the woods.

Mr Lane has so much confidence in his ability to cure that he will send a regular $1.25 bottle free, postpaid, to any sufferer who will write him. His offer is that he is to be paid for it if it cures. If not, your report cancels the charge. If you suffer from Asthma write him today. Send no money—just your name and address will do.

DANIELSON

BOROUGH PICKS C. C. RAPP FOR COUNTY GAME WARDEN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 3—In view of the fact that County Game Warden Charles M. Letters has resigned and is now out of office, there is enthusiastic support here of the candidacy of Charles C. Rapp, of Danielson, to succeed the Putnam man in the office.

Mr. Rapp is eminently qualified for the place. A World war veteran, a hunter and fisherman of many years experience, a man of conservative dealing and good judgment; he rates high in qualifications for the place. There are other considerations that should count a great deal in Mr. Rapp's favor. All of these, it is understood, have been set forth in communications addressed to Commissioner Titcomb, who will in all probability have the final say in making the selection. Mr. Rapp has the support of the Danielson Rod and Gun cluband other sportsmen's organizations here. In view of the fact that Danielson has not been favored for time out of memory with the appointment of a county game warden from this community, it would appear, all things considered, that Mr. Rapp should receive the preference. He has served the nation both in the Spanish-American war and overseas in the World war, and if such service is not to be overlooked and such men passed up occasions like this, Mr. Rapp will get the place. At least that is Danielson's viewpoint, and the voice of Danielson should carry weight at this particular time, when it appears that its Danielson's turn to have a representative in the office of county game warden.

WILLIAM WAITE KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 3—William Waite 50, of Wauregan, was the first victim in this section in 1926 in a fatal automobile accident. He was practically instantly killed Saturday night, shortly after 6 o'clock, near the Gardner place, about a mile north of Wauregan village, when struck by a car owned by Charles E. Hopkins, of Plainfield, and driven by Mr. Hopkins son, Charles Edwin Hopkins. Mr. Waite, who had been working during the day for Anthony Wallon, hauling wood on the Wallon place, at the foot of Shippee Hill, was walking toward Wauregan for supper, when the Hopkins' car came along behind him and struck him. The headlight of a car going north blinded the driver of the Hopkins car so that Waite could not be seen, according to reports obtained by state officers who investigated the cause. A broken rib that pierced Waite's heart was regarded as having caused death.

Medical Examiner Dr. W. W. Adams of Moosup, investigated the case and the body was taken in charge by Tillinghast and Sons and conveyed to undertaking rooms in Central Village. Mr. Waite was a native of Wauregan and had lived there practically all his life. He had made his home at the Wauregan boarding house for years and generally was employed in the Wauregan mills.

The town of Killingly will be represented this (Monday) evening in what will likely be the gamest fiddlers' contest in New England in many a day. It is to be held over in Providence under the auspices of a committee of the Town Criers, and the prestige of this town will be upheld by Henry Pray, of Ballouville.

No entrant under 60 will be considered. They may be over 100, and get in. This unique contest will bring old-time fiddlers together from several states to compete for a prize. The winner may well regard himself as a much greater personality than Mellie Dunham, of Norway, Me., much advertised protege of Henry Ford.

It is possible that Eastford will have two representatives. William O. Smith of Phoenixville, in that town, is under the pressure and persuasion of his friends to exhibit his fiddling talents where they will do him the most good. "Billy", as he is known, is 76, and the sole surviving member of the Felton orchestra of an age gone by. He and Jonathan Whitford, now 73, have played in orchestras together in their old home town for many a year. "Billy" is a bit shy about going "down to a big city" to show his wares, but he will be there if his friends' persuasiveness is effective.

Fiddlers will play at Providence tonight—not mere concert artists who spell their names with eight Z's and twelve to fourteen F's and K's. We hope that the Killingly entrant wins. He might do it, at that!

Saturday morning, from the home of Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Neill, in Dayville, the funeral of Mrs. O'Neill's father, John Kenary, was held with services at St. Joseph's church, Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor. Rev. Ludovic Paradis, of Voluntown, and Rev. J. A. Fortier, of Lowell, were the officers of the solemn mass of requiem. Many relatives and friends attended the service. The body was taken to Leicester, Mass., birthplace of Mr. Kenary, for burial. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Sunday afternoon, at 1:30, funeral services for Joseph Owens were held at the Dayville Congregational church. Rev. William Swainson officiating. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, Danielson. The bearers were four brothers—William, James, Walter and Frank Owens. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Robert R. Sianiski, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Salinski, of Dayville, died at their home Sunday morning.

Sunday was an example of that "terrible winter that New England is to experience, the worst since 1772." Yes, yes yes! And have the weather prophets anything new in stock? The public is getting credulous. In fact they are becoming downright unbelievers.

Rather tough weather, in fact, for coal miners trying to settle a strike in progress four months and in which the general public refused to become more than mildly interested.

At East Killingly, work continues on the job of strengthening the dam east of the plant of the Acme Products company, to make it safe against breaks and in line with general improvements underway at the former plant of the Asceptic Products company.

It's a bit early, but enthusiastic trout fishermen are already talking over the possibility of getting, when the season opens in April, some of the brown trout that were distributed in a few streams hereabouts the past late summer and early fall.

Bowling fans have followed with special interest, the sporting page controversy in The Bulletin, between two sterling bowlers, Frank Barber, of Danielson, and Chip Dugas, of Taftville. Having read what there was to be said, the fans are now waiting for the action that should follow.

Injured when his car skidded and was damaged Saturday, near Woonsocket, Charles Lowry was able to return to his home here Sunday afternoon. Mr. Lowry, chief electrician at the Connecticut mills, was reported here Saturday, as having been dangerously hut, but this, happily, was an exaggeration.

Stops Colds

The best way known to stop a cold is Hill's Cascara-Bromide-Quinine. Millions prove that every winter. It stops a cold in 24 hours.

Many thousands of people every year die from results of colds. Pneumonia alone claims 150,000. So a cold is a very important matter. Treat it in the best way known.

Take Hill's tablets the moment a cold appears. A cold is dangerous—stop it at the start. Do it in this way—the best way science knows. All druggists sell Hill's.

PUTNAM

LIEUT-COL. TOURTELOTTE DIES IN HIS 88TH YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 3—Lieutenant-Colonel Perome B. Tourtelotte, 87, last surviving officer of Connecticut famous regiment, the 7th Connecticut Volunteer infantry, of which Senator Joseph Hawley was the commanding officer died late last night at his home on Putnam Heights.

He had been seriously ill since last October and dangerously so from December 14.

Colonel Tourtelotte's sight had been impaired for a dozen years; for the past five years he had been totally blind, unable to distinguish daylight from darkness.

He lived a busy and eventful life. His parents came here when he was but five years of age and he was probably Putnam's oldest citizen in point of continuous residence. He was one of the first if not the first resident of Putnam to enlist in the Civil War and continued in service until after Lee's surrender.

From 1880 until 1914 he was the treasurer and executive officer of Putnam Savings bank.

During a six years' term in the Connecticut legislature he served on the same committee with the late Senator Joseph Hawley and with Charles Hopkins Clarke, with whom he was on terms of great intimacy.

Colonel Tourtelotte was born in East Thompson June 4, 1837, the son of Joseph D. Tourtelotte. In 1842 his father moved to Putnam to follow his trade as a maker of fine shoes. As soon as the son was old enough he learned the same trade and became an expert shoemaker.

He worked at that until the war between the states broke out when he enlisted as a private for three months in Rifles Company B of the 2nd Connecticut Infantry. At the expiration of his term of service he came back to Putnam and organized Co. K, Connecticut Volunteers, of which he was made first lieutenant. He was promoted to captain major and lieutenant colonel, the last commission being dated June 1, 1865, and he was mustered out with his regiment, August 11, 1865.

After the close of the war he went to Cranston, R. I., where he became assistant superintendent, later superintendent of the R. W. Sprague Mfg. Company, at that time one of the largest manufacturing plants in the state, remaining with the company until 1874. He returned to Putnam and began the manufacture of shoes, in a building on School street, opposite the plant of the Wheaton Building and Lumber corporation. In 1880 he was made a corporator and treasurer of Putnam Savings Bank which office he retained until 1914.

From 1875 until 1881 he was a member of the House of Representatives.

He married November 18, 1874 Elizabeth Emily Husband, of Cranston. She died in October, 1924. Three children survive him, Leroy E. Tourtelotte of Limon, Fla., Harry Tourtelotte of Brandon, Fla., who was in the service in the recent war and was wounded while in France, and Arthur Tourtelotte, a farmer at Putnam Heights, with whom Col. Tourtelotte has made his home.

When the Hartford Rotary club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, Ralph C. Jenkins, president of Putnam Rotary club was present and was the guest of Hay Bond, at the Hotel Bond.

Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of Putnam schools, Martin Robertson, supervisor of rural school in the towns of Pomfret and Woodstock, and E. L. Robinson, principal of the High school attended the meeting of superintendents and supervisors of Connecticut schools held at Hartford.

WESTERLY

DEATH OF LYNDOWN TAYLOR AFTER NINE DAYS' ILLNESS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 3. — The death of Lyndown Taylor, 63, who was born in Westerly, August 5, 1862, the son of Alvah and Keziah Taylor, occurred at his home, 31 Greenman avenue, Saturday morning at 8.45 o'clock. Mr. Taylor had been ill a little more than a week.

Mr. Taylor was educated in the public schools of Westerly. He was a clerk for ten years at Westerly post office, serving under Postmasters Eugene B. Pendleton, Frank Rich and Samuel Cross. He entered the employ of the William Clark Thread Mill even before the structure was built, and when the office was located in the Stillman block on High street. Thirty-four years of continuous service was his record with this corporation, where he was employed in the office. During his later years he was paymaster. He worked until nine days ago, when illness confined him to his home. Mr. Taylor had no fraternal affiliations, being a home loving man, whose chief interest in life was his work and duty. Sept. 14, 1892, he was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Gavitt, who survives him.

At the age of nearly 63, Saturday at the home of his son, Dr. William T. Veal, in Stonington, occurred the death of William John Veal, for many years a well known Westerly granite cutter. Mr. Veal was born February 21, 1863, in Cornwall, England. Coming to America about 43 years ago, he resided for a short time at Quincy, Mass., and later at Denver, Col., before coming to Westerly about 1885. He was employed for 12 years at the Smith Granite Co. Later he went into the cutting business with the late William Rowe and continued the business alone after the death of the latter. He was active in his work until taken ill about two years ago. He was prominent in the work of Narragansett lodge, No. 7, I. O. O. F., of which he was past noble grand, and he was also affiliated with Misturet Encampment, No. 19, Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 19, and Nelson lodge, No. 204, Sons of St. George. Nov. 24, 1886, he was united in marriage here with Miss Georgianta Ople, who survives him. He also leaves a son, Dr. William T. Veal, and a daughter, Miss Selina G. Veal, both of Stonington, a grandchild, three brothers Nicholas Veal of Barre, Vt., Thomas Veal of Quincy, Mass., and Benjamin Veal of Cornwall, England, also a sister, Mrs. Thomas Hocking of Cornwall.

The Westerly station platform Saturday morning had the appearance of a quick lunch for doughnuts were strewn the length of the track in front of the station. A carton consignment of crullers brought across from the westbound track on a truck was jounced off. Approaching at the same time at a high rate of speed was the fast American Railway Express, which bore down so swiftly that even the alert express messengers did not care to retrieve the carton. One "chew" of the locomotive was all that was necessary for carton and doughnuts.

Saturday and Sunday were improved by skaters, who visited the various ponds about Westerly and enjoyed to the full this winter sport. Advantage was taken by Joseph Lee of the Pawcatuck Ice company and a force of men to begin the work of harvesting better than nine inch ice from their Wequetequock pond. During Sunday, however, the weather moderated, and the ice in spots on Burden's pond and other large areas became wet and softened, but this did not deter many skaters. At the Westerly town clerk's office Saturday morning many were seekers for fishermen's licenses and planned fishing through the ice for pickerel and perch.

Recorded at the office of the Westerly town clerk is the following transfer: January 2, David Novogrod to Joseph A. Marrone and Silvester Marrone, two certain tracts or parcels of land on the west side of Main street, formerly Bliven Opera house property, together with several rights of way.

A Ford sedan, driven by Samuel Magg of Franklin street while touring from Elm street on to School street, Saturday afternoon, struck the curbstone and crashed into the stone wall on the corner, the property of James M. Pendleton. As a result the two front wheels were put out of commission and a rear one damaged. This did not deter the driver from backing off and it was not until the street was recrossed that the loss of the wheels was discovered. Patrolman LeRoy Norman was called to the place by the report that two automobiles had collided, but this was found not to be the case.

Funeral services for Mrs. Charles N. Simms, who died Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Newton on the Post Road, were held Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at local undertaking parlors. The service was conducted by Rev. B. U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church. Burial was in River Bend cemetery. Members of the family acted as bearers.

The funeral of Miss Gladys Evelyn Champion, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Champion of 13 Lincoln avenue, was held Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock at funeral parlors on Granite street. The service was conducted by Rev. Marvin S. Stocking, pastor of Grace Methodist church. Members of the family acted as bearers. The body was taken to Niantic, Conn., for burial.

At the home of his daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel B. White, 77 Ardoene street, Providence, Friday, occurred the death of B. Frank Bliven, 91, of 55 Elm street, Westerly. For more than fifty years Mr. Bliven was engaged in the fish business here. Having retired from business sometime ago, illness caused Mr. Bliven to be taken to the Westerly hospital for treatment and since last September he has made his home in Providence.

The son of the late Bradford and Anna J. Barber Bliven, he was born at the Bliven homestead in District No. 6, Sept. 3, 1834. As a young man he was a farmer. He later became engaged with the late Mathew Barns. They conducted a fish market on the public dock where the garage of the Westerly Textile company is now located. Later Mr. Bliven purchased the interests of his partner and was engaged in the business up to about 10 years ago. For many years his business was located in the Pendleton building facing Main street and next to the Textile mill.

Mr. Bliven was fond of hunting and outdoor life and was active with the gun when he was in the eighties. He was an enthusiastic member of the trap shoots. He possessed wonderful vision and him with the rifle or shotgun and at that advanced age could break the clay pigeons as well as the top notchers. He participated in a shoot at the age of 86 and broke 18 out of 20 and 23 out of 25 pigeons.

Mr. Bliven was the oldest of four children of whom but one survives, Courtland B. Bliven of Main street. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Frank Rogers of Providence, and a son, George C. Bliven, of Needham, Mass.

Fred W. Lueck returned Saturday afternoon after a visit in New York city over New Years.

DEATHS BY AUTO

With the opening of the new year it is not a pleasing fact to learn that during the past twelve months the fatalities in Connecticut from motor vehicles has increased from 302 in 1924 to 350 in 1925. This represents a gain of four a month or nearly 16 per cent. for the year. Against this it can be pointed out that Connecticut registered about 33,000 more motor vehicles in 1925 than in the year before, but there isn't much satisfaction to be gained from then when it is less deaths from the automobiles that are desired.

What are we to expect in view of this showing for 1926? Are we to anticipate that there are to be something like 400 deaths in the state from automobiles during the twelve months that are ahead? It is a time to do some serious thinking in regard to this highway slaughter, and that thinking devolves upon all users of the highway, the pedestrian as well as the autoist.

Persistent efforts have been put forth in behalf of greater safety, but in spite of them fatalities have increased. This is first hand notice that such work must go on with greater determination and it is a work in which each and every one should participate. This waste of human life is deplorable. In too many instances it is needless. It is time for full recognition of the highway dangers of today and the adoption of precautions in keeping therewith. The idea that the rights of others need not be respected, that laws amount to nothing except when some policeman is watching, that streets are speedways and playgrounds is wrong. The reckless and the heedless among all classes of highway users can do much to reduce the frightful toll that is exacted at the rate of about one life a day in this state.

This situation deserves to be tackled with greater determination. There is no reason for permitting it to drag along indefinitely. The slaughter is already too great regardless of where the responsibility rests, and it is time that more robust measures were taken to force a greater regard for safety in the highways.

THE INFLAMMABLE TREE

According to the reports there were not as many instances of families being homeless at Christmas time as there have been other years, which gives the impression that the warnings against the use of candles on the trees or the employment of cotton and other inflammable material for decorations are getting the attention that they deserve.

It is not to be supposed, however, that there were no instances where there were no chances taken. The fact is, of course, that there were chances taken, that old methods were employed and the feeling prevailed that it would be possible to successfully guard against any danger or disturbing incident. Even under such circumstances, there were probably many homes where the care happened to be sufficient to prevent any untoward incident. They assumed the risk and escaped without harm. But there were homes which did not fare as well.

Springfield reports a $20,000 fire in a block where 200 lives were imperiled because a little girl could not forgo the temptation of lighting one of the candles that remained on the Christmas tree on New Year's day. The chance was taken on Christmas day of having lighted candles on a tree. It was done without any trouble and the decorated tree was allowed to stand for a week. Then the child sought to see it lighted once more. There was a bit of unburned candle left and it was lighted unknown to the mother. But almost as quickly as it was lighted the tree, decorations and room were afire. One person was injured, several had to be led out of the smoke filled block by the firemen and a large amount of damage was done in a short time by the act, made possible by providing the dangerous temptation in the shape of a candle lighted Christmas tree against which practice widespread warnings are issued every season. Such cases in other years should serve to prevent any such hazardous combinations to exist for the temptation of children or their elders.

WORDS AND DEEDS

New York has got its new mayor and its new police commissioner. Both have made statements in regard to the character of government they intend to provide for the city and the disposition of New York seems to be to give them the chance to make good. The inclination is to accept their programmes and statements as hitting the mark and expecting them to make good. They are of course entitled to the chance.

When the police commissioner says that "The people of this city are entitled to adequate protection of their lives and property and to expect that the community in which they live will be free from commercialized vice so long as it is possible for a competent, intelligent and faithful police force to accomplish that end, he is of course uttering words which are going to bother him in the future unless he administers the police force of the metropolis in keeping therewith. He can expect that they will be remembered and that his work will be watched.

He likewise has a chance to show what a contrast there is between a police department of New York run as he has advised and one that has been conducted along other lines. In other words he is going to be judged in his work by the manner in which he surpasses his predecessor and by the way in which he approaches the service that was rendered during the days of Commissioner Woods.

It will accomplish little for him to open his administration with honeyed words if he does not follow them up by action in keeping therewith. It can be readily appreciated that anyone who assumes that office shoulders no easy task, especially if he is committed to the proper protection of the public. For him to be told that he will have a free hand, untrammeled by politics, means that he will have the chance to get a good start if the promise holds water. If meant solely for political consumption it will mean no change and that all the statements that have been made at the opening of the administration are simply talk. New York has heard the words, now it awaits the deeds.

PRINCE CAROL

There were days when thrones were a bigger attraction than they are today. There were days, also, when they were more numerous. Emperors, kings and potentates have decreased in number and influence in the last quarter of a century. Just where this is going to stop no one knows.

Prince Carol, son of King Ferdinand of Rumania, has recently renounced his claim to the throne of that country. While it came as a surprise, he is not the only one to have done such a thing. He is apparently not willing to tie himself down to the restrictions of a sovereign, either as the crown prince or as the ruler. He has indicated his independence from the rules which are supposed to govern the royal family. He will not be bound by them and in that case the only alternative is to renounce his claim to the throne and get out and show that he can make his way in the world. Whether he does that or keeps Europe enlivened by his escapades remains to be seen.

It is possible for him by his conduct to gain widespread approval for his renunciation, and it is equally possible for him to gain even greater denunciation. If it is the latter course that he is going to follow, Rumania has cause for satisfaction that he has decided to abandon his claim to the throne at this time before he has had an opportunity to exercise any authority. His action is in keeping with the attitude he has previously shown. He has yielded to restrictions on previous occasions reluctantly. He now has a chance to show his hand with all restrictions removed. From now on he should be expected to stand on his own feet and to be judged accordingly.

ALIEN RESTRICTION

What evidence is sought for the effects of the operation of the existing immigration laws, weight must be attached to what Commissioner of Immigration Curran has to say about the effects in New York where he is located. After the results of the present law have been watched the commissioner points out that where it was necessary to spend a million on immigrants and children in New York through philanthropic channels in 1924, less was required in 1925 and this year even less may be needed.

This is attributed to the new immigration law for, as he says, "We are beginning to see light in the dirty slums and other indecent conditions that were the direct result of allowing more immigrants to come than our country could decently take care of."

It is not to be expected that any immigration law will be considered so perfect that it will not be subjected to changes from time to time, in order to meet changing conditions and the effects of tests, but when we stop to think of the effects of flooding the country with an unlimited number of aliens compared to the results obtained under restriction there can be no question about the desirability of sticking to that feature of our immigration law. The betterments that have been noted are only a part of what are needed. Only by continuing such a policy can the needed improvements be obtained. When changes are made in the immigration law they should be based upon facts and consideration for the welfare of the country. Tinkering with it for the sake of making changes should not be thought of.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Are your new resolutions standing the test of time untarnished?

The man on the corner says: There are 51 more pay day left in 1926.

Isn't there someone who can, within a period of a few days, provide a substitute for rubber?

There's not much talk about bathing suits now but quite a number are getting into the water due to thin ice.

Now that a substitute for the whites of eggs has been discovered who will produce a yoke that will not discolor a white shirt front?

It is folly for the individual to expect that he can escape the deadly carbon monoxide gas when others are constantly dying from it.

Those nations which fear American domination of the disarmament conference at Geneva near have no thought that such domination would be militaristic.

The fellow who gets Cuba, Frisco or Europe on the radio likes to talk about it but no more so than the chap who can get 72 on his thermostat when a cold snap is bothering.

Now is the time for all those who believe they can outdistance Mellie Dunham on the fiddle to come forward. Also the fiddle makers. There ought to be an interesting list of them in this part of the country.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Too much salt will keep bread from rising.

Stewed apples and pickles should be served with pork.

Lettuce leaves can be dried quickly with paper towelling.

Careful housewives market early in the day and have first choice.

A small piece of apple cooked in a meat pie or stew will make the meat tender.

Try adding limes to your orange marmalade and see what a good flavor it has.

In selecting a fish, remember a fresh fish, has bright red gills, the eyes are bright and protruding and the flesh if firm.

When stamps lose their stickiness and no mucilage is available, use the white of an egg.

Sprinkle a little sugar on a coal fire that is slow in coming up.

Good bacon has the lean of a bright pink, fine in grain, while the fat is white and firm.

Beef neck is juicy, well flavored and cheap, and it makes good pot roast and excellent stews and soups

If a cloth is stained with tea it should be taken off at once, and boiling water poured through it. This will take the stain out completely.

To keep the yolks of eggs put each into a cup, completely cover with cold water and put in a cool place. They will keep perfectly for two or three days. Pour off water when you use them.

To keep sponges in good condition you should occasionally wash them in warm water with a little tartaric acid or soda, afterward rinsing in clear warm water.

To brown pies and tarts, use a small pastry brush to apply milk lightly before putting them in the oven; and to glaze pies, brush them with the white of an egg if you wish them to be a shiny brown.

If you are going away for a week and wish your plants to be well watered, take a strip of soft white cloth one inch wide by two feet long and place one end of it in a large jar of water and bury the other end in the dirt around the plant.

SYSTEMATIZING THE WORK

When you have so much to do that you don't know what to do first, just sit down for a minute and plan it all out. Otherwise you will not accomplish half of what you set out to do.

BUTTER FOR SANDWICHES

When you expect to make sandwiches leave enough butter on a plate in the warm kitchen for a couple of hours instead of putting it all in the refrigerator. It will just be nice for spreading when the sandwiches are to be made.

BURN COKE TWICE

Here is a way to burn coke twice. After coke has been burned once take out and sift all loose ashes. Leave in sieve, pour water all over cinders, and set to dry. When dried use just the same as first time. Be sure that it is absolutely dry before using.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Hair that comes out and breaks off, or a scalp that is full of dandruff, requires oil as a treatment. Crude oil applied hot, or sulphur ointment are advised.

Deep breathing exercises will train the shoulders to lie flat and not to curve forward, with the bones protruding in back. They will also develop the chest and fill up those ugly hollows below the neck. Extend the arms in front of you and pull them back, fists clenched, to the shoulders, as you breathe in. This helps wonderfully.

We are so apt to think that only adults require rest and relaxation that we sometimes forget that little children need it possibly more.

This is because, in proportion to their size and strength, small children are much more active and energetic than grown-ups. They are always busy, always using up their energy.

Water flushes the system, aids digestion, and overcomes constipation. Eight glasses a day is not too much to drink. The first glass should be taken hot as soon as you get up, and preferably half an hour before breakfast. A pinch of soda or a little lemon juice can be added to this. The heat stimulates the digestion and the acid or soda puts the stomach in excellent condition to receive the new supply of food. After that the water to be drunk should be cool, but not cold, for cold water chills the stomach and makes the work of digestion harder.

HOME-MADE

A wooden chest that is thoroughly oiled with cedar oil once a year will serve as a cedar chest and will prove just as efficacious.

OFF THEY GO!

Ammonia will remove ink stains from the fingers. It is well to know this now that school has started and we have many little stained fingers to combat.

IN PLACE OF STRING

Narrow rubber bands are nice to hold the papers on the tops of jelly tumblers instead of string. They are much more easily adjusted and, when doubled, fit quite as tightly.

LESSON NO. 1

If you can teach the family to remove wet overshoes out on the porch and carry them into the house instead of wearing them, you have done a great deal towards keeping your living-room rug clean in these days of Dutch hails.

REMOVES SUMMER CLOUDINESS

The cloudiness that appears on woodwork during the warm weather can be removed now by washing with a soft cloth and warm water, followed by a wet chamois wrung out of cold water. Then apply your usual furniture polish and rub until it shines.

DICTATES OF FASHION

For southern wear are attractive linen sandals in all the delicate and vivid shades to match the costume.

Yellow is an extremely popular color for evening and in no material is it more lovely than in velvet.

New editions of the jumper frock are of flat crepe and are entirely made by hand with decorations of tiny bands faggotted together.

Very narrow scarfs hand-knitted in red and white or green and white wool are very attractive with the skating costume.

Long earrings are once more the vogue. The newest ones reach almost to the shoulders. They are set with colored stones in designs copied from antique jewelry.

An important feature of the evening mode is the skirt that is quite decidedly long at back and quite as decidedly short at front.

Quite as convenient as it is smart is the bag with extra "make-up" flap on the outside, making it unnecessary to open one's bag to powder one's nose.

New handkerchiefs for men are of white crepe de chine with woven borders in satin stripe that stimulate the borders on dimity handkerchiefs.

Printed velvet is one of the loveliest of fabrics, and comes in the most fascinating colors. It is liked for afternoon gowns with full skirts and long sleeves.

The smartest scarfs for men are of heavy knitted silk with large monograms in cut-work decorating one corner.

The two-piece frock is as popular for evening as it is for morning and day wear. It is made of the most gorgeous brocade or metal fabrics so that the beauty of the fabric is enhanced by the simple lines.

In the light weight blue velvet two piece dress scallops are again used to outline the collar, finish the lower edge of the blouse, pocket and sleeves.

Uneven effects are emphasized anew in the new styles, says the Dry Goods Economist. One of the manifestations of the vogue is skirt fullness arbitrarily spotted here and there. A cluster of pleats may decorate only one side of a skirt, or circular fullness may be concentrated at one side.

THE CAPE FOR SPRING

The cape, a recognized style in the new mode, is seen as a smart spring item. The long military cape like the one which accompanies the kasha frock will, in all probability, find favor, particularly for sports wear. The frock of this costume is laid in pleats which reveal underlays of jade green crepe. The latter material is also used on the collar of the cape.

BUCKLE IMPORTANT IN THE STYLES

The buckle contributes one of the most important trimming details of the season. The buckle is quite a glittering ornament when it is of rhinestones and is used to adorn one of the new felt hats or one of satin. The buckle of felt in self or contrasting color is another trimming means frequently employed for smart little felt hats.

Somewhat different is the use of gold kid buckles to finish the gold kid belt on brown crepe dress. Another buckle somewhat smaller, finishes the gold kid band which lends the illusion of a two-pieces style to this model. A third buckle, smaller still than either of the other two, adorns the very edge of the skirt.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES

The best silk for darning holes in silk stokings is filoselle.

When you cut, always use a flat surface. A big table is the ideal thing. One woman keeps a long piece of beaverboard in her clothes closet and lays it on the bed. Another uses a wide davenport. Another makeshifts with the ironing board.

Use black knitting silk for darning stockings and you will be pleased with the work, for the needle runs smoothly under and over the stitches, with the result that the patch is very neat, much more so than when darning cotton is used.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of good tools in the sewing rooms, says Vogue, scissors with true cutting edges, pins with good points (and many of them), accurate tape measure and yardstick. These things cost a few cents at most—but on them may hang all the profits. Besides, the very possession of them and the knowledge that they're first-class give one a professional feeling that leads to self-confidence—which is an invaluable asset. Dressmaking is one of the fields in which it is never safe to trust anything to luck.

METHOD OF WASHING KNITTED FABRICS

The knitted jersey type of fabric which is so popular today for sport clothes can be washed quite successfully if a few precautions are observed.

Remove any trimming that may not wash well. Shake well to remove surface dust. Wash in plenty of lukewarm water and a mild soap.

Prepare the suds before putting in the garments so that there will be no danger of streaking such as is sometimes caused by rubbing soap directly on a fabric.

Rinse in clear, warm water. Squeeze out excess moisture, but do not wring hard.

At no time lift the garment up out of the water without supporting it underneath with the hands, as the weight of the water-soaked wool is likely to stretch it.

Do not hang up to dry, but spread out flat on a cloth, arranging to fit the original measurement, which should be taken before.

Press hems and seams on the wrong side, the rest of the garment will not need ironing.

THE PORCH FURNITURE

Give the porch furniture, if it be of wicker, a good scrubbing with salt water. It will clean it beautifully. If need be, a coat of clear varnish may follow the scrubbing. Then the furniture will look like new.

REINDEER BAG

For occasional use is a pretty bag of black reindeer and fancy gold kid. To carry out the color scheme, gold-colored moire is used for linings and fittings. Though envelope-like in appearance, it has a gold kid strap and deep inner pockets, which are separated by the triple frame.

HOW TO GAUGE THE LAMP BASE

Following a simple proportion such as one to two in planning a lamp shade and base will help make a decidedly better looking article when complete. For instance, if the stand is one foot high, it follows then that the shade will be a foot high and two feet in circumference.

CONCERNING WOMEN

It is proposed to have a woman's suffrage clause incorporated in the Chinese Constitution.

Lady Terrington, former member of the British parliament, has gone into business as a beauty promoter.

Mrs. J. E. Frazer was the first woman commissioned by the United States government to design a coin.

Mrs. Evelyn F. Snow, former chief of the State Board of Motion Pictures in Ohio, has announced her candidacy for governor.

The Danish school system is being completely reconstructed under the guidance of Nina Bang, the first woman Danish minister.

The Empress of Japan is much interested in Sericulture and personally takes care of the silkworms and feeding them on mulberry leaves.

In Greece women who can read and sign their names and are 30 years of age will be allowed to vote in the 1927 elections in that country.

Mrs. Florence L. Whitman, first woman member of the city council in Cambridge, Mass., is the mother of a family and is 43 years of age.

FOR THE NURSERY

Very attractive is nursery furniture copied from that of Tyrolea peasants and quaint and rather primitive in line. One set is painted a faint pink with tiny blossoms and varied colors.

EVER USEFUL BAG

The boarding-school girl and the traveler as well will find bags of rubberized silk as a necessary part of their equipment. These bags, which come in several sizes, are particularly pretty when made of pink and gray plaided silk.

RECEIPES

Casserole of Rice with Veal: Butter a quart brick-shaped mold, line it with well-seasoned boiled rice to the depth of one inch. To one cup (packed solidly) of fine chopped cold cooked veal chicken or turkey add one egg slightly beaten, two tablespoons of cracker crumbs and sufficient white sauce to moisten it well. Season highly with salt, pepper and lemon juice and one-half teaspoon of fine chopped parsley. Turn mixture into the center of the lined mold, cover with rice, set the buttered cover in place and steam thirty-five minutes. Remove from mold to a hot serving platter, sprinkle top with paprika and surround mold with Spanish or bechamel sauce. The mold may be prepared the evening before and steamed.

Spanish Sauce: Cook two tablespoons of fine chopped lean raw ham, two tablespoons of chopped celery, two tablespoons of chopped carrot and one tablespoon of chopped onion, with one-fourth cup of butter or substitute until butter is well browned; add five tablespoons of flour, stir until well blended and continue browning; then add one and one-half cups of brown stock and three-fourths cups of stewed and strained tomatoes; add one small clove of garlic and cook five minutes, then strain. Season with salt and pepper.

From Small Beginnings

Alfred Hollins, the Great Organist

Often, in the United States, when people in churches and in other places where there are great organs, listen to the music, they hear the compositions of a man who was born blind—Alfred Hollins, the famous English composer. If the people who hear the music knew the story of his struggle, handicapped as he was, how much more would they appreciate what they hear! Into his many compositions for the organ Alfred Hollins put all the longings of a sensitive soul. Unable to see the world as others see it, he nevertheless found the soul of beauty and in his music he revealed that soul to others.

At his birth, in 1865, Alfred Hollins was blind. In their grief at his unfortunate condition those who saw the boy thought that every door of opportunity had been closed upon him. They foretold for the child a dreary, inclosed life, a monotonous blank of years. They saw no possibility of greatness, as the world holds greatness. Nevertheless, human life is so made that any person, however humble or however handicapped, may, if he wishes, and has the will power to make the effort, rise to usefulness and even to fame.

When Alfred Hollins grew out of infancy into childhood he was sent to a school for the blind. There a discerning teacher noticed the boy's love of music and patiently set about training him. Alfred Hollins learned rapidly and soon became skillful in playing the piano and the organ. At 13 he went on to a higher school for the blind, and there continued to develop his talent. Now that he had learned the fundamentals, he began to show genius. He played the organ as no one in the school had played it before. The teachers, delighted with the success that they had helped to bring about praised him without stint. The fame of the blind musician went beyond the school. The boy played everywhere in England and won applause. Queen Victoria honored him with her personal praise. With his head unturned by success the youth continued to study, now going to Germany for further instruction. As a result he became one of the greatest of modern composers for the organ. He has given inspiration and delight in music to thousands of people.

If a blind boy can persevere and succeed why should any one else fail?

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Few leaders in the Methodist Episcopal church are better known than Rev. Frank M. Bristol, for many years a bishop of that denomination, now retired, and who today will receive congratulations on his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary. Bishop Bristol is a native of New York state who grew up in the middle West and entered the ministry after completing his studies at Northwestern University. His first pastorates were in Chicago and its suburbs. Then he was transferred to the Baltimore Conference and for 11 years was pastor of the Metropolitan M. E. church in Washington, D. C. For four years of this time President McKinley attended his church. He was elected bishop in 1908 and assigned to Buenos Aires. In 1912 he became bishop of Omaha and from 1916 till his retirement in 1924 he was bishop of the Chattanooga area. He is the author of numerous books on religious subjects and throughout his career has enjoyed a reputation as a public speaker of unusual ability.

Jump Laughs at Reddy Fox

Advantages to each I give
That each may have the chance to live.

—Old Dame Nature.

Jumper the Hare has big feet. Yes, sir, he has big feet. His cousin, Peter Rabbit, often had thought about those big feet of Jumper's and secretly had laughed at them and been glad that his own feet were not so long and awkward-looking. Jumper's feet were too big to look well. His foot prints were big enough for some one twice his size. Reddy Fox used to laugh at Jumper and jeer at him for having such big feet. But Jumper didn't mind. He really didn't care about his looks, so it didn't trouble him at all because his feet, especially his hind feet, were too big to look well. Really Jumper was glad that his feet were big.

One night while Peter was over in the Green Forest a snowstorm started in. It snowed and snowed and snowed. The air was so filled with snow that Peter could hardly see over his own whiskers. So he wisely hunted up a hollow log and in this he made himself comfortable and hoped that little Mrs. Peter over in the dear Old Briarpatch would not worry about him. The snow sifted down through the bare branches of the trees which had dropped their leaves in the fall, and piled up on the broad green branches of the evergreens until they began to bend with the weight of it.

"I'm glad I filled my stomach before this began," thought Peter before he went to sleep. He had no fear, for he knew that in a storm like this none of his enemies would be abroad. There was nothing at all for him to fear. So he slept soundly.

When Peter awoke the next morning snow was still falling. By this time it had pretty well covered the old log in which Peter was sheltered and, of course, was growing deeper and deeper all the time. It wasn't until the middle of the afternoon that the storm ended. Peter had to dig his way out. That wasn't much of a job, for the snow was soft and very light. Peter soon had dug it away from around the opening in the end of the old log and climbed up on the latter for a look around. Peter signed. Yes sir, he signed.

"I've got to stay here until this snow packs down or there is a crust," said he, talking to himself. "I can see that clearly enough. This snow is so soft that I would sink in with every step and I couldn't run if I should try. Here I'm reasonably safe. Shadow the Weasal is the only one who could get at me in this hollow log, and somehow I don't believe he'll be around here. So there is nothing to fear. But I'll have to go hungry, and I don't like that."

That night was a moonlight night, just the kind of a night that Peter dearly loves. He couldn't sleep. You see he had slept all day. So he climbed up on the roof of his house, so to speak, and there squatted and wished and wished that he could run about.

He had been squatting there a long time when he saw something moving in and out of the shadows and presently he recognized Reddy Fox. Reddy was having hard work getting about. "He must be hungry," thought Peter, "to be hunting while this snow is so soft. I am glad I had sense enough to stay here."

Just then Peter's attention was caught by another movement just a little way in front of Reddy. At the first glance it looked for all the world like a big lump of snow moving along. It was a minute or two before Peter recognized his cousin Jumper the Hare. You know in winter Jumper's coat is pure white. Jumper was moving along just a little ahead of Reddy and looking back and laughing. He was laughing at Reddy Fox.

"You have laughed at my big feet, Reddy Fox. Now it is my turn to laugh at you," Jumper cried. "Don't you wish you had feet like them? If you did have you might get a dinner sooner than you are likely to tonight. Why don't you catch me, Reddy Fox? Why, don't you? Ha, ha, ha, ha!"

(Copyright, 1926, by T. W. Burgess.)

The next story: Peter Gives Himself anyway."

Jumper was moving along just a little ahead of Reddy

Stories That Recall Others

It's All in a Day.

Newspaper telephones frequently carry unusual questions but there is occasionally a new one. A woman's voice over the wire asked:

"Sir, can you tell me whether Washington square is turning round? I heard that it was."

"I have just crossed it," was the reply, "so I know that it is not." But scenting the joke that was intended in the question, he continued, "But you might try Franklin square. They have rotary traffic there."

Looking for Policeman

Before Christmas the crowd of shoppers intent on their next errand shoved and jostled a weeping and grimy-faced urchin, eight years old, paying slight attention to his tears or his shrill voiced pleased for information. Finally a policeman drew him to one side and got his story. He wanted a woman arrested for hindering him."

However, since he could make no specific charges and didn't know the woman who had "hindered" him nor where she could be found, his case had to be taken under advisement.

Eve's Teeth Marks Shown

Among the many botanical curiosities of Ceylon is a fruit supposed to bear the marks of Eve's teeth.

The tree on which it grows is known by the significant name of Forbidden Fruit, or Eve's Apple Tree. The blossom is pleasantly scented, and the fruit is orange color outside and a deep crimson within, says Tit-Bits. Each fruit has the peculiar appearance of having a piece bitten out of it.

This fact, together with its poisonous quality, led to the belief that it was forbidden fruit of the Garden of Eden, and serves the useful purpose of warning such as might be tempted by its lovely appearance to imitate Eve and take a bite.

Wrecks Hard on Bedsheets

With more than a dozen accidents occurring in two days at or near a death trap at Pecan, Pa., on the Pittsburgh road, Mrs. Holtsman, owner of a rooming house, informed the Red Cross that all her bed sheets and pillow slips had been used to care for the injured. The local chapter replenished her supply and sent enough bandages and sheets for emergency cases.

CITY COURT IMPOSES FINES ON TWO COUNTS

Following a hearing in chambers Dana E Lamitie was fined on two counts, Saturday morning, two other counts for violation of the motor vehicle laws being nolled. On the charge of evading responsibility a fine of $50 and costs was imposed and on the charge of reckless driving the fine was $50 and $25 remitted. The fines and costs totalling $95.40 were paid Charges of failure to show his registration when requested to do so by an officer, and of driving an unregistered car, were nolled.

Leniency was shown owing to the condition of the young man, who is a disabled World war veteran. Several witnesses were called in connection with the case, among them being Louis Itkowitz and Harry Soltz, occupants of the New London car, which was struck. Damages to the cars are to be settled between the owners

The charges against the accused followed an automobile accident on Broadway, about 5 o'clock, on Friday morning, when the machine driven by Lamitie, ran into the car driven by Itkowitz, which had become stalled on Broadway near Broad street.

FUNERALS.
Frank E. Botham.

The funeral of Frank E. Botham was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Martin Burke, No. 263 West Main street. The floral tributes were beautiful.

The service was conducted by Rev. Charles Smith, of Montville, who also read the committal service at the grave in Comstock cemetery, Montville. Bearers were Martin V. Burke, Thomas Simcox, Michael Carroll and Eugene Calkins. Arrangements were by Church and Allen.

The death of Mr. Botham occurred Wednesday last, at his home, No. 93 School street, after an illness of about two weeks. He had not been in good health for the year past and had been tenderly cared for by his wife. He was born in Montville, August 30, 1876, the son of Daniel and Mary Chapman Botham, and most of his life was spent in that town.

By occupation he was a gunsmith and worked at his trade in Springfield and in Norwich, being employed by the Crescent Fire Arms company until health compelled him to retire about a year ago.

In Montville, April 23, 1905, he was united in marriage with Sadie Couillard, the ceremony being performed by Elder Morse of the Montville Congregational church. Shortly after his marriage he went to Springfield and about nine years ago located in Trading Cove, finally coming to Norwich about two years ago.

Mr. Botham is survived by his wife and one son, Elmer, both of Norwich, and one brother, John Botham of Haughton's Cove.

He was a member of the Montville Congregational church and a man highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Arrangements were by George G. Grant.

OBITUARY
Walter O. Whitaker

The death of Walter O. Whitaker, 58, formerly of this city but a resident of Natick, Mass., for about 15 years past, occurred Sunday morning at Corey Hill hospital, Brookline, Mass., where he had been taken for an operation for liver and stomach trouble from which he had suffered for a long time. It was found that his condition would not permit of the operation and his death occurred suddenly at the hospital.

Mr. Whitaker was born in Montville, the son of Charles E. and Hattie M. Whitaker, but his boyhood days were spent in Norwich to which his parents removed. As a young man he was employed as billing clerk for the Central Vermont railroad and was the first agent of the American Express company when it opened an office in this city. He learned the paper making business at the Uncas Paper Co., at Thamesville and subsequently was superintendent there. He then went to Utica, N. Y., for three or four years, where he was superintendent of a paper mill, but returned from there to become superintendent of the paper mill of the Thames River Specialties Co., at Montville. From there he went to Natick, where he was general manager of the Natick Board Co. Mr. Whitaker had a practical acquaintance with the paper making business and was regarded as an expert in his line, while his executive capacity and business ability made him a valued officer in the corporations with which he had been connected.

He is survived by his wife, who before marriage was Miss Mabel Shepard of this city, a daughter and two sons, Mrs. Florence Walker, Charles and George, all residents of Natick. He also leaves six grandchildren and two brothers, Charles A of 730 Boswell avenue, this city, and George L. of Hartford.

Mr Whitaker was a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Elks lodge in Natick.

CONNECTICUT HAD 258,000 MOTOR VEHICLES REGISTERED IN PAST YEAR

As nearly as can be determined by the records of the state motor vehicle department, approximately 35,000 new automobiles were bought by Connecticut people during the year 1925, an increase of perhaps, 6,000 over the estimated automobile sales in Connecticut during the previous year. The greatest number of purchases was in Hartford county and the second largest number in New Haven county.

Nearly-two thirds of the Connecticut automobile sales appear to have been made in the first six months of the year, and the sales record for the second half of the year was boosted largely by a sharp sales spurt in September and October when the new models of several makes of motor vehicles came out.

The whole number of motor vehicles registered in Connecticut during the year just closed was approximately 258,000 with December figures from some of the motor vehicle department's branch offices necessarily estimated. This was an increase of about 23,000 registrations over the total recorded in the department for 1924. The exact figures for '25 will be computed in a few days, after the rush for 1926 registrations has subsided.

The number of automobile transfers recorded in the motor vehicle department for the first nine months of 1925 stood at 37,254, which total is estimated to have been increased to a figure in the neighborhood of 45,000 in the last three months of the year.

TOTAL OF $48,505.13 WAS ST. PATRICK'S 1925 RECEIPTS

Not since the time of the last mission has there been in St. Patrick's church such a sight as was that at the 9 o'clock mass Sunday, when three priests were required to administer holy communion. The rector, Monsignor M. H. May and Rev. John J. Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin, who read th elow mass. From 3 to 6 and from 7 to 10 the previous afternoon and evening the three priests had heard confessions, as is the weekly custom.

At the three masses of the day the rector read his annual financial report for 1925. The figures, in detail, showed higher revenues than in any previous year of parish life—a grand total of $48,505.13.

At the beginning of the year there was a balance of $10,744.94. The ordinary revenues, from pews, Sunday sittings, et al, reached $17,642.75. Extraordinary receipts—from collections, donations, entertainments, and the like brought in $11,068.44. The total of ordinary and extraordinary revenues was over $40,856.13. Cemetery receipts were over $8,000, bringing the grand total up to $48,505.13, the highest record of income, with no borrowed money.

Naturally, in a parish of over 4,000 souls, the disbursements were proportionately large—a grand total of $37,523.30, but at that leaving the handsome balance of $10,981.83 to begin 1926. The expenditures included salaries of three priests, $3,200; salaries of nine Sisters, teachers in the parish school—which amount goes into the community fund of their convent—$3,900; expended for parish poor, $1,007.80; convent repairs, $3,420.71. Every cent in the heavy revenues and expenses, all handled by the pastor, was accounted for, in accord with the regulations of the bishop of the diocese. The result showed such wise financial management that after the masses Monsignor May received the thanks and congratulations of scores of his people for the magnificent showing made.

From the pulpit, the rector expressed his obligations to his two devoted assistant priests, to the zealous Sisters of Mercy for their faithful labors in the school, to the voluntary choirs, sexton, ushers, collectors, parish societies and the people at large for the year's ready and generous co-operation in every undertaking. Their three priests, he reminded them, were on duty 24 hours out of every day—at their service, since even at night there is always one priest in turn sleeping with telephone or bell ready to waken him, in case there may be a hurry call to hasten, maybe to Backus hospital, the state hospital, the sanatorium, the almshouse, or to some private home, in response to an emergecy sick call to carry Our Lord's body to be the spiritual food and consolation of the dying. Except in emergencies, the regular hours for sending in sick calls are 8 a. m., 1 and 7 p. m.

Important repairs are to be made on the church property the coming year, but the pastor expressed the conviction that in making them he would have, as in former years, the generous support and financial aid of his great-hearted people.

His sermon was from the gospel for the Sunday, dealing with the flight into Egypt, his theme being confidence in God and His inspirations, as shown by Joseph and Mary in bearing the Infant Saviour in safety into Nazereth, from Herod's massacre of the Holy Innocents.

PLANNING TO FORM COW TESTING ASSOCIATION

Cattle owners in this section of the state are planning to meet with County Agent Walter T. Clark, in an effort to start a cow testing association in this vicinity. The meeting is scheduled for Thursday, January 14th, and all cattle owners in the county have been invited to attend. It is planned that the association employ a tester, whose duty it will be to test the milk in each farm's herd, weight of milk and feed and to keep a record of production for each cow and herd. Prof. J. A. Simms, of the Connecticut Agricultural college, has been secured to address the meeting and lead in the discussion of the work of the proposed organization.

Postponing Officers' Installation.

Through error it was stated that Fletcher post, American Legion, would install the newly elected officers at a special meeting this (Monday) evening. Adjutant Joseph Belleflemme has announced that the next meeting of the post would be held Friday night but that the installation of officers had been postponed to some later date, when the programme will be carried out in full.

REGISTRARS OF VOTERS QUALIFY FOR TWO YEARS

Tyler D. Guy and Cornelius J. Downes were duly sworn to the faithful performance of the duties as registrars of voters for the next two years by Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook at his office Saturday morning.

Messrs. Guy and Downes made the following appointments as assistant registrars:

Mr. Guy's staff. Second district, Frank I. Royce; third district, Louis H. Geer; fourth district, Albert J. Bailey; fifth district, George N. Beardow; 6th district, Howard A. Spalding.

Mr. Downes' staff. Second district, Thaddeus Leahy; third district, William J. Malone; fourth district, Patrick T. Connell; 5th district, Timothy Sullivan; 6th district, Henry Gebrath.

These are all appointments except in the second district where Mr. Royce succeeds Ex-Mayor Leroy who, after a series of years, retires from the position, having moved to the first district.

Mr. Guy and Mr. Downes are both veterans in the office of registrar of voters, the former having been first elected in September 1896 and the latter in 1900 and both have served continuously ever since.

CHARGE TAILOR WITH VIOLATING LIQUOR LAW

The arrest of Charles Gencarelli was made Saturday afternoon at his tailor shop at 434 Main street by state policemen Fred Caron and Giles Watson on the charge of violation of the liquor law. In the evidence to be produced against Gencarelli is a bottle of liquor alleged to have been sold by Gencarelli to Eddie Jones for $1, the latter working with the state police to secure the evidence. There are also several jugs of what is alleged to be alcohol which were found in Gencarelli's place when the state policemen searched it.

The accused man is out on bonds for his appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning.

ROCKVILLE DOCTOR BUYS WESTFIELD, MASS., BUILDING

Parks Block, the largest business block in Westfield, Mass., formerly owned by Francis R. Parks of Boston, has been transferred to Dr. Thomas F. O'Laughlin of Rockville, Conn. The deal involved $264,270, with stamps indicating an equity of $58,000. The sale was subject to mortgages of $175,000 and $31,270. The F. W. Woolworth company has a lease on one of the first floor stores, while Austin Bros., located in the other store is to vacate early in the year.

It is plan of Dr. O'Laughlin to construct a modern theatre in the rear of the block with an entrance through a lobby.

In Publishing Business in New York

Robert L. Johnson, of New York city, visited over the week-end with his mother, Mrs. William B. Birge, of Huntington place. Mr. Johnson is associated with three other newspapermen in the publication of The Time, a weekly periodical somewhat on the order of The Literary Digest. The Time was started about three years ago and has rapidly gained in circulation, now having about 100,000 copies a week. Friends of Mr. Johnson, in this city, wish him all success in his business venture.

Boy Organist Played

H. Dwight Richardson, the boy organist, of Norwich, rendered a programme at the evening service Sunday at the First Baptist church, New London. His selections, which showed great skill in interpretation and in the use of the mechanics of the organ, were: Allegro from Trio Sonata, No. 1, Bach Unda-Maris op. 144, Lemare, Toccata, No. 2, Op. 67, MacMaster.

Hospital Auxiliary

All women in North Stonington and neighboring places who are interested in the welfare of the Westerly hospital are to attend a meeting in Westerly High school assembly hall on Tuesday evening, when a woman's auxiliary to the hospital will be formed.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

MANY IMPORTANT SPORT EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR THE COMING WEEK

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(By The A. P.)—One champion of sport will defend his title in the first full week of 1926—a week brimming with important events. Football, hockey, golf, skating, billiards, boxing, basketball —all offer interesting programmes.

Edouard Horemans, one of Europe's very few titleholders, risks his recently gained 18.2 balkline billiard crown in a match with Jake Schaefer, former champion, starting in Chicago tomorrow night. Eric Hagenlacher of Germany will meet the winner of this match some time in March.

Two championships in boxing will be at stake within the next two months —in the middleweight and welterweight divisions. Mickey Walker, welter champion, faces Tommy Milligat of Scotland in New York, January 28 and on February 26 Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, long leader among the middleweights, will encounter the outstanding contender, in the opinion of the New York State Athletic commission, Tiger Flowers, of Atlanta, Ga.

Tex Rickard, New York promoter, in his predictions for 1926, figures that Greb will lose his title some time within the next twelve months and that Walker will retain his. Many of the predictions made by Rickard a year ago came true.

William G. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburgh, will become president of the United States Golf association at the annual session in Chicago Saturday, which will follow two meetings of the Greens section.

An enthusiastic golfer and "father" of the Oakmont course over which the last amateur championship was played, Fownes is expected to put the ancient game into even greater stride. He is a former amateur champion and is expected to captain the 1926 Walker cut team in its invasion of England.

Prospects are for retention of the present ball at this year's meeting, the experts another season in which to test air currents, hitting power and other considerations said to have eliminated the brassie as a worthy weapon. Conditions are so different on the courses of England where the mists are heavy and the winds numerous that an international agreement on size and weight of the ball may be far away.

The Canadian hockey invasion continues with McGill and Queens universities playing in New York this week. McGill, which defeated Harvard Saturday, will encounter Yale tomorrow night and Williams college and Queens will cross sticks Tuesday. A professional contest Wednesday between New York and Boston of the National Hockey League, will complete six successive days of ice competition on the Madison Square Garden surface.

Football criticized and praised during the meetings of the Coaches' association and the National Collegiate Athletic Federation the past week, appears to be safe for another fall at least. Declaring of war between the coaching professionals and the playing type featured the coaches' session. He who in any way is connected with the professional game in the future will find no hands extended by the coaches.

Pennsylvania defeated Yale in the first contest of the Eastern Collegiate Basketball league played Friday. Only two games are scheduled for the coming six days, Princeton meeting Columbia and Yale facing Princeton on Saturday night.

TWO FAST INDOOR LEAGUE GAMES TONIGHT

In the Norwich Indoor league games this evening, the sixth week of activity, the Nutmegs and Tigers clash at 6:30 and Battery B. and Stars meet at 9:30.

In the first contest two ancient rivals will come together in what should be a fast tilt from beginning to end. For the Nutmegs the following will appear: Jim Kelly, J. Tombari, Kampf, Jab Burns, W. Burns, Gibbs, Segal, Couture, Brown, Falcone, Nevius, Marchand, Bonville, Lambert and Winters. For the Tigers, Goldblatt, L. Hamil, E. Hamil, B. Labenski, P. Labenski, Ciminoski, Tibbets, Tombari, Burke, Jarvis, Yerrington, Connell, Nevins, McGowan and Boyd. Each of these teams has won a game in the league against the other, the Tigers taking the first game of the league defeating the Nutmegs by the score of 9 to 8, while in the second meeting between these clubs the Nutmegs completely swamped the Tigers by the score of 27 to 1. The winner of tonight's contest will, therefore, have a decided advantage over the other in the series staged by these two teams.

Little need be said of the 9:30 game as these two bitter rivals have meet on the field of combat many times and hotly contested games have been the result.

The standing to date is as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Battery B.	4	0	1.000
Stars	2	2	.500
Nutmegs	1	3	.250
Tigers	1	3	.250

FRANK BARBER IN TOWN WEDNESDAY TO POST MONEY

Frankie Barber, eastern Connecticut bowling king, will be in Norwich, on Wednesday afternoon, to post his money for a match with Chip Dugas. Barber said last evening that he would leave the money in the hands of the sports editor and that if Mr Dugas did not care to come through, anyone in the eastern part of the state was welcome to cover it. In speaking of Mr. Dugas' statement that the match be rolled this week or not at all Mr. Barber said that his idea was simply to have things in ship-shape manner before the match was rolled. Rules must be made and the terms of the match agreed upon so as to leave absolutely no ground for an argument to arise. In other matches it has been shown that things have come up during a match that could not be satisfactorily settled and Mr. Barber does not desire to have this occur again.

MEHLHORN WINS $2,500 OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

VIRGINIA COUNTRY CLUB, Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 3.—(AP)—William E. (Wild Bill) Mehlhorn, of the Old Colony Club, Chicago, won the $2,500 open golf tournament here today with a score of 285 having played both second and third rounds of eighteen holes each in par, 71. He won on the consistency of his game, showing great steadiness when others weakened.

BRITISH STARS BEAT JONES AND GUNN

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Archie Compston, British professional golf champion and Arnaud Massey, former British open champion and four times holder of the French open title, made their American debut on the St. Augustine links today and defeated Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn, Atlanta amateurs, who won top honors in the last American championship. The score of the 36 hole match was 3 and 2. Compston and Massey were 1 up at the end of the morning round.

ARMY ATHLETICS TO BE STRICTLY AMATEUR IN FUTURE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—(AP)—A slogan, "Athletics for All," to govern army sports, coupled with a hard and fast ruling for strict adherence to amateurism in military games and bouts, has been laid down in a general order by the war department.

Professional events at army posts are to be permitted only when "clearly advertised and announced as professional," and local laws governing boxing or Sunday baseball are to be complied with strictly by post commanders.

Army participation through individual or team entries in events arranged by civilian officials is to be favored, the order directs, and stress is to be laid on inter-unit competitive games annually wherever practicable.

In events at army posts, no cash prizes are to be offered in the future and events are to be open only to army personnel, including the national guard and reservists, and to the navy and marine corps.

"If in such military meets it so happens that amateurs compete against persons who have previously violated amateur rules, it will in no way tend to professionalize such amateurs," the order continued.

National Collegiate Athletic association rules are to govern army contests, and in connection with the boxing contests at army posts the policy was set forth that the sport is to be encouraged as an athletic exercise and care taken that "it does not lose its character," in that respect.

Sunday baseball is to be permitted at posts where no fee is charged spectators. In other cases commanders are to comply with local laws.

LA COSTE BEATS BOROTRA IN FRENCH TENNIS FINALS

PARIS, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Rene LaCoste defeated Jean Borotra today in the finals of the men's singles of the French covered court tennis championships, 6-1, 4-6, 8-6, 7-5.

LaCoste and Borotra are ranked at the top of French tennis as equals, but experts who witnessed today's play predicted that if LaCoste continues to show the form he displayed today he will be in first place alone in the 1926 rankings.

LaCoste's victory was easier than the score would seem to indicate. He played his usual steady reliable game, never throwing away a point, keeping his opponent on the baseline and gradually wearing him down. Borotra was spectacular and brilliant. He made many errors and was exhausted at the finish.

This is the fourth consecutive defeat of Borotra by LaCoste since January 1925, twice on the covered courts and once each at St. Cloud and Wimbledon. A record crowd for indoor tennis watched the match, with Borotra, as usual, the favorite.

GOOD PRICE PAID FOR NEVERS BY BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—(AP)—The price of the St. Louis Browns, American League club, paid to obtain Ernie Nevers, Stanford University athlete has not been disclosed, but reports here tonight were that "it was well up in four figures."

P. D. C. Ball, owner of the Browns, when questioned concerning the transaction, said he does not know himself, the terms of the contract with Nevers. Ball said the Pacific coast star was signed Saturday at Jacksonville by Manager Sisler of the Browns on instructions he received from the club owner.

"Sisler did not include the terms in the telegram he sent me Saturday," Ball said, "but he will write a letter detailing the transaction."

Reports are that the New York Giants offered Nevers a $5,000 bonus to sign with that club, and that a similar offer was tendered him by the Cincinnati club.

Ball had been after Nevers, he announced, since he was advised recently by California friends of the big fellow's prowess, both as a pitcher and a batter.

Ball also announced tonight that the Browns will return to Tarpon Springs, Florida, to establish their 1926 training camp this coming spring. They trained there in the spring of 1925.

JOE MOORE WINS TWO EVENTS AT LAKE HAPACONG

LAKE HAPACONG, N. J., Jan. 3—(AP)—Joe Moore, international indoor skating champion today won the 440-yard and the two-mile handicap race in the final events of the Lake Hapacong association ice carnival. Other well-known competitors at the meet were: Eddie Searles, Metropolitan three-mile champion; Leslie Boyd, international spring champion, and Miss Elsie Muller, national women's champion. Miss Muller won the 440-yard scratch race for women, but was beaten by Dot Jackson in the 220-yard handicap race.

All skating and ice boat events during the three-day carnival, were under auspices of the Middle Atlantic Skating association. In a five-mile motor sled race this morning Stewart Pritchard, his time 5:04 3-5, and three-[illegible] Johnson over the course.

KILLINGLY HIGH FIVE IS DOWNED BY ALUMNI FIVE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 3—The Killingly High basketball team, although heavily outweighed by the Alumni team, put up a strong battle and were only defeated by three points here last night, the score being 20 to 17, in favor of the Alumni team. The Alumni took the floor with two Connecticut Aggie stars in their lineup and three members of the Killingly championship team of two years ago. The high school boys played a stiff game in the first half, the score at half time being 8 to 8. In the third quarter the grads took the lead and held it to the finish although the high school boys made desperate attempt to even matters in the last quarter. The summary:

BOBBY WALTHOUR ELOPES AND IS MARRIED IN MIAMI

NEW YORK, Jan. 3—(AP)—Bobby Walthour, Jr., six day cyclist and Miss Margaret Murray, of New York, eloped last week and were married in Miami, Fla., according to word received today by her father, J. P. Murray. They are spending their honeymoon in Miami. The message did not state when they were married.

Young Walthour, son of the cyclist once known as the "Dixie Flyer," was American amateur bicycle champion in 1921.

In March of last year he and Fred Spencer won the 38th annual six day race at Madison Square Garden, and the team again won first place in the Chicago races last fall. They finished third last Monday in the six day races in the new Garden. Walthour lives in Nutley, N. J.

LINARES SETS NEW RECORD FOR LONGBEACH COURSE

LONGBEACH, Cal., Jan. 3—(AP)—Dick Linares, Long Beach professional, made a new course record in the morning play of the Long Beach open golf tournament today with a gross of 138. Linares was the leader of the first eighteen qualifying holes yesterday, with a 68. He continued shooting brilliantly under par today on the first nine; took an eagle two for the eighth hole, a distance of 401 yards, par four; and shot par four for the ninth.

Cups were elusive for star players and they found most trouble on the greens, rimming holes, although Bobbie Cruickshank suffered from very weak approaches.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER IS GIVEN CHAIRMAN FARLEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Every world boxing champion except Jack Dempsey and numerous sport promoters and state and city officials tonight attended a testimonial dinner to James A. Farley, chairman of the New York state athletic commission, at the Commodore Hotel.

Among those on the platform were Mayor James J. Walker of New York, Governor-Elect Harry A. Moore of New Jersey, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City and United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York.

An order for an automobile was presented to Mr. Farley.

OPERATIC BOXER SINGS TO CROWD AFTER HIS VICTORY

LONDON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Jop Leit, heavyweight pugilist, known as "the singing Dutchman," proved his contention last evening that prizefight fans like grand opera as well as rough and tumble bouts, if served them with fitting surroundings.

After punishing Billy Prestage, of Nottingham at the Blackfriars' Fight hall, so severely that Billy surrendered at the end of the second round Leit regaled the ringside patrons by singing selections from Pagliacci, with Wagnerian airs for encores. The spectators were so pleased with the Amsterdam boxer's singing that none of them thought of asking the management for their money back because the fight ended so abruptly.

Basketball Challenge

The Bradford Dying association basketball team of Bradford, R. I. issues a basketball challenge to play basketball teams in or about Norwich. Many of the B. D. Challenges addressed to Manager Ernest F. Stenhouse of Newton avenue, Westerly, R. I., will receive [illegible]

HOREMANS TO DEFEND BILLIARD TITLE AGAINST SCHAEFER TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 3—(AP)—For the second time within a month, the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship will be at stake tomorrow night when its present holder, Edouard Horemans, Belgian, and young Jake Schaefer meet in a 1,500 point match at Orchestra hall.

It was only a month ago that Horemans wrested the crown from Schaefer in one of the fastest matches in billiard history, which also was played at Orchestra hall.

The contest, the first 500 point block of which will be cued tomorrow, holds an added interest for fans in that it is an outgrowth of a disagreement during the last meeting of the two stars that threatened for a time to wreck their match and cause a furore in billiard circles all over the country. Schaefer was cing strong in a long run that looked as if it might carry him into the lead during the second block of the match when the referee said that he had missed a billiard. Schaefer protested, and it was only after the intervention of peacemakers that he consented to go on with the match. After the fireworks had quieted it was arranged that a return match be played tomorrow night. Eric Hagenlacher, the German star, protested, claiming that under the arrangement entered into at the time of the international tournament staged here last year, in which young Jake won the title from Willie Hoppe, he should have a chance at the championship before Schaefer was allowed to try to regain it. Hagenlacher later drew his protest.

The match will be played in three blocks of 500 points each, 500 tomorrow night, 500 Tuesday night, and the final 500 Wednesday afternoon. The afternoon final is an innovation in billiards.

Both players are reported in excellent shape, at the height of their form, and a contest that will make billiard history is looked forward to by the fans. The betting is said to be an almost even-money affair.

GRANGE'S TEAM TOO STRONG FOR NEVERS' STARS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 2.—(AP)—"Red" Grange's Chicago Bears defeated Ernie Nevers and the Jacksonville All-Star eleven here this afternoon, 19 to 6.

The defeat, however, detracted little from the reputation of the Leland Stanford All-American fullback, who entered professional football ranks by participating in the game.

The Bears displayed a smooth, efficient machine, while Nevers' teammates were defensively a little ragged during the first three periods.

A snappy aerial attack, short passes over the center of the line, were directly responsible for two of the Bears' touchdowns, while a fumble by Nevers, recovered by Erickson, former Washington and Jefferson star, netted another. Erickson ran 30 yards from the point of fumble for the touchdown.

Grange played through the first quarter and went out of the game early in the second period, to return in the fourth quarter.

Nevers, who remained in the game through the four periods, view more than successfully with Grange for honors. Fans accorded Rod Barron, former Georgia Tech star, a place in the saun with Nevers.

Statistics show that Nevers booted six punts for 320 yards, an average of fifty-four yards; engaged in sixteen plays from scrimmage for a total gain of forty-six yards and tossed to completion eight out of sixteen forward passes. One of them for forty yards and another for twenty-six. Grange carried the ball twenty-nine yards in five plays. His longest gain was eleven yards.

Nevers carried the brunt of the defensive work during the early periods, twice tackling Grange savagely, and crashing in to stop line plunges and off tackle plays by the Bears.

RICKARD OFFERS DIAMOND BELT TO LIGHTWEIGHTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—(AP) — Tex Rickard today offered a diamond studder belt to the winner of a lightweight boxing tournament to be conducted at Madison Square Garden.

Jesse McMahon, the garden matchmaker, announced that ten leading lightweights of the world would participate, providing the consent of the New York state athletic commission is obtained. The matter will be placed before that body at the regular Tuesday meeting.

Among those mentioned as entrants are the present champion, Rocky Kansas of Buffalo; Sid Terris of New York, Sammy Mandell of Rockland, Ills., Solly Seeman of New York, Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo, Phil McGraw of Detroit, Ace Hudkins of the Pacific coast, Stanislaus Loayza of Chile, Louis Vincentini of Chile and Lucien Vinez of France.

Goodrich captured the tournament conducted by the New York commission last year, thereby gaining recognition as successor to the retired Benny Leonard. Kansas took the crown from him in a bout at Buffalo several weeks ago.

McMahon said that Kansas may enter the tournament, otherwise he will meet the winner in a title bout in the summer. Boxing observers believe that Kansas will remain out as the only prize for him is such a competition would be the belt and he would risk his title several times.

TRYON DENIES HE WILL PLAY PRO FOOTBALL

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 2.—(AP)—Eddie Tryon of Southwick, almost unanimous choice as an all-American halfback, denied here today that he would play professional football, despite reports from New Haven Thursday saying that he had agreed to "show his stuff" in the south this winter. He charges that he being impersonated by some one in New Haven, denied that he knows Crowley, former Notre Dame player, with whom he is supposed to have made arrangements to appear as a professional, and asserts that he has not interviewed any one concerning playing in the south. He plans to visit New Haven tomorrow to investigate the story which stated he would turn professional.

TWO GAMES PLAYED IN WESTERLY BASKETBALL LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 3—The first game of the league series of amateur basketball games was played in Arion hall, Stonington, on Friday night, when the Delta Five of Westerly were defeated by the score of 37 to 33.

Most one sided was the second game in the series of league amateur basketball games played in the state armory on Saturday night, when the B. D. A. defeated the Battery B team by the score of 45 to 10. Loyal support was shown for the largest crowd so far this season witnessed the one-sided contest.

MANTY-PETROLLA BOUT HEADS HARTFORD CARD

Charlie Manty, one of New England's toughest 130 pounders, and Billy Petrolle, the "Fargo Express" are down on the week's fistic programme to mingle in the star bout of the Atlas Athletic club card at Foot Guard Armory in Hartford Thursday night.

It will be Manty's first appearance in Hartford while Petrolle is playing a return engagement. His spectacular showing against the rugged Steve Smith on the last Atlas programme earning him a place on the coming card.

Majestic A. C. Challenges

A basketball challenge is issued to any team in Connecticut or Rhode Island, playing either amateur or prorules, by the Majestic A. C. basketball team of Westerly. Especially would they like to arrange games with the Nutmegs, Battery B, Valiants, Jewett City, Taftville, Baltic or any other fast basketball shooters. Championship claims are made by the M. A. C.'s by reason of their defeating such teams as A. V. A. A. of Stonington, Battery E, Mystic, New London, Westerly All Stars, Providence and Shannock, R. I. teams. For games write to Manager George Winterbottom, 29 Prospect street, Pawcatuck, Westerly, R. I.

Bobby Jones, the national golf champion, began playing the game at the age of 7 and at 14 was engaging in tournament play.

Robert L. Cannefax, holder of the three cushion championship, was the only one of the national billiard champions to retain his title through 1925.

The recent cold snap came just in time to help out the elaborate programme of winter sports which many sections had prepared for the New Year holiday.

Since 1902 Princeton has won only two championships in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League, while Yale and Pennsylvania each has six to its credit.

The dropping out of Columbus leaves a gap in the Grand Circuit that will be hard to fill. The Ohio capital has been a member of the ebig trotting organization for many years.

Johnny Dundee, former featherweight champion, who has been absent from the ring for some time, will make his reappearance on January 8 in a scheduled 10-round bout with Joey Glick at Madison Square Garden.

Two hockey games, as well as the usual distance races for men and women [illegible] be included in the programme of the New England Amateur Skating association championships to be held at Worcester on January 23.

Jack Root, who accumulated about $50,000 during his ring career and has since approached the millionaire class as a result of his successful theatrical and other business ventures in southern California, was a stone mason by trade before he took up the boxing game.

In recent years Australia has dropped from the eyes of the sporting world, so far as pugilism is concerned. The country which in the olden days sent such famous battlers as Bob Fitzsimmons, Peter Jackson, Frank Slavin, Joe Goddard, Dan Creedon, Jim Hall, Tommy Tracey and Young Griffo has produced scarcely a fighter of first-class calibre during the past decade.

SAILOR AT NEW LONDON LOSES EYE AFTER CAR CRASHES INTO GIRDER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—John McDonnell, chief machinist's mate, stationed at local section base No. 4, state pier, suffered the loss of his left eye Saturday as a result of being injured in an automobile accident Friday. McDonnell and Edward Bents, the latter also a sailor, were returning to the state pier early Friday morning when the car, a Studebaker, owned and driven by Bents, smashed into a concrete girder on the New London approach of the Thames river highway bridge. McDonnell and Bents were thrown from the machine and McDonnell suffered a rupture of the left eyeball. Bents was also injured and is now under treatment at the base hospital.

Patrick Mallon, employed on Bartlett's Reef lightship, whose family resides in this city was taken into custody Saturday afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh charged with the non-support of his wife, Annie and two minor children, Florence and John Mallon, aged 11 and 15, respectively. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning. The arrest of Mallon resulted when his wife lodged complaint against her husband with Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky and that official issued a warrant for the arrest.

Late this afternoon acting prosecuting attorney ordered Mallon released from custody that he might return to the lightship, but until after Mallon had entered into an agreement whereby he will support his wife and children.

An automobile owned and operated by Henry R. Bond, 471 Fequot avenue, and a machine owned and operated by W. D. Fessler, 56 Bellevue Pl., employed at the plant of the New London Ship & Engine company were in collision Saturday night on Ocean avenue, near the corner of Farmington avenue. Both machines were wrecked the occupants escaping injury.

Rufus Mallalieu, Norwood avenue, complained to the police this forenoon that some time during last night vandals entered his property and maliciously destroyed two trees, cutting them down.

Mrs. Elsie Bishop Bezub, wife of Holman Belle, a member of the United States Coast guard and stationed at the local sectional base 4, state pier, lodged complaint with the police Saturday night, the young woman requesting the arrest of her husband on a charge of breach of the peace. Belle was not located, but officers at the state pier declared that Belle would be made a prisoner when he returned to the base and will be held for the New London authorities. Mrs. Belle declared that her husband visited her at the home of her parents, Schoolhouse Lane, Saturday night, about 8 o'clock and there engaged in a quarrel with his wife and father-in-law, finally beating the young woman and her father so seriously that complaint by neighbors was made to the police of the brawl. Later Mrs. Belle sought Patrolman Henry Sylvia and lodged complaint against her husband with the officer.

Residents in the vicinity of Fort Neck are resorting to obtaining electric light bulbs by stealing them from their position on Hamilton street where they have been placed for illuminating purposes. The practice has been carried on for some time but of late the theft of the bulbs has become more frequent. The lights that are stolen are beneath the Hamilton St. overpass of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, where the part of the highway is extremely dark and dangerous in the absence of the lights. The Connecticut Power company, which provided the bulbs has frequently lodged complaint with the police because of the thefts of bulbs.

An automobile owned by John Geary, R. F. D. 7, Norwich which was parked on Church street, near Main street, Saturday afternoon was damaged when the car was backed against by a large truck, owned and operated by John Mossbroker, Waterford. Conroy reported the accident to the police.

Ignatz Borenski and Tony Boska imbibed freely in the stuff that Congressman Volstead and the congress of the United States has declared shall not be drank as a beverage, and so they got into the police court, the former as a defendant and the latter as a plaintiff, in a breach of the peace case. While they were in the street arguing as to whether John was debtor to Tony they could not settle the matter, so John picked up a stone weighing about a pound and having jagged edges and smashed Tony in the ear, the blow being such as cut that member and sent the man to a surgeon for attention. John was arrested and spent the night in the lockup. In the police court John admitted that he owed Tony money and declared his intention of paying him. So Tony did not desire to have John prosecuted. He said it was a mistake that they had trouble and attributed that to vodka. John was fined $25 nevertheless and Judge Prince told the men concerned that they could not settle their debts by brawls in the public streets. John paid and expressed his purpose to settle with Tony later.

Charles E. Reed of East Lyme, while operating his automobile collided with another machine, that of Alfred Rogers doing damage that was estimated at $40. Reed explain to Rogers and agreed to settle any damage that had been occasioned. That agreement led to Reed being prosecuted for reckless driving instead of for something else. He was fined $50 and thought he got out of his trouble pretty well. Reed has been operating a car a dozen years. He is married and the father of three children, the oldest four years. He has learned the lesson now and says he will never be in court again.

"Puppy Love," a comedy drama of youth, was tried on the dog, here Friday and Saturday and was declared to be a play that will make a great hit in the big cities. It will undergo some pruning, for the production lasted more than three and a half hours and held a good sized audience till 11.30. It has merit nevertheless and when it is cut down to a production of two and a half hours will be immensely successful. It is the sort of play that will go from the first time it is seen.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen J. Brown, widow of Harrison Brown, was held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at 48 Shapley street, the services being conducted by Rev. Horatio J. Chase, pastor of Montauk avenue Baptist church. The body was forwarded to Willimantic for burial.

Russell Mockermar, of 28 Bank street; Mrs. John Enos and infant daughter, 66 Lewis street and Harris Jordan, a member of the crew of the New London line steamer Richard Peck, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital were dismissed Saturday.

Nicolo Petrizzi has sold two building lots to Joseph Grippo. One parcel is located at 77 Woodbridge street and the other is located on Jefferson avenue.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel has caused the operator's license of John Bartolucci, 26 East street, to be suspended. Commissioner Stoeckel has also caused the license of John Morgan, submarine base, recently suspended to be returned to the owner.

An automobile owned and operated by George Winc, of East Lyme, in passing through John street, near the corner of North Bank street, yesterday struck a boy of 6, who resides in that neighborhood. The child was not injured beyond minor bruises.

Albert L. Loomis and Miss Nettie E. Burdick, both of Waterford, were married Saturday afternoon at the residence of the bride by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller of Hartford, formerly of New London, are guests of Mr. Miller's mother Mrs. Mary E. Kelley, 28 Pearl street.

The condition of Police Sergeant Hick, who has been confined to his home on Blydenburg avenue several days by a severe attack of grip, is so far improved that he will resume duty within a day or two. Patrolman Patrick Sheehan, who has been ill a week at his home, 135 Crystal avenue, is recovering and today the officer was permitted to sit up for the first time since he became ill. Patrolman Sheehan, however, will not return to duty for another week.

The New Haven police have requested the New London authorities to be on the lookout for three automobiles stolen from New Haven Saturday night. One of the machines is an Essex coach, 1924 model and bearing registration 13-093; another is a Franklin sedan, 1917 model and registration, A-5929. The third is a Chevrolet coupe, 1923 model, registration A-1852. The New Haven police have also requested the local police to maintain a watch for a Lexington touring car, registration A-2168. The driver of the car late Saturday afternoon ran down and fatally injured a pedestrian, speeding away without stopping to learn the extent of the man's injuries. The pedestrian was removed to a hospital where he died a short time later.

Mrs. Raymond Manahan and son returned to their home in New York, this afternoon, concluded a week's visit with Mrs. Manahan's father, Thomas F. Salter, of Saunders street.

A Sunday paper pictured a New London bridal group, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Majewski and their wedding attendants. Mrs. Majewski was Miss Laura Snosky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Snosky of Bayonet street, New London.

Miss Madeline H. Beach, 62 Truman street, is spending several days with relatives in Providence and Boston.

MILITARY DESERTER BROUGHT FROM MANCHESTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—Theodore Danpalse, a military deserter, was arrested in Manchester Saturday afternoon and brought to New London, by Patrolman Foley, of the Manchester police force. Danpalse was made a prisoner at the New London police station and Monday will be taken to Fort Wright for court martial.

The most popular game at cold weather picnics seems to be freeze-out.

Child's Harmless Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

When a child is constipated, has wind-colic, feverish breath, coated tongue, sour stomach, or diarrhea, a half-teaspoonful of genuine "California Fig Syrup" promptly moves the poisons, gases, bile, souring food and waste right out of the little bowels. Never cramps or overacts. Babies love its delicious taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has full directions for infants and children plainly printed on bottle. Always say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

TWO FIRES IN SIX HOURS IN DAVIS & SAVARD STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—The worst fire to occur in the heart of the city's business district in three years broke out Saturday afternoon, when flames attacked the Bacon block, 132-136 State street and for a half hour it was believed the flames would make their way to the upper stories of the four story structure before subdued. It was necessary to send in two alarms, which brought every piece of the city's fire fighting equipment to the location of the blaze, which was the second within six hours, for flames also attacked the structure earlier in the day.

Shortly after 8 o'clock fire was discovered in the cellar of the clothing store of Davis & Savard and an alarm was sent in from Box 23, corner of State and North Bank streets. The firemen quickly subdued the blaze, which, it is believed, originated from the furnace. Two firemen were left in the store so as to be on hand should the fire break out again. About 1:20 o'clock, great clouds of smoke began to pour from the cellar and an alarm was sent in. By the time that the first of the fire companies arrived at the building, the flames had progressed rapidly and when entrance to the cellar from the front and rear of the structure was gained, the cellar was a roaring furnace. Chief Charles Ross and Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman directed the work of the firemen, who played four or five streams of water into the burning building, but the flames gaining headway, Chief Ross ordered another alarm sent in. The arrival of additional equipment and firemen resulted in 12 streams of water being directed upon the flames and in another hour the blaze had been conquered, but not until the entire store had been gutted or the stock damaged by water and smoke.

Water reached the basement of the Barrows notion store on the east and smoke filled the jewelry store of Perry & Stone on the west, while smoke also reached the offices in the upper stories.

When the fire was at its height and after diamonds and valuable jewelry had been hastily placed in the Perry & Stone safe, other trays of jewelry were removed to places of safety as it was feared that this store would also be attacked by the flames and all that prevented such a result, both to the jewelry store, as well as notion store was the existence of fire walls.

With the first of the fire companies to reach the fire Deputy Chief Shipman ordered the 75-foot ladder of the aerial truck raised and placed in readiness to attack the fire from the upper stories should the flames make their way to the upper floors by means of the partitions.

The Davis & Savard store will suffer great loss, although the firm carried insurance of $48,000. The damage to the Barrows store is estimated at $3,500, while the Perry & Stone loss will be trivial, if any. The damage to the building has not been determined, but will probably reach $5,000.

Throughout Saturday night and today and tonight two firemen have been kept on duty in the building.

S. F. PETERSON HOUSE IS ROBBED OF CLOTHING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 3.—The residence of Stavros F. Peterson, State street merchant, 60 Nathan Hale street, was burglarized last night, but so far as has been ascertained by the caretaker of the house, Mrs. Minnie Cuneo, only wearing apparel belonging to Mr. Peterson was taken.

Mr. Peterson has been in Europe for several months. Mrs. Cuneo, who visits the house daily, closed the residence late Saturday afternoon. During last night a thief visited the house and going to the rear, forced a window through which he climbed and was able to make a search of the house. The crook went to the upper part of the house and to Mr. Peterson's bedchamber where he collected two suits of clothes, a quantity of silk hose and silk shirts, which he carried away. These articles, it is believed, was the sole plunder taken, for the silverware and other articles that could easily be converted into cash were not disturbed, it apparently being the intent of the thief to secure wearing apparel only.

Sergeant John Cavanaugh visited the Peterson house after the burglary was discovered by Mrs. Cuneo when she visited the house about 4 o'clock, but he was unable to obtain any clue that might lead to the identity of the crook. It is the belief of the police that the crook is a fellow who had knowledge of the absence from the city of Mr. Peterson and the habit of Mrs. Cuneo in closing the house for the night, late each afternoon.

IN STAMFORD HOSPITAL AS RESULT OF STABBING

STAMFORD, Jan. 3—(AP)—Frank Lasalle of Pacific street, Stamford, is in the Stamford hospital in a critical condition with his throat and face face slashed and Joseph Valenci, also of Pacific street, is being held by police on a charge of assault with attempt to kill. The attack occurred on Beam street early today.

Lasalle was discharged from the Bridgeport jail yesterday for assault on Valenci on August 11. He was found by police early today suffering from loss of blood due to knife wounds and it is charged Valenci with being his assailant.

STEALING FROM BANK GILPATRIC WRECKED

he had a sandwich and a cup of coffee. He was seen there by a few who knew him and with whom he exchanged greetings. Where he spent Thursday night or Christmas day is not known, but late Christmas night he registered at a Putnam hotel. He was assigned a room which he remained in during all Saturday. He checked out that night in time to take the 8:40 train to Boston. According to the statement he made to District Attorney Cohen, his mission was to see and confess his misdoing to Norman B. Bean, chief federal bank examiner for this district, who was in charge of the investigation of the affairs of the First National bank after Gilpatric's attempt on his life. He went to Boston, but did not see Mr. Bean.

In the abnormal condition in which he had been, he was not sure of just what he wanted to do. Excessive drinking, insufficient food, worry over his thefts from the bank, inability to secure employment and the fear, which it is believed that he had, that federal authorities were keeping track of his movements, account for what he said "was a week of hell."

He is believed to have remained in Boston two or three days and then he Thursday night, December 31, when went to Hartford, reaching there he secured a room at the New Dom hotel. On the following day he read in the newspapers a story of his mysterious actions while in Putnam Whether that furnished the necessary incentive for him to carry out the resolution which, he says, brought him north, is not known. If it was, it took twenty-four hours to become effective, for it was not until Saturday morning that he walked into the district attorney's office and asked for Major John Buckley. Being told that he was not there, he asked to see his assistant, Mr. Cohen. The latter was just leaving the office, but when the visitor announced that he was Baker, former assistant cashier of the First National bank, at Putnam, Mr. Cohen returned to his desk and listened to the disclosures.

The statement has been printed that federal officers were watching Baker's movements, but as far as is known there were no attempts to apprehend him while he was in Putnam or at his lonely little cabin on the lake or that his movements were watched while in Boston, or Hartford. Baker insists that "no one had anything on him," that his thefts at the bank had been well covered, that Gilpatric himself knew nothing of them, nor did any federal or other officer. He had covered up his tracks so well, he said, that under the circumstances it would have been almost impossible to connect him with them.

The desire to get the worry off his mind, he is reported to have said, to be rid of the worry, to serve the penalty that the law might impose, were his impelling motives. Undoubtedly suicide was one of the means that suggested itself to him, and a paper quotes him as saying that he had a revolver with him at Alexander's lake but had thrown it into the lake. If this is true he must have dug a hole through eight inches of ice, of which there is no indication. And if the weapon is in the lake there is no need to search for it in the 100 foot depth of water that washes the shore where his shack is located.

The salient facts he told District Attorney Cohen are:

That he stole $16,300 from the First National bank during the three years prior to its closing, mostly in Liberty bonds, of which $8,600 were from the estate of J. B. McDuffy and $4,900 from the building fund of the bank.

That he was willing to tell all he knew to help clear up the mystery of what became of the $250,000 stolen from the bank, and still unaccounted for, but that he knew nothing of Gilpatric's manipulation of funds.

That nothing remained of the money he had taken; that he had lived beyond his means, and had lost some in stock investments and in bad loans.

That his wife is working in St Petersburg, that she knew nothing of his thefts from the bank or of his intention to come back to Connecticut and give himself up.

That he had thought of suicide as one means out of his trouble, but had been deterred from that by reason of the mess Gilpatric had made of his attempt.

That the past two years had been a hell to him, so that it was either suicide or surrender and that he had chosen the latter course.

Opinion here in Putnam is divided as to his professed ignorance of Gilpatric's defalcations. Some are inclined to believe that Gilpatric deceived him just as he did his board of directors and the federal bank examiners. Others hold that Gilpatric could not have taken $600,000 or $700,000 from the bank without his assistant knowing it.

There is little credence in the stories that Baker was a member of the wild parties given by the former cashier. In the first place, no one seems to know for certainly that Gilpatric indulged in these parties; they certainly were not in Putnam and from what is known of Baker's movements, he is not believed to have been in them, if there were any.

He was always "on the job" at the bank, he was courteous and well informed and very likeable. It was known that he was living beyond his income, but the $16,000 that he stole from the bank would have taken care of his extravagance, as far as the public knows.

There is also the belief expressed that Baker's confession may lead to disclosures which will involve others and account for the big amount that is not revealed in Gilpatric's transactions Federal and state authorities adhere to this theory.

Baker's surrender and subsequent confession were dramatic. He stated that he had tried to commit suicide, but lacked courage when the moment for self-destruction came. Driven by remorse and living "in hell for two years," he gave himself up and asked for quick punishment. Nevertheless he stoutly professed ignorance of Gilpatric's operations and maintained that in his own peculations he had played a lone hand.

Within half an hour Baker confessed to Mr. Cohen that he had embezzled $16,300 from the bank in the period between 1921 and 1924 and had returned from Florida to commit suicide because he had "been in hell for two years." He said that he threw away his pistol in Alexander's lake, and went to Boston. He requested that he be tried and that his punishment begin as soon as possible.

Baker resigned from the bank in October, 1924, following Gilpatric's attempt at suicide (in which the latter blinded himself for life) and the subsequent revelation of his defalcations as both a bank and state official. The former assistant cashier, who is 37 years old and has a wife, but no children, went to Florida. There he went into real estate speculation, but without success. Now he says he has not a nickel of his own.

He wrote and signed a confession in which he gave the names of the owners of the bonds he had stolen, and later signed a stenographic confession which was brief and only comprehensive enough on which to base a warrant. Because of the absence of a United States commissioner, the federal warrant will not be served until Monday, in the meantime Baker was lodged in Hartford jail under $25,000 bail, under a John Doe warrant issued by the Hartford police court.

"I don't know what became of the money," Baker told the district attorney, when he was asked what he did with the funds he had appropriated to his own use. "I bought an automobile, a Cadillac touring car, with some of it, and I've got $1,200 of worthless stock sold me by a so-called good friend. I lent or gave some money to these so-called good friends, but I wouldn't ask any of them now to go bail for me. I don't care what happens to me! My wife is in Florida and knows nothing of my thefts, or why I suddenly came north."

He enumerated his peculations, "on various occasions" as follows: Liberty bonds, $8,600, the property of J. B McDuffy; $1,700, property of H. Paradis; $600, Hawkins & Sons; $4,900 building account of the First National bank, of Putnam; $500 in small bonds, property of various individuals.

At the time of Gilpatric's attempted suicide, Baker maintained the cashier's act was a surprise to him. The statement is made that between $400,000 and $500,000 is still unaccounted for in Gilpatric's manipulations. When all the bad investments that Gilpatric made are tallied up, and the amounts that he admits having stolen, there is still missing this amount and there is no trace left of it. Other authorities place the amount at $250,000. People here have different theories to account for it. There are those who believe that he was blackmailed, that he was a victim of bootleggers, and that he made large loans to friends without security.

The news of Baker's confession was received with great relief by Probate Judge David Flagg and his lawyer. John F. Carpenter, who had the handling of the estate of John B. McDuffy from which about $9,000 in Liberty bonds had been missing from the safe deposit box in which they were kept in the bank. In his confession Baker admitted taking $8,600 of Liberty bonds from the deposit box, though there are missing, according to Mr. Carpenter, $9,500 of the bonds. The stolen bonds in this instance were originally the property of Mrs. John B. McDuffy. Mrs. McDuffy died in Putnam, about May 1, 1919, leaving an estate of $30,500, of which about $21,000 was given by her will to her husband, who was also named as her executor. John B. McDuffy committed suicide here in October, 1919, and Judge David Flagg was appointed administrator of the estate. Judge Flagg paid the expenses and legacies from securities other than Liberty bonds and placed the bonds amounting to $22,950 in a safe deposit box in the First National bank.

Baker's relatives live at Pomfret. He was one of a family of 12 children, his father, Ellery Baker, dying two years ago. None of his relatives knew of his being back from the south, until they read the story in the newspapers. Mrs Baker, his mother, went to Hartford Sunday to see him.

No word has been received from his wife from St. Petersburg.

REPORT OF AN ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP 35-YEAR-OLD WOMAN

TEMPLETON, Mass., Jan. 3—(AP)—The authorities were notified today of an apparent attempt to abduct Mrs. Hazel I. Partridge, 35 years old, living with her husband, Joseph Partridge on the Petersham road two miles from the center of this village.

She went across the road from the house to the barn last night to speak to her husband and half an hour after she had left him returned to the house and found her missing. He finally discovered her lying unconscious on the floor of the garage in the rear of the house.

She did not recover consciousness until this afternoon, when she said that on leaving the barn she saw a man standing beside the door. She tried to call her husband and remembered nothing after that.

Mrs. Partridge's mother said that last summer her daughter was attacked on a lonely road by a man who tried to carry her off. No motive was known for that attack and members of the family were unable to furnish any explanation for last night's happening.

LIEUT.-COL. HEARN WAS FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—Lieutenant Colonel Roscoe H. Hearn, recently transferred from the Canal zone to the war department in Washington was fatally injured early today when struck by an auto driven by Charles L. Van Meter of this city.

Colonel Hearn was struck while changing tires on his own machine on a road just outside the city. He was picked up immediately by Andrieus Jones, Jr., son of the senator from New Mexico, and Frank Mondell, Jr., whose car, on the way to a hospital, caught fire. Forced to abandon their machine they took Colonel Hearn into a physician's office where he died within a few minutes.

Colonel and Mrs. Hearn in company with Colonel and Mrs. Fred K. Brown of Washington, were returning to the city from the Congressional Country club when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Hearn and Mrs. Brown were treated for shock at Walter Reid hospital.

14 LIVES SAVED BY CRYING OF INFANT

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 3—(AP)—The cries of a two-year old child saved eight children and five adults from probable death by gas asphyxiation in a tenement house here today in the opinion of the police. Andrew Rebisse was awakened by the cries of Michael, youngest of his five children, but collapsed before he could reach the child.

His wife aroused Mr. and Mrs. John Kota, their three children and Stanley Kurim, another lodger. All were suffering from gas poisoning when the police and a doctor arrived, but were revived outside. The gas was found to be escaping from an open stove jet, which had been left lighted when the tenants retired.

NEW YORK STATE TO HAVE PROHIBITION LAW DRIVE

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—The drive for a state prohibition enforcement law will be launched with the convening tomorrow of the legislature.

Arthur J. Davis, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league announced today he would go to Albany to get the campaign under way.

"This year the republican controlled legislature will have another opportunity squarely to face the issue of prohibition enforcement," said Mr. Davis.

"There will be the alternative of making good the pre-election pledges of its official spokesmen by the enactment of a state enforcement law with teeth in it or of stultifying itself in the eyes of the voters."

DOWAGER QUEEN MARGHERITA HAS TURN FOR THE WORSE

BORDIGHERA, Italy, Jan. 30—(AP)—A turn for the worse developed suddenly today in the condition of Dowager Queen Margherita, mother of King Victor Emmanuel. He and Queen Elena have been summoned from Rome.

Queen Margherita was stricken Dec 16, 1925, with pulmonary pleurisy. Despite her advanced age—she celebrated her 74th birthday Nov. 20, 1815—the royal patient showed steady improvement after the initial crises and was officially declared to be convalescing.

WAS FATALLY BURNED IN CLUBHOUSE FIRE

WINDSOR, Jan. 3—(AP)—John Murphy, of the firm of Murphy and Buckley, market men of Hartford, died this afternoon from burns received in a fire which destroyed the club house opposite Station 7, on the Connecticut river here early today. Police are trying to locate two men who were believed to have spent the night with Murphy at the club house.

The fire started apparently from an over-heated stove. Murph is believed to have attempted to fight the flames and sustained the burns which proved fatal. He was discovered by a family who lived nearby when members went to investigate the fire. His automobile was standing some distance from the building, which is owned by members of the Elks Lodge of Hartford. Murphy was taken to a hospital in Hartford where he died this afternoon. The building was valued at $2,500.

PRINCE CAROL'S ABDICATION NO GREAT SURPRISE IN ATHEMS

ATHENS, Jan. 3—(AP)—The abdication of Crown Prince Carol of Rumania of his rights to the throne created no great surprise here, as it has long been known that his marriage to Princess Helen, of Greece, was unhappy. The newspaper feature Carol's action but refrain from commenting on Princess Helen's position. She is popular here and much sympathy has been felt for her in her domestic troubles.

It is understood that she will remain at the Rumanian court and devote herself to bringing up her little son, Michael.

Interest in the Greek royal family however, has waned in royalist circles, since the death of Constantine who was their idol.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

The "after the holiday" program that opens at the Broadway Theatre today, still holds up the high standard set during the holiday season.

The B. F. Keith vaudeville still is supreme and no doubt always will hold sway above all others in town.

The Three Worths offer a musical revue, with songs, dances and volumes of music. Young and Mayne say their offering is all in fun when all is said and done. The Ryan Sisters, two clever Colleens represent all that is vivacious, pert and pretty. Beck and Ferguson are Joy Dispensers who radiate real good cheer. Zawater and DeVaro close with a fast and comical routine of gymnastic stunts.

There arrived a photoplay at the Broadway Theatre yesterday for a stay of three days that will not for a long time be rivaled for its unusually brilliant array of stars and splendid story entitled "Lying Wives". A more fascinating coterie of screen satellites can not be imagined than the following: Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Edna Murphy, Niles Welch, J. Barney Sherry, and many others.

"Lying Wives," is a dramatic presentment of troubled lives. The screen production is from an original story by Ivan Abramson who is also responsible for the masterly direction. This filmplay is a fast moving, thrilling drama that will satisfy everyone.

SACRAMENTAL WINE WAS STOLEN IN SHELTON

SHELTON, Jan. 3—(AP)—In preparing for the celebration of holy communion at the 8 o'clock service this morning, Rev. Frank S. Morehouse, of the Church of the Good Shepherd, discovered that the strong box in which the sacramental wine is kept had been broken into and the wine stolen.

No clue as to the identity of the thief could be found but Miss Bernice Thompson, who lives near the church, stated that she saw a stranger wearing a cap and a blue overcoat enter the church through the front door Friday afternoon and leave in a short time with a bundle under his arm.

ESCAPED FROM COURT BY DIVING THROUGH WINDOW

SEYMOUR, Jan. 3—(AP)—Late today police had not located Stanley Kosses who yesterday escaped from the town court by diving through a window taking the pane and sash with him. He had been arraigned on a non-support charge and made his escape while the judge and police officer were out of the room signing papers connected with the case.

Even the aristocratic passenger on a sleeping car doesn't object to a lowly berth.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—(AP)—Establishment of a new high record for New York bank clearings of approximately one and three-quarters billion dollars and a bullish demonstration in the motor shares on the New York stock exchange today provided an auspicious opening of the new year in Wall street. All commodity markets were closed for the day, but Thursday's final cotton quotations were 35 to 75 points above those of the preceding Saturday, while wheat futures showed a net loss of 1 to 3-4 cents on the week.

New financing is expected to be unusually heavy in the first quarter of the new year. Several large railroad and industrial stock offerings are in prospect, one of the largest being that of the National Cash Register company which is expected early next week. Some of the large railroads also are reported to be contemplating new financing in stock instead of in bonds or notes as in previous years.

Call money held firm at six per cent. all week, but an easier tendency is expected next week when the large dividend and interest payments find their way back to the banks.

Foreign exchange rates held steady with trading unusually light in volume.

BERLIN STREET CARS TO HAVE MORE STEPS

Steps leading to the platforms of Berlin street cars were not intended for the modern short and narrow skirts the street car management finds. Complaints have poured into the company's office from women, reporting that men have become surprisingly willing to allow members of the fair sex to board cars first. The women insist that the cars should have three short steps instead of two high ones. The company has announced that 500 new cars which have been ordered will have three steps. As a further concession to modern fashion the rear and front platforms will also be built lower.

Tuberculosis in Cattle

Records of the United States meat inspection service during the last fiscal year show that tuberculosis continues to be the most serious and widespread disease affecting cattle and swine at time of slaughter. These two kinds of stock constitute the great bulk of food animals in the United States. The results of post-mortem inspection show that tuberculosis was responsible for considerably more condemnations than all other diseases and ailments combined. This fact, based on the slaughter of approximately 76,000,000 food animals of all kinds, merits the attention of livestock producers. It indicates the necessity for continuing the campaign to eradicate tuberculosis with the utmost vigor.

RULES FOR YOUNG WRITERS.

1—Write plainly on one side of the paper.

2—Use pen and ink, not pencil.

3—Short and pointed articles will be given preference. Do not use over 250 words.

4—Original stories or letters only will be used.

5—Write your name, age and address plainly at the bottom of the story.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

Another Crumbling Monarchy

With golf and tennis for a tonic
With daily sessions in the gym,
The girls are growing Amazonic,
Deep chested, tall and strong of limb,
Their lack of long and flowing tresses
Reveals their lithe, athletic necks.
And it is plain, as time progresses,
That they will be the sterner sex.

No more a girl need lack a lover:
She'll fix some fellow with a glance,
And if he does not run to cover
He will not have half a chance.
Well may the "movie" actor quaver
When he discovers her look
That he has gained a lady's favor—
Henceforth he'll stay at home and cook.

This may seem weird and unromantic,
And man, so long untamed and free,
Will very soon be driven frantic
To think about what's bound to be.
To have to wait for her to woo him.
To be a wallflower at a ball,
While jealous thrills go surging through him—
These things will not suit him at all.

But it has been his occupation,
Since first the cave man clubbed his spouse,
To be the lord of all creation
And master of his hearth and house.
So, though it hardly will divert him
To watch the passing of his sway,
It's fair to say it will not hurt him
To let the ladies have their day.

—By James J. Montague in the New York Herald-Tribune.

The Lady the Squirrels Love

She walks alone in the dim, cool wood,
The Lady the Squirrels love,
They watch for a glimpse of her dove-gray gown
From the leafy boughs above.
They cluster round on the flower-starred ground
To feed from her gentle hands,
Encompassed by love that knows not fear
The Squirrels' sweet Lady stands.

Its softest carpet the green moss spreads,
For her dainty feet to tread,
The arching boughs form a canopy,
To shelter her lovely head,
And the birds' happy songs of welcome
Thrill clear from their tiny beaks,
When kind words of tender compassion
The Squirrels' sweet Lady speaks.

All children of Life she holds most dear,
Rejoiceth when they are glad,
She shares in their pains and sorrowings,
And weepeth when they are sad.
Her hazen eyes shine with love divine,
And pity for all that lives;
Full measure of these, the greatest gifts,
The Squirrel's loved Lady gives.

I think when her sun sinks in the West,
And her life's long journey ends,
She will till reach out with anxious care
To comfort her little friends.
And a cloud of furry witnesses
Who wait in the sky above;
Will welcome with joyful gratitude
The Lady the Squirrels love.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

From all the nice letters being received it is evident that Christmas and New Year's were indeed happy days for members of the Wide Awake Circle. Almost every letter tells of delightful entertainments, pleasing gifts, family parties and many other good things and every writer has a pleasing story to tell.

Surely there are no other days in the year which mean so much to us, not from the standpoint of things we gain, gifts we receive or good times we have, but from the standpoint of teaching us lessons of service, goodwill, willingness to make others happy and the ability to do these things.

Members of the Wide Awake circle have a fine opportunity to become acquainted with other young people, not by personal contact but through the medium of letter writing. A member sends in a story to the circle and it is read by other members. Thus we all become friends and learn to know each others likes and dislikes.

Perhaps some of us see in these messages some things which we lack. Some member has a fault which he or she would gladly correct if it were called to their attention. A Wide Awake member in a letter brings this fault to our attention and we have the opportunity to rid ourselves of it once and for all.

Then there is the companionship of letters, we seem nearer together, what happens to one member interests all and soon we are one big family, all interested in hearing what happiness or pleasure has come to another member.

In starting the new year of 1926 let us resolve to write of our good times. Seek to correct our faults as they are called to our attention in letters from other members, and, in general, become one big family of brothers and sisters, each striving for the common good of the other.

Parents will quickly note the results of changes for the better in character and habits and thus we shall carry the benefits of the circle to the older people and they shall be compelled to say, "Surely the Wide Awakes are boys and girls who are striving to be what we would have them be, young people destined to grow up and become leaders in their generation."

NEURITIS, PAIN, RHEUMATISM

"Heet" Relieves Instantly

With applicator attached to cork, just brush "Heet" over the pain area, whether in arms, elbows, shoulders, feet, knees, legs, back, neck or body. Instantly, you feel this harmless, glorious, penetrating heat draw the pain, soreness and stiffness right out of the aching or swollen joint, muscle or nerve. Besides, "Heet" scatters the congestion and establishes a cure.

"Heet" contains two soothing, penetrating ingredients, too expensive to use in ordinary liniments or analgesics. "Heet" is a clean, pleasant liquid; doesn't stain, blister or irritate the skin and costs only 60 cents at any drug store.

FIRE IN OCCUM HOUSE SHOWS SOOT IN CHIMNEY UP TO SECOND STORY

Negligence by the owner in failing to rid the chimney of its soot was the cause of a chimney fire in the house of Z. Babbitt, Limerick, Occum, Sunday morning. The blaze was noticed by Mr. Babbitt and word was sent to the Taftville fire department, No. 2, at 9:15 o'clock. Fifteen gallons of chemical were used in quenching the blaze, which was confined to the chimney and little damage resulted. After the fire 30 pails of soot were taken from the chimney, the soot having reached to the second story in the chimney. The building was a two and a half story wooden structure.

Chimney Fire In Greenville

Engine No. 3 of Greenville and Squad A of the Central Fire station were called out at 8:51 o'clock Saturday night for a chimney fire at the home of John Erwin of No. 279 Central avenue. Little damage was caused by the fire and flames were extinguished with six gallons of chemical. The house is a two story frame structure and is owned by Mr. Erwin.

NO TIME EXTENSION ON AUTOMOBILE MARKERS

The state motor vehicle department announced Friday that no extension of time for the use of 1925 automobile markers will be requested by the department this year. Registrations for 1926 have been available at the department and all its branch offices since October 1 and it is considered that all who desired markers at the outset of the New Year have had ample opportunity to get them.

At the same time, the Connecticut department announced the receipt of official notice from the motor vehicle departments of New Jersey and Pennsylvania that 1925 markers of those states are not to be recognized after December 31, 1925. Since these states have reciprocal relations with Connecticut, police of this state will be expected to arrest anyone found to be operating cars with 1925 markers of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, as well as Connecticut. On the strength of a previous announcement, cars bearing 1925 markers of New Hampshire and Vermont will also be halted by the Connecticut police.

The Connecticut state law makes it illegal to use the plate of any year after midnight of December 31 of that year. In some years past, however, owing to unavoidable congestion in the issuance of registrations, the department has found it necessary to ask the several police departments to recognize old markers up to a given date of the new year. That practice is not considered necessary this year.

The state of Delaware has asked Connecticut authorities to recognise 1925 plates of that state up to January 5, 1926, and the request has been granted.

TESTIMONIAL PLANNED FOR REV. JOHN J. KEANE

At a general meeting of parishioners of St. Michael's church, Pawcatuck, held Tuesday evening, plans were formulated to hold a reception in honor of Rev. J. J. Keane, January 10. Fr. Keane is now assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church in New Britain, having been transferred there a few weeks ago after serving six years as curate at St. Michael's church.

In order that his host of friends may be enabled to be present at the reception, the use of the Central theatre has been granted the committee in charge by David Novogrod.

An entertaining programme is being arranged. There will be several well known speakers present and a number of musical numbers are being arranged by Mrs. Robert Hughes.

As a testimonial to Father Keane for the commendable work he accomplished while assistant pastor of St. Michael's his former parishioners will present him a purse of gold.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Thomas Purtill, chairman, Mrs. Michael O'Connell, Miss M. Harvey, Daniel Cogan, Mrs. John Marr, Miss Lucy Crowley, Geo. P. Chapman, Mrs. Robert Hughes, C. Leo Higgins and Michael Speilman.

POLISH CITIZENS' CLUB WILL INSTRUCT CANDIDATES

About 600 members of the Polish citizen's club attended the annual meeting, held Thursday night at Pulaski hall, North Main street. Various matters of importance were brought to the attention of the club and there were speeches by several prominent Polish residents.

The members voted to hold evening sessions for the purpose of instructing all future candidates for American citizenship.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

OUTLAW PUPPIES SHOT AT EASTERN POINT

Yielding to the temptation of man made traps, three dogs which have lived the wild life of foxes in the wooded haunts of Eastern Point, Groton, and have been instrumental in the killing of several score of chickens were drawn into the open Friday night and shot down by Dog Warden Charles Yering, who, in company with Harold Nash and Carlyle Griswold, of Groton, scoured the woods all day. One of the dogs was found in a steel trap, set for that purpose. The two others were shot while fleeing to cover.

The three dogs are the offspring of Old Bessie, a mongrel female, which reared her young ones in the woods of Eastern Point where she has made her home since early spring. Although the authorities are making desperate effort to bag the old dog who is feared more than foxes, there is little indication at present that she will be caught; for some time to come.

Frauds Rob Poor Boxes.

The Catholic Transcript warns residents of the state that poor box thieves are again plying their trade in Connecticut. Robberies were reported last week at both St. Charles' and St. Mary's churches, Bridgeport, where the poor boxes were rifled in one day, with only a short interval elapsing between the two thefts. The fraternity seems to have adopted a new scheme, as its representative in the present instances had disguised himself as a clergyman, wearing a Roman collar, and to all appearances a member of the cloth. He may transfer his operations to other cities in the state and is possibly the same person who ransacked two rectories in Brooklyn a short time ago.

Entertained at Social Evening.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dunlon, Twelfth street, Wednesday evening, a party of twelve friends were entertained. Alfred Spears pleased with a programme of splendid music over his radio. A buffet lunch was served by Mrs. Dunlon, who was assisted by her sister-in-law, Mrs. D. McSheffrey.

HELD RELIGIOUS SERVICE FOR MEN AT JAIL

Sunday morning at 9:15 o'clock, representatives of the local Y. M. C. A., held a religious service at the county jail. Hugh Kinder played the piano for the hymns and also rendered, wonderfully, impressive vocal solos, especially touching was the selection, "Jesus Whispers." Edmund A. Prentice read the scriptures and offered an earnest prayer. Secretary Edwin Hill gave the talk to the men, taking for his text, "In the beginning," from the first chapter of Genesis; the speaker said in part: "In the beginning the earth was void and dark, and the very first thing God created was the most needed thing at that time and that was light. We don't half appreciate light; without it we could not live. After the first day's creation, God said, 'It is good' and after each day's creation he spake a similar word. The last creation of God in that far back time, was man, and just think of it God said, 'let us create man in our own image.' What a contrast between what we were and what many of us are; how we have stained our lives, every time a man uses profanity he stains his life; every time a man drinks rum he terribly stains his life, and every time a man sells his neighbor the dnnable stuff, he not only stains his own life but he helps to damn another's soul. Many men refuse to walk in the light; in other words many men refuse to walk with Jesus Christ who was and is the light of the world; that is why you men are here as prisoners. This is the dark side of the picture, but thank God there is a bright side; Paul wrote, 'Forgetting the things that are behind, I press on to the things that are before.' That first beginning was very good; we have spoiled it, but there can be another beginning so far, as you are concerned if you will swing into line with the will of God. Men have tried many, many ways to reform; they have signed pledges galore and they have tried various ways to change their lives, but they have utterly failed. There is but one way for a man to leave his old sinful life and become a true noble man, and that is by letting Jesus Christ into his life. On one occasion, Dwight L. Moody said to his little son, Willie, on a slippery day, 'Willie, take father's hand, you will fall,' but Willie refused saying, 'I can get along myself,' but Willie soon slipped down and hurt himself, and then he ran quickly to father and eagerly grasped his hand. Men, you have been walking the slippery ways of the devil, and you have fallen again and again; you have been running your life without having hold of the Heavenly Father's hand. That hand is stretched out to you today and if you are wise you will grasp it by faith just now. Oh men, take God into your lives today and make this new year the happiest of your history; will you do it and do it now?"

About twenty men, in an evidently sincere manner, asked that they might be prayed for that their lives might be changed.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME AT Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY MEETING

At 4 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, an audience assembled and the meeting was one of the best in recent months.

Hymns were sung, the scripture read, and Hugh Kinder rendered most impressively, "Jesus Whispers," by request, and he was loudly applauded.

Rev. J. H. Graham offered the prayer.

The musical part of the meeting was specially attractive, largely because of the programme rendered by Pietro Mordella, of Boston, the piano-accordion artist, who simply captivated his audience with his various selections, beautifully rendered, each one of which met with enthusiastic approval. His numbers included, overture, Poet and Peasant; Bacarolle, by Hoffman; "Pal of My Cradle Days"; medley of Southern Airs; "The Lost Chord", and "The Rosary." His entire programme was unusually impressive.

Rev. J. H. Graham delivered a most interesting and helpful address on "Harmony." He spoke of the fact that we may not all be able to play the instrument or to render acceptably vocal music, but we can all have harmony in our souls. Jesus said, "Come unto me and I will give you rest," and this suggests the finest harmony. Some seem to have what might be called a divided personality; conscience wills one thing while desire wills another and there is turmoil in the life. What a majestic thing harmony is, and we can all have it if we will; if we can take all the elements of our lives and somehow harmonize them into one glorious whole, what a wonderful life will become. We must have some overmastering passion. Paul had such a passion and that passion was a person, and that person was Jesus Christ. It is a mistake ever to be satisfied; we must ever and anon desire to achieve something better with the passing days; I wish for you all a most happy New Year, especially in your endeavor to follow the leadership of the great Master.

Lewis E. Church and Emery H. Davis acted as ushers of the meeting.

INVITATIONS FOR CONFERENCE ON TOBACCO HOLIDAY

HARTFORD, Jan. 2—Eleven different speakers will outline different aspects of the problem of the proposed "tobacco holiday" in the Connecticut valley for 1926, at the all-day conference which has been called by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce and which will be held in the assembly hall of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance company here, next Monday.

An invitation to attend the conference has been sent to chambers of commerce and city officials in the principal cities from Middletown, Connecticut, to Greenfield, Massachusetts —including Hartford, New Britain, Middletown, Manchester, Rockville, Thompsonville, Windsor Locks, Windsor, East Hartford, West Hartford, Glastonbury, Portland and Unionville in Connecticut; and in Massachusetts, to Springfield, Holyoke, Northampton, Greenfield, Westfield, Chicopee, West Springfield and the Massachusetts state Chamber of Commerce.

Representatives of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Growers' association, of the banking interests concerned with the tobacco industry, of the market gardeners, of the Hartford County Farm bureau, of the Connecticut Agricultural college, the Massachusetts State Agricultural college and the members of the state chamber's committee on agriculture have also been invited to attend the conference.

Feel Splendid! Nicest Laxative, "Cascarets" 10c

Don't stay headachy, dizzy, bilious, constipated, sick!

One or two pleasant candy-like "Cascarets" taken any time will mildly stimulate your liver and start your bowels. Then you will both look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed. Your head will be clear, stomach sweet, tongue pink and your skin rosy.

Because "Cascarets" never gripe or sicken, it has become the largest selling laxative in the world.

Directions for men, women, children on each box—any druggist.

Reception For Fall River Visitor

Miss Gertrude Moran of Fall River, formerly of Norwich, spent the week end at the home of her brother Harold E. Moran of 50 St. Regis avenue. A reception was held New Year's night for her and her many friends. Refreshments were served, games were played and radio music was enjoyed.

NORWICH TOWN

The encouraging reports submitted from the various branches of the First Congregational church at its annual business meeting New Year's afternoon, gave evidence that this church is still in a prosperous condition. The beloved pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, presided over the meeting which was called at 3 o'clock, also read the Scriptures. A former pastor, Rev. Charles A. Northrop, of Danbury, offered prayer; and at the social gathering of the parish brought personal greetings. For several years past, Rev. Mr. Northrop has favored occasions of this kind with a beautiful letter, usually read by the present pastor, during the business meeting. That Mr Northrop was privileged to be present and convey the feelings of his heart and soul to former parishioners and friends was an appreciated favor and he was warmly received. Herbert L. Yerrington, clerk, read the minutes of the last meeting, also rendered his report in detail, covering the many activities of the church during the year just closed. This was followed by the report of the treasurer of benevolences, Henry T. Frazier. Others who contributed their report for 1925, were the following: For the Sunday school (main department) Frank E. Sterry, secretary and treasurer; home department, Miss J. G. Benney, superintendent; one elm class, Miss Mabel Corrigeux, secretary; C. I. C. class, Miss Victoria St. Martin, secretary, Miss Rose Durr, secretary protem; W. I. Ts., Arthur Avery, secretary; True Blue class, Miss Helen Schwenk, secretary; men's forum, Henry T. Frazier, secretary; drop-in-class, Mrs Dwight W. Avery, secretary; Young People's society of Christian Endeavor (senior department) Miss Louise Avery, recording secretary; (junior department) Miss Ruth Manning, secretary. Missionary societies, Lathrop Memorial foreign, Miss Jennie Case, secretary; Home missionary, Mrs. Sarah W. Chapin, secretary; cradle roll, Miss Marion L. Bailey, secretary. Ever Ready circle of the King's Daughters, Miss J. C. Benney, secretary; Church Improvement society, Mrs. Henry T. Frazier, treasurer; pastor's report, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey. The election of officers was as follows: H. L. Yerrington, to succeed himself as clerk; Henry T. Frazier, to succeed himself as treasurer and accountant. Committees elected were: Missionary, Miss Susan C. Hyde, Mrs. H. L. Yerrington, Miss Mabelle Scott, Mrs. H. T. Frazier; reception and welcoming (old board reelected) Mrs. Orrin F. Merry, Miss Jennie L. Congdon, Miss Lillian Browning, Miss Rose Durr, Dwight W. Avery and Henry T. Frazier. George F. Hyde was elected chairman of the board of ushers, to choose his assistants, different ones being designated to serve each month throughout the year. Delegates to attend conferences were: Rev. Charles E. Reeves, Mrs Charles E. Reeves and Herbert L Yerrington.

The report of the Sunday school showed that there had been a 93 per cent. attendance. The smallest attendance, 46, was on July 26th., while the largest attendance, 157, was December 6th. The collections from the school for the year were $238.19, which with money received from several other sources connected with the church, brings the total up to more than $300. The school has contributed to the amount of $130.68 for supplies, Lincoln day, Fanny Crosby memorial, New London county association, etc.; also for missions $130.00, making a total of $260.68. After all expenses were paid, the amount left over plus the balance of the preceding year, left a substantial balance in the treasury. The missions contributed to include generous amounts to Frederick J Working, located in the south; Rev E. H. Smith, China; New London county association, Piedmont college Christmas fund for aged ministers, Miss Ruth Beebe, Athens, Alabama, Northland, McAll missions, etc. The officers elected were: Superintendent, Dwight W. Avery; first assistant, Henry T. Frazier; second assistant, Clyde M. Beebe; secretary, Frank E. Sterry; assistant secretary and treasurer, then Miss Helen Avery, now, Mrs. Harold Bailey, of Hartford; librarian; Frank S. Avery; assistant librarian, Miss J. G. Bonney; library committee, Miss J. M. Case, Mrs. Charles Learned, Miss Jennie L. Congdon; home department, Miss Bonney; executive, committee, Rev. G. F. Bailey, Dwight W. Avery, Frank E. Sterry; organist, H. L. Yerrington; chorister, Miss Bessie M. Grant. The number of pupils in the main room is 95, primary department 33, home department 20, drop-in-class 25, men's forum 12, making a total of 183. At the beginning of 1925 the home department of the First Congregational Sunday school numbered 33. During the year two have passed on, Mrs. William Kinney and Mrs. Cyrus Chapman. Much interest is shown in the quarterlies, and dues have been promptly paid. Extracts from the reports of the organized classes were as follows: One elm class—On February 3rd., a business meeting was held at the home of the president, Miss Ida Beebe, when officers were elected and installed for the year, during which two members united with the class. Two members of the class, Mrs. Hollis French (Ruth Avery) of New York state, and Mrs. Harold Bailey (Helen Avery) of Hartford, were married June 30th. This class has conbrituted in many ways in the interests of the Sunday school, also gave $10 to the Near East Relief For the lessons during the year, the theme for study was—How Jesus Met Life's Problems. The C. I. C. class—During the year a social was held in the chapel in February, also two picnics in the summer, one at Mohegan park, the other at Ocean beach, with basket lunches, which were enjoyed by all. In December, this class with the True Blue class, gave two plays, dividing the proceeds. The members of the C. I. C's., regret exceedingly the loss of its former teacher, Miss Louise Hopping, who was obliged to leave due to ill health; and have cordially received into the class as teacher, Mrs. Carlos A. Ricker.

The W. I. Ts., have held three committee meetings. The early part of the year the annual business meeting with election of officers, was held at the home of the leader, Miss Jessie E. Hyde. This class, after finishing the book, "How Jesus Met Life's Problems," selected its own topics for discussion during the summer; and in the fall took up the Sunday school subjects as found in the Christian Endeavor World. An enjoyable outing was held in May, at the home of a member, Raymond Smith, of Mystic, while the annual picnic was held at Ocean beach. A memorable event took place in May when the W. I. Ts., purchased a permanent marker for the memorial tree in honor of William Durr, a hero of the World war, and a member of the class. This was placed in position Memorial day. The last event for 1925, was the Christmas party with nineteen present at Miss Hyde's home, December 15th.

True Blue class—Nearly perfect attendance throughout the year is the record of this class, with the exception of three members who are attending colleges out of town. The regular Sunday collection is turned over to the school treasury, while from an individual penny collection a good amount was raised. Business and social meetings have been held at the homes of members. A fairwell social with gifts for the young women leaving to resume their school work, was given in September. A generous contribution was given to the Christmas tree entertainment fund.

The Men's forum has met regularly during the year with a membership of about 12, continuing the study of the text book, "The Truth About the Bible." Although disbursements have been somewhat large, one item of $83.70, being presented to the chapel repair fund, there is still a generous amount remaining in the treasury. With the assistance of others, the class on two different occasions, successfully presented a mock trial netting $103.70.

Drop-in class—Five important meetings have been held at the parsonage to discuss different branches of work. From a food sale held in March, $25 was realized. A gift of money and a number of books were donated to Miss Beard's school, in Montgomery, Alabama, as the library at this school was destroyed by fire. Nearly $10 was made by a cafeteria supper, the difference, however, being added to make the above amount, which was given for the new floor laid in the chapel parlor. This class has given the Sunday school $30, to help defray expenses, also raised $13 for christmas charity, from which two families were made happy with food, clothing, etc. Flowers have been sent to the sick and the early part of the year, two mothers were most grateful for infants' apparel presented by the class. The attendance during the year was good and collections generous. The resignation of the teacher, Miss Jennie L. Congdon was reported with regret.

COURT DECISION ADVERSE TO DOHENY OIL INTERESTS

United States Court of Appeals Sustains Action of U. S. District Court in Los Angeles in Ordering Cancellation of Lease Holds in Naval Oil Reserve No. 1 in California—Denies Relief For Work Performed at the Pearl Harbor Oil Station at Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4—(AP)—A decision, which if upheld by the United States supreme court, will strip the Edward L. Doheny interests of all of their protested lease holds in Naval Oil Reserve Number One, in California, and deny them any relief for work performed in such reserves and at the Pearl Harbor oil station at Honolulu, was handed down here today by the [illegible] circuit court of appeals.

The court upheld the action of the United States district court in Los Angeles, in ordering the cancellation of the leaseholds in questions on the ground that they were obtained through conspiracy and collusion.

The court, however, reserved the finding of the trial court that the Pan American Petroleum and Transportation company, the lessees, should be compensated by $11,786,928 for work done in establishing the Pearl Harbor oil base and for exploration and drilling work in the Elk Hills fields. The local point of the controversy in effect the court held that if the leases themselves were obtained through an illegal exchange of any sort, the lessees most certainly were not entitled to the return of any moneys expended as an outgrowth of such illegal act.

COURT DECISION GIVES WARNING TO "JAYWALKERS"

BRIDGEPORT, Jan. 4—(AP)—A salutary warning to "jay walkers" is contained in a supreme court decision, written by Justice Curtis, and directing a new trial be held in the case of Stephen Hizam, Bridgeport, against Dr. Chester E. Blackman, of Bridgeport.

Hizam was injured by an automobile driven by Dr. Blackman, December 5, 1924, as he was crossing Noble avenue diagonally, that is, not on a crosswalk but in a northeasterly direction across the vehicular roadway. A jury awarded Hizam $4,000. The supreme court has set the verdict aside.

"When a pedestrian," says Justice Curtis, "may ordinarily cross a street at any place, it is the law that in doing so he is bound to exercise care commensurate to the increased danger incident to being in a place where pedestrians do not usually go, and consequently where drivers need not take the same precaution in anticipatoin of their presence that they are required to take at regular crossings."

"The law is firmly established," the decision continues, "that it was Hizam's duty to exercise ordinary care both to avoid dangers known to him and to discover dangers or conditions of danger to which he might become exposed and in the performance of that duty to be watchful of his surroundings and of the way in which he was going."

"To determine whether Hizam was negligent he must be held to have been required to act upon what he should have known as well as upon what he knew * * * We think that the court (in the charge to the jury) should have stated definitely that the duty of using due care in the situation supposed required a greater degree of care on Hizam's part than that required of him at a cross walk * * *."

ANNUAL MEETING OF CONN. MILK PRODUCERS

HARTFORD, Jan. 4—(AP)—The Connecticut Milk Producers' association in annual meeting at the office in this city today re-elected all officers and the complete board of directors. The officers elected were: President, Robert C. Mitchell, Southbury; vice president, Charles P. Viets, East Granby; secretary, George W. Harris, Wethersfield; treasurer, J. Arthur Sherwood, Long Hill; general manager, Clifford E. Hough, treasurer; executive board, Robert C. Mitchell, Charles P. Viets, S. McLean Buckingham, Watertown; C. Daniel Way, Andover, and George W. Trenchard, Middlefield.

In addition to the officers, the following directors were re-elected: R. J. Averill, Washington Depot; Jason Brainerd, Woodbridge; G. A. Collins, Bozrah; Bruce F. Fieneman, Farmington; A. H. Gardner, Middletown; E. F. Gillette, Bristol; George W. Harris Wethersfield; H. A. Healey, Seymour, Charles N. Le Geyt, Markhamated; Truman B. Miller, Farmington; B. B Norton, Cheshire; D. E. Parmalee, Durham; Philo T. Platt, Bethel; C. B. Pomeroy, Willimantic; John Rank, East Hampton; L. H. Thompson, Woodbury; W. L. Wetmore, Winsted.

Guest speakers at the meeting were C. P. Bull, of Lansing, Mich., president of the Milk Producers' association of that state, and also of the National Dairy union, and D. L. James, specialist in co-operative marketing of dairy products for the United States department of agriculture.

20TH CENTURY LIMITED STRUCK WABASH TRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 4—(AP)—A dozen persons were bruised and injured and scores of passengers were frightened today when the sixth section of the Twentieth Century Limited, crack flyer of the New York railroad, struck the rear end of an empty Wabash train here. The Wabash train backed into the flyer in a fog, derailing two sleeping cars and the engine and one car of the Century.

George Stocker, engineer of the Century, claimed he had been given a clear track.

POPE MAKES 1926 JUBILEE YEAR FOR ENTIRE WORLD

ROME, Jan. 4—(AP)—Pope Pius issued a bull today pronouncing the year 1926 a jubilee year for the entire world.

His holiness' pronouncement means that the conditions which during the holy year of 1925 applied to Rome only with respect to holy year indulgences will apply during the present year to the entire world. Faithful Catholics will be considered to have performed the same duties by visiting four churches in their neighborhood as if they had last year visited the four basilicas of Rome.

MELLON URGES APPROVAL OF WAR DEBT SETTLEMENTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—(AP)—Approval of the war debt settlements negotiated during the summer with Italy Belgium and other nations by the debt commission, "in the interests of those American producers who must have a foreign market able to pay," was urged by Secretary Mellon today before the house ways and means committee.

Mr. Mellon discussed in detail the negotiations and told the committee that "the entire foreign debt is not worth as much to the American people in dollars and cents as a prosperous Europe as a customer." He described the settlements as just and, "in the real interests of our country."

Favorable report to the house on the agreements is expected to be ordered tomorrow by the committee, and Chairman Green announced he would ask for their consideration before the end of the week, after which they must be approved by the senate.

The commission was guided largely, Mr. Mellon told the committee, by the principle of "capacity of the debtor nations to pay." While the Belgian and Italian settlements did not conform to the terms of the British settlement, the secretary said he wanted "to make clear that the British-American settlement is one based on capacity to pay, and not a fixed formula to which all others, irrespective of capacity, must conform, and that a creditor is free to settle with its debtors as it may choose."

"If the debtor is to be able to pay and if the creditor is to receive anything," he said, "a settlement fair to both countries is essential."

BURGOMASTER'S PLAN FOR THE SAFETY OF SKATERS

ROSSDORF, Germany, Jan. 4—(AP)—The people of Rossdorf are claiming the year's first safety-first prize for their burgomaster.

Hoping to popularize himself with the skaters of the town—and most of the voters skate—the burgomaster cleaned the village bell and announced that the community's large outdoor swimming pool was frozen and ready for skating. But skating enthusiasts on reaching the pool found the ice sagged and cracked so that it touched the bottom of the pool.

The burgomaster explained that he had drained all the water out to prevent drowning should any one break through.

FORD BUYS 1400 ACRES FOR FLYING TERMINAL

CHICAGO, Jan. 4—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner tonight says the Ford Motor interests have purchased 1,400 acres of land in the Hammon-Maywood territory contiguous to the Illinois-Indiana state line to to be used for a large flying terminal.

Located on the site will be equipment for the manufacture, assembly and testing of airplanes on a wholesale scale says the newspaper. In connection with the extension of the Ford airlines throughout the west. The attached flying field will be adequate for the accommodation of large flights of planes.

NEW HAVEN KLANSMEN ANNOUNCE DISSOLUTION

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 4—(AP)—Arthur J Mann, secretary of the New Haven chapter, of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, announced today the dissolution of that body, stating that a decision to disband was reached at a council of the New Haven klansmen held on December 22.

In a letter Mr. Mann has addressed to the national vice president of the organization, he attacks what he characterizes as the "corruption and demoralization of the klan" and criticises the aims and purposes of the organization. The klan is termed "both un-American and anti-American," in Mr. Mann's letter.

STEAMER COMMONWEALTH COLLIDED WITH CAR FLOAT

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(AP)—After colliding with a railroad car float off North Brother island in Long Island sound and seriously damaging her hull, the steamer Commonwealth of the Fall River line which left late this afternoon for Fall River, Mass., with 200 passengers aboard, returned tonight to its North River pier.

There was no disorder among the passengers. The Commonwealth is the largest of the Fall River steamers, being a two-deck, side-wheeler, listed at 5,980 gross tons, being 457 feet in length.

TO FIGHT CONDEMNATION OF LIQUOR SCHOONER

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 4—(AP)—Condemnation of the schooner Pesaquid, which was seized with 3,500 cases of liquor aboard, off Block Island last March, will be fought by the National Shipping and Forwarding company, of Montreal, according to a claim petition filed in federal court today. The Montreal firm claims that the schooner drifted during stress of storm and was entitled to protection of an American port.

Bank of Portugal Scandal

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 4—(AP)—The director of the Oporto branch of the bank of Portugal was arrested today, charged with being implicated in the bank note scandal which developed several weeks ago and which prompted the Bank of Portugal to call in all 500-escudo notes. The bank's action came after the discovery of alleged fraudulent dealings in forged bills of that denomination by the recently opened Angola and Metropole bank.

IRVING BERLIN WEDS MISS ELLEN MACKAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(AP)—Irving Berlin, the Russian immigrant, and former Bowery saloon waiter who later became a popular song writer and producer of revues, was married today to Miss Ellen Mackay, daughter of Clarence H. Mackay, head of the Postal Telegraph company, by Deputy City Clerk McCormick in the municipal building.

When informed of the marriage, Mr. Mackay, prominent layman in the Roman Catholic church, issued a statement asserting the wedding "was a complete surprise and was without my knowledge or consent. Beyond that I have nothing to say."

Three years ago, Miss Mackay who is now 22 years old, made her debut in society. Early last year she and her father denied rumors that she was engaged to Berlin. In a recent magazine article Miss Mackay said that society girls were frequenting cabarets because they wanted privacy from "unattractive people" often found in society. In another article she said that modern society girls marry as they choose "without chasing eligible young men."

The only witnesses at the wedding were Ben Bloom and Mr. and Mrs. Max Winslow. Neither Berlin nor his wife gave any information as to where they would spend their honeymoon. Berlin gave his age as 37.

Soon after arriving in this country, a penniless and friendless immigrant boy, Berlin was employed as a waiter in "Nigger Mike" Sauller's saloon in the bowery. In addition to being a carrier of loaded trays of beer, Berlin sang to keep the patrons amused. He soon began to write songs, and when the first measure of success reached him, he changed his name from Baline to Berlin and forsook the bowery.

Berlin's first wife died in 1913. In memory of her he wrote one of his most popular songs, "When I Lost You."

Some of his more popular numbers, including "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "When I Left the World Behind," and "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," were written when he was a sergeant of infantry during the world war. His recents hits are "All Alone" and "Remember."

Mr. Mackay's persistent opposition delayed the marriage which had been expected by friends of Berlin and Miss Mackay for months. Miss Mackay's mother, who is now the wife of Dr. Joseph A. Blake, gave her consent several months ago.

Last June, with the approval of Cardinal Hayes, Miss Mackay obtained a dispensation from Pope Pius XI allowing her marriage to Mr. Berlin, who is a Jew. Under the dispensation any children will be reared in the Roman Catholic faith.

Berlin's song, "Remember," which was sung by John McCormack in the international radio program New Year's night, was said to have been written to Miss Mackay.

FEDERAL EXPRESS DERAILED ON PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 4—(AP)—Passengers on the Federal express of the Pennsylvania railroad, bound from Washington to Boston, were shaken up tonight when the locomotive and seven coaches were derailed at North East, Md. Although the tracks were torn up for several hundred feet the derailed cars remained upright, and reports to the railroad officials here were that no one was injured.

RENUNCIATION BY CROWN PRINCE CAROL ACCEPTED

BUCHAREST, Jan. 4—(AP)—The Rumanian national assembly by a practically unanimous vote, today accepted Prince Carol's renunciation of his succession to the throne and took from him all the prerogatives as a member of the royal family. The assembly confirmed the appointment of Carol's four year old son, Prince Mihai (Michael) as heir apparent.

PORTUGESE DUELIST DIED OF HEART FAILURE

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 4—(AP)—A duel with swords between Dr. Antonio Centeno, a noted financier, and the vice president of the Lisbon town council today, ended in the death of the latter after the second encounter. The city official was not wounded but died of heart failure.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Jennie Lewis Munger

ANSONIA, Jan. 4—(AP)—Mrs. Jennie Lewis Munger, widow of the late Judge Verrenice Munger and mother of Judge Robert L. Munger, of the city court, and widely known attorney and orator, died at the family home, 35 William street, early this morning. Mrs. Munger, who was 80 years of age had been in her usual health up to a short time before the end, death coming suddenly as the result of a slight shock complicated with heart trouble. She was prominent in Ansonia church and society circles for many years. The house in which she died had been her home for over half a century.

Thomas W. Hynes

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—Thomas W. Hynes, 77, philanthropist and for two years auditor general of Porto Rico under the late President Roosevelt, died today at his home in Brooklyn.

Mr. Hynes, was for 50 years president and particular counsel of the St. Vincent De Paul society. He served from 1904 to 1906 in the Porto Rican post and in 1913 was made a knight of St. Gregory by the late Pope Pius X for his charitable work.

Burial will be Thursday in Springfield, Mass.

John Dunn Howe

HARTFORD, Jan. 4—(AP)—John Dunn Howe, a native of Litchfield county, whose ancestors were among the founders of Marlboro, Mass., and early settlers in Middletown, this state, died here today. Mr. Howe with his family took an active part in the settlement of Elkhorn valley, Neb., and he was a member of the Nebraska state senate in the sessions of 1881 and 1882 and was for several years general solicitor for the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway. The funeral will be in Winsted where he was born in 1846.

Disastrous Floods in Western Europe

Between 500 and 1,000 Persons Have Perished—Situation Continues Critical.

PARIS, Jan. 4—(AP)—Transylvania, eastern Hungary and Rumania present the most critical situation in a Europe which is slowly emerging from one of the worst floods in its history.

The number of dead in these countries and the amount of damage inflicted, probably will not be known for several days, perhaps weeks, on account of the demoralization of communications and the fact that vast areas of territory are likely to remain under water for some time. But it is certain that there will be a tremendous death toll and huge financial loss.

The swollen rivers and canals in Belgium and Holland are going down, the German and Polish rivers also are receding, the situation in France remains at a standstill, but the rain there continues unabated.

Details of the casualties and the suffering in Transylvania, Hungary and Rumania are slowly reaching Budapest and Bucharest. It is variously estimated that between 500 and 1,000 persons have perished, while the loss in cattle and the damage to spring wheat and property is tremendous.

The majority of deaths occurred in isolated hamlets and on small farms where the residents had no warning of approaching danger. This makes the task of a close computation of casualties almost impossible. Many died of hunger or exposure as they waited to be rescued from their house or other vantage points.

Eastern Hungary has suffered greatly but the latest reports are more reassuring. At Kis-Jeno it is known that 155 houses collapsed and several persons perished. In the Ozetete district, 410 houses and farms were destroyed, and it is believed that portions of this district will be inundated for at least ten days.

The worst situation exists along the river Theiss, where thousands of inhabitants still remain on the roofs of their flooded houses awaiting rescue. Great ice packs sweep down from the mountains by recent thaws have completely damned up the rivers at several points, causing the water to overflow the countryside.

Admiral Horthy, the regent, has taken personal direction of the relief measures, which are proving inadequate in the face of the serious situation. The number of survivors still clinging to the roofs of their homes tonight is expected to be considerably diminished when the breaks again over the scene of desolation.

ITALY MOURNS THE DEATH OF DOWAGER QUEEN MARGHERITA

BORDIGHERA, Italy Jan. 4.—(AP)—As a family might mourn one of its best beloved members, Italy tonight mourned the loss of Dowager Queen Margherita of Savoy, mother of King Victor Emanuel, who died peacefully at eleven o'clock this morning surrounded by her immediate family in her modest villa on the sunny shores of the Riviera.

Although the death of the queen mother was not unexpected, it brought forth a spontaneous wave of characteristically intense emotion from the entire land, sweeping away the differences between men, parties and classes and united Italians everywhere in sorrow for the passing of the gentle old woman, known as "The Italian Queen," because she alone of Italy's feminine sovereigns was born on Gisalpine soil.

Death was due to a cerebral thrombus, or blood clot, symptoms of which became manifest yesterday morning after the queen mother apparently had quite recovered from a recent attack of pleural pneumonia. Her previous illness had given rise to serious anxiety, but her constitution so completely withstood the attack, that daily bulletins were discontinued; then yesterday the alarming word that grame symptoms had developed shocked the nation.

Throughout the nations normal activities have been stilled, buildings are draped with black and flags half-staffed. The theatres, schools, public buildings and most of the stores have been closed, and all ceremonies and public activities have been suspended.

No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral but it is believed it will be elaborately carried out at Rome.

BRITISH PEERAGES BECOMING EXTINCT

LONDON, Jan. 4—(AP)—More British peerages became extinct in 1925 than in any twentieth century year except 1915. The new edition of Debrett's, the standard compilation of the realm's nobility, records the extinction of nine titles above the baronetcy rank.

The death of Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, wiped out both the marquisate and earldom of that name, this being the outstanding case. Other peerages that went included the Ribblesdale barony, dating from 1747, which passed with the death of Lord Ribblesdale, his son and heir having been killed in the war, and the Rawlinson barony, which became extinct with the death of General Lord Rawlinson.

$52,000,000 HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER PROJECT IN PENN.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 4—(AP)—Pennsylvania concerns involved in the proposed $52,000,000 hydro-electric power development project at Conowingo, Md., today filed with the public service commission supplemental petitions covering modifications in the plans along lines laid down by the commission in a report made December 1.

Four concerns, the Philadelphia Electric company and the Susquehanna Water Power company, of Pennsylvania, and the Susquehanna Power company and Susquehanna Electric company, both of Maryland, are involved. They propose to install seven capacity each.

ROBERT B. SCOTT SERVING SENTENCE AT SAN QUENTIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Robert B. Scott, sought by the Chicago police in connection with the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug store clerk, for which his brother Russell Scott was convicted and sent to an Illinois insane asylum, is serving a sentence at San Quentin prison for robbery under the name of John Redding, prison authorities said today.

Baker Hearing In Hartford Today

Embezzler Will Be Brought Before U. S. Commissioner Corbett at 11 a. m.

HARTFORD, Jan. 4—(AP)—Guy L. Baker, confessed embezzler of funds of the First National Bank of Putnam, of which he was formerly cashier, and who is now in the Hartford county jail, will be brought before United States Commissioner Frederick J. Corbett for a hearing set for 11 a. m., tomorrow in the federal building.

Commissioner Corbett signed today a warrant for the federal arrest of Baker, but would not make public the allegations set forth by the government. The warrant was delivered to United States Deputy Marshal Marsh for service on Baker at the jail.

Following the hearing tomorrow, which may be postponed, if government officials are not yet ready to act in the matter, it is expected that Baker will be held under a large bond at the Hartford jail for arraignment in the United States district court late in February.

An agent of the department of justice in Washington visited Baker today at the jail.

Guy L. Baker, former assistant cashier of the First National bank of Putnam and now in the Hartford county jail awaiting trial on charges of having stolen from the bank, has been named in a suit filed in the courts of Volusia county, Florida, by Ivaan Andre, well known artist of Deland, Fla., and New York city. Andre alleges that through the misrepresentations of H. H. Davenport, a former highway supervisor for the Putnam district, he exchanged land in Florida for the old Grosvenor farm in Putnam and Baker's two-apartment house on Mechanic street in the same town. Neither the farm nor the house are as represented as to value and condition, Andre charges.

This Florida suit also served today to reveal further financial operations by Baker and his former chief, G. Harold Gilpatric, now in the federal prison at Atlanta.

Gilpatric's part in this particular phase of Baker's affairs, is due to the fact that the former state treasurer on October 19, 1923, loaned Baker $2,500 in the form of a mortgage on the Baker house at 67 Mechanic street, Putnam.

Although the mortgage was drawn on October 19, 1923, it was not recorded until February 24, 1924. Two hours after the mortgage was recorded, there was also placed on record the deed for sale of Baker's house to Mr. Andre.

Had the recording of the mortgage been withheld until after the sale of Baker's house had been officially consummated in Putnam, the mortgage would have void, it was declared.

GILPATRIC USED STATE FUNDS TO COVER SHORTAGES

HARTFORD, Jan. 4—(AP)—It came out today that the Connecticut State treasury accepted three checks aggregating $12,750 from G. Harold Gilpatric, as cashier of the First National bank of Putnam, in three semi-annual interest payments on Liberty bonds of $200,000 par value, which Gilpatric withheld from the state treasury nearly a year and a half up to January, 1921.

Gilpatric, acting in a dual capacity as Putnam bank cashier and state treasurer, had the use of the money from August 9, 1919 to the middle of December, 1920 to cover up shortages in his bank in order to pass examinations by federal bank examiners.

When the bonds were finally delivered to the state treasury, it was in response to persistent requests of the then deputy state treasurer, Charles H. Sumner, which had resulted in so much friction between Gilpatric and Sumner that the treasurer had told his deputy in effect, "If you aren't satisfied with the way business is done here, you are under no obligation to stay."

COOLIDGE ASKS $50,000 FOR DISARMAMENT PARLEY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—President Coolidge today put the question whether the United States should participate in the League of Nations preliminary disarmament discussion up to congress.

In a special message, transmitted to both the house and senate, he recommended a $50,000 appropriation to defray the expenses of American participation. Acceptance of the league council's invitation to take a hand in the work of the preparatory commission, he said, "involves no commitment with respect to attendance upon any future conference or conference on reduction and limitation of armaments; and the attitude of this government in that regard cannot be defined in advance of the calling of such meetings."

The message was read in both houses and referred to the senate foreign relations committee and the house foreign affairs committee. Inasmuch as an appropriation, which must originate in the house, is involved, no move was made in the senate toward complying with the request.

In the house, however, Representative Temple of Pennsylvania, ranking republican on the foreign affairs committee, in the absence of Chairman Porter, introduced a resolution to authorize the appropriation. It was referred automatically to the foreign affairs committee, which will meet on Wednesday to consider it.

There has been no indication of the disarmament invitation, and leaders in both houses predicted that the authority to expend $50,000 would soon be conferred on the president.

MAYORS TAKE OFFICE IN 13 BAY STATE CITIES

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Mayors were inducted into office in thirteen Massachusetts cities today. The note of economy was sounded in many inaugural addresses, but in Pittsfield, Leominster and Chicopee, the water situation was paramount. The mayors of Chicopee and Holyoke entered office with the possibility that legal technicalities might make legislative acts or court rulings necessary to establish their rights to office.

In Boston, Malcolm E. Nichols, the first republican to hold the office of mayor since 1909, prophesied, that an increased tax rate would be needed to meet the city's growing demands. He said that the city would require more than $8,000,000 more in 1926 than it did in 1925.

GOV'T BANKING AID FOR FARMERS' ASSOCIATIONS

Proposed in Bill Introduced in the Senate by Senator McKinley—Would Establish a National Farmers' Cooperative Bureau, to Gather Data on Farm Stocks and Market Demands—In the House Representative Dickinson Presented a Bill Designed to Provide For the Disposal of Surplus Crops.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—(AP)—Farm relief proposal came before congress from a number of sources when it reconvened today, one of them a bill by Representative Dickinson, republican, Iowa, a recognized leader in the house farm bloc.

The Dickinson proposal, drafted after conferences with various farming organizations, including those represented at the recent farm conference in Des Moines, was designed to provide for the disposal through cooperative associations of the exportable surpluses of wheat, corn, rice, cotton, tobacco, cattle and swine.

Machinery to be set up to handle the surpluses would comprise a federal farm advisory council and a federal farm board of seven members, including the secretary of agriculture, within that department, and six others to be selected from eighteen names submitted by the advisory council.

The first step in marketing a surplus would be a declaration by the farm board that an emergency existed in one or more basic commodities. Cooperative agencies would then be instructed to buy the commodity so designated at the domestic price and sell it at the world price. Later, the agencies would be reimbursed for the losses thus sustained from funds obtained by the collection of an equalization fee levied on producers.

Another was a bill introduced by Senator McKinley, republican, Illinois, to extend direct government aid from government bankers agencies to farmers cooperative associations.

Representative Tillman, democrat, Arkansas, also introduced a measure calling for expenditure of $225,000 in the next two fiscal years for the creation and operation of cooperative marketing agencies in the agriculture department.

Still another proposal came from a group of dairymen, who called on Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania and urged an increase in funds allotted for the eradication of tuberculosis in dairy herds. This delegation was headed by Frank P. Willitts, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, and represented a number of dairy interests in his and other states, including Wisconsin and New York.

TAX REDUCTION BILL TAKEN UP IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—(AP)—The tax reduction bill was started on its way in the senate today, facing a three cornered fight.

Secretary Mellon expressed the administration position generally by warning the senate finance committee that the measure as passed by the house represented the total amount of tax reduction which the condition of the treasury warranted—about $330,000,000. This sum was the surplus the government had, he said, at the close of the last fiscal year.

Before the day was over, however, both republicans and democrats of the committee met in separate conferences to discuss possible changes in the bill.

Senator Simmons, of orth Carolina, ranking democrat on the committee announced later he was dissatisfied with the house bill and hoped that senate democrats would urge greater reduction than it provided, mentioning $400,000,000 as the minimum.

Chairman Smoot, spokesman for the republicans, meanwhile, has under consideration some changes in the rate schedules, which would not disturb the total amount of tax reduction. He is considering increasing the exemption from the admission tax from 50 cents to $1. He would offset this, under the tentative plan, by repealing provisions in the bill cutting in half the alcohol levy.

"Insurrent republicans are expected to wage a fight for restoration to the bill of the provision permitting publicity of income tax returns.

BISHOP MURRAY RETURNS TO THE BUSINESS FIELD

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(AP)—John Gardner Murray, successful banker and broker who retired from business at the age of 35 to become a clergyman returned today to the business world—but as the Right Rev. John Gardner Murray, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church and director of a church business with a $3,500,000 turnover and an international missionary personnel of 5,000.

Bishop Murray is the first presiding bishop to be chosen by election, as well as president of the national council of the Episcopal church. His new duties, while ranking him among the most powerful church dignitaries of the world, are much the same as those of the head of any large business concern. His offices are inked with China, Japan, Africa, Alaska, the West Indies, Paris, Brazil, Hawaii and every state in this country.

Bishop Murray is now 68. As a boy, son of a Methodist Episcopal minister, he honed to become a clergyman, but his father's death left him sole support of the family, and he became bookkeeper for the Osage Coal and Mining company, of Selma, Ala. At 35 he was the company's vice president and also a banker and broker, and with a fortune amassed he decided to enter the ministry.

His new duties are not altogether business duties. Although he entered his business offices in the church missions house today, for the first attended holy communion at 10 a. m., and at Trenton, N. J., tomorrow he consecrates the Rev. Walter Mitchell, D. D., as missionary bishop of Arizona. On Wednesday he preaches at the Feast of the Epihany at the national cathedral at Washington.

COAL NEGOTIATIONS TO BE RESUMED TODAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(AP)—Members of the joint committee of miners and operators entrusted with the task of endeavoring to end the prolonged strike of 158,000 miners in the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, arrived tonight for the resumption of parleys at the Union League club tomorrow afternoon.

Neither side would discuss the situation, which apparently has remained unchanged since New Year's eve, when a recess was taken after three days of negotiations. None of the conferees would say that they were either optimistic or pessimistic regarding the final outcome.

Spokesmen for both sides said there had been no regular conferences during the recess. No new proposals have been submitted, it was understood. When the committee meets, various phases of the proposals made by Alvan Markle, chairman of the joint committee, Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania and others, will again be considered as a basis for settlement.

The miners stand firm in their opposition to arbitration, which has been the principal stumbling block in the pathway toward peace.

MRS. E. LEE TRINKLE SERIOUSLY BURNED

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4—(AP)—Mrs. E. Lee Trinkle, wife of the governor, was so seriously burned in a fire which caused extensive damage in the state executive mansion today, that surgical treatment will be necessary to relieve her suffering.

The fire swept thrpugh virtually the entire lower floor of the mansion while the governor was absent in his office nearby, and Mrs. Trinkle was injured when she ran through a wall of flame to reach her 14-year-old son, E. Lee Trinkle, Jr., who was asleep on the third floor.

She was burned about the face, neck and arms, but with her son, leaped from his window to the ground. Neither was injured by the leap, but she was in great pain tonight from her burns.

FIDDLERS' CONTEST WAS OPENED IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 4—(AP)—A breath of old New England invaded the garish lights of a modern theatre tonight when a dozen old time fiddlers played the first round of an all New England contest sponsored by the town criers, a local business men's organization. Joseph Shippee, 69 years old of Plainfield, Conn., carried off first honor in tonight's contest, but it was a close decision.

Daniel Elliott, 82 years old, Civil War veteran who lives at the Soldiers' home in Bristol, R. I., got almost the same amount of applause as the Connecticut bow wielder. Mr. Elliott, a cripple, was helped to a chair at the front of the stage, but neither years nor infirmities hindered his fiddling. Once into the swing of "Turkey in the Straw," his feet got into motion along with his arm and hundreds of other pairs joined in the time keeping rythym. And flappers, kept time with their jaws as they chowed their gum to the tune of "Money Music."

Aside from being proclaimed the best fiddler of tonight's performance, Mr. Shippee was perhaps more the type that the audience of city dwellers wanted to see. Where others dressed in their Sunday best and appeared with white collar and tie, Mr. Shipley shunned all such finery and refused even to discard his overshoes.

Their rubber soles kept a dull thud thumping upon the platform as the strains of "The Irish Washerwoman" echoed from the walls that usually resounded with the wails from jazz saxophones and weird moanings of slide trombones.

Each fiddler tonight played one tune of his own selection and then "Turkey in the Straw". To those who weren't there, the idea of listening to "Turkey in the Straw" played a dozen times by as many fiddlers might seem monotonous. But no two of them played it alike. Some chose to let it whine from their violins in a treble key, while others gave their instruments sharp wangs to bring forth sharp staccato notes from the heavier strings. Still others did it both ways and some essayed to harmonize with a bit of double string work.

Tonight's contest was the first of three rounds. Tomorrow night another group will play and the winner of that round will meet Mr. Shippee in the final on Wednesday night. The winner will receive a gold medal and a purse of $50 in gold. The town criers arranged the contest as a part of their program to stimulate interest in the old time square dances that have been shoved from the realm of fashion by the modern "jazz" steps.

CARNEGIE MEDAL WAS PRESENTED ALTAR BOY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 4.—(AP)—A Carnegie medal for heroism was presented William Lester Kate, altar boy at the Church of the Messiah, in an impressive service at the church. The boy and his brother, Howard, rescued Mead Wilkinson from drowning at Barrington Beach near here on September 1. Howard coming to his brother's rescue when the latter was nearly pulled down in the struggle.

CONVICT HELD FOR ASSAULTING A GUARD

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Harry Jones, serving 25 years for holding up a chain store, was held in $1,000 bail in superior court today on a charge of assault on a guard at the hospital at the state prison. He is declared to have secreted a brick in a stocking and struck the guard while he was in the hospital, suffering from a bullet wound caused by the accidental discharge of his own gun which he was cleaning the scene of the holding up on September 1.

EDWIN McKINNEY'S SHOOTING PROVES SIMPLE AFFAIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 4—The story of how Edwin McKinney, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace D. McKinney of Eagleville happened to be accidentally shot in the left leg with a bullet from a 38 calibre revolver owned by State Policeman Porter Walden Sergeant of the Litchfield barracks, at his home Saturday forenoon, has been told by Lester McKinney, 16 year old brother of the injured young man. Officer Stannard was spending New Year's at the McKinney home, the guest of a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKinney. Saturday forenoon while he was preparing to shave, he placed his belt and holster containing the weapon aside. Edwin McKinney took up the outfit and was adjusting it about himself. He tried to remove the gun from the holster but it stuck and the younger brother put his hand inside the leather holster to loosen the revolver. He got a grip on the gun and as he yanked at it it was discharged. The bullet entered Edwin's left thigh and passed down to three inches below the knee where it came out, securing the facts of the accident and the name of the State Policeman implicated was an arduous proposition Sunday due to the unanimous efforts of friends of the officer to withhold his name from the press for fear it would cause him trouble. Young McKinney is recovering but will be detained at the hospital for two or three weeks.

PAYS $217.15 PENALTY FOR HIS SALES OF CIDER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 4—Paul Matusewic of Frick Top Hill from whose home raiding officers took over two hundred gallons of hard cider and some thirty gallons of a mixture of cider and wine, plus a quantity of moonshine Saturday night, pleaded not guilty to two charges of violation of the Liquor law when in police court Monday morning. Through Joseph Sierick as interpreter, Matusewic said that he had sold over thirty barrels of cider and had never been arrested before. He was charged with actual sales and having liquor in his possession with intent to sell. Matusewic admitted having sold cider by the gallon and also said that it was true that he sold cider by the pitcher for twenty-five cents Saturday night. Judge Frank H. Foss imposed a fine of $100 in each count, the total assessment being $217.15. Matusewic said that he would arrange for payment. The raiding officers were: Police Officers Grant Bombria and Edward Leahy, County Detective W. E. Jackson, Federal Officer W. S. Congdon and Constable Alfred P. Abbe. Six men were in the house drinking cider when the officers entered.

MRS. NELLIE A. GAGER WAS PROMINENT IN W. C. T. U.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 4—Mrs. Nellie A. Gager and prominent Woman's Christian Temperance Union worker, locally and statewise, died Sunday night at her home, 356 Windham road, after a long illness. She was president of the local branch of the W. C. T. U. for twelve years and for some time served as recording secretary of the state organization. Broadway Theatre.

An exceptionally fine programme of Keith-Albee vaudeville opened at the Broadway theatre yesterday and proved a delightful and inspiring vaudeville treat.

Zemater and De Varo, the step lively Gymnasts was the opening attraction. One stunt follows another without the slightest hesitation and with shome comedy situation proved a big success.

The Ryan Sisters, clever colleens, show their Irish in a routine of songs and dances. They are pretty, pert and very clever.

Young and Mayne followed with a new line of comedy patter which proved to be twelve minutes of worthy laughter.

Beck and Ferguson followed on with more laughs on a different order and succeeded in more than entertaining.

The Three Worths was the closing number and with some songs, dances and music made a splendid closing number.

And the season's finest photoplay rounded out a perfect show. Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Niles Welch, Edna Murphy, Richard Bennett and J. Barney Sherry all appear in "Lying Wives."

Coming to the Palace

Max Hanover of the Hanover Curland Co., is entertaining some brother Lions from Africa this week. It is a well known fact that the Lion organization covers the entire country pretty well but this is the first time that Norwich Lions have had the pleasure of entertaining three real lions from the jungle of Africa. Max has his guests in a cage in his window and they are well worth going down to see. They will appear with Knight Bros. Circus which is coming to the Palace on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This is only one of the many attractions that this biggest show in the world for the money offers. A bucking mule Cyclone which the management of the circus will pay twenty-five dollars to anyone that is able to ride him. Lucy the trained elephant of Sally of the Circus is here in person. Death defying acrobats thrilling aerial artists. Ponies from high school funny clowns and a program that consist of ten acts will be given on these three days. Its going to be a great treat for everybody and the youngsters are going to have the time of their lives. The grownups are not going to be very far behind either. Its a pretty good plan to get in to the Palace Thursday and Friday because its dollars to doughnuts that Saturday is going to one of those: "I'm sorry, but you'll have to wait for seats days." Lucy the elephant is going to visit the school children today and tomorrow and shake hands with all her little friends. Watch for the street parade and a number of other free attractions.

Palace Theatre

Babe London the comedy star of Mermaid, Lloyd Hamilton and Christie comedies is at the Palace for the next two days and she gets as many laughs over the footlights as she does from the silver sheet. With a super abundance of magnetism a smile that just won't wear off and with a showman's sense of what gets laughs Babe London gives you about as good a fourteen minutes as you will ever get out of a vaudeville show. Assisted by Billy Green who has a wonderful baritone voice and who knows how to put his songs across effectively as well as get all out of his comedy bits we can do nothing else but congratulate the management of securing these two clever performers. Miss London herself ought to be attraction enough for any theatre but surrounding her with a 100 per cent. bill shows again that the management realize that the people of Norwich are willing to patronize and pay for good entertainment. Karl Karev with a line of good songs, a million dollars worth of personality opens the bill and gets everybody in good humor. Tracey and Ellwood air their matrimonial troubles in a way that makes every one feel that they have been in just the same predicament and that alone ought to make anybody laugh. After seeing and laughing with Babe London, Tracy and Ellwood and Immensely enjoying Karl Karey we were not prepared for such a gorgeous offering as Bohemian nights and to use an old expression it left us gasping. Great voices wonderful scenic effects, dancing as only artists can deliver it the act is well worth the price of admission. Adolphe Menjou in the King on Main St., kept everybody laughing for an hour and ten minutes by actual count and the whole entire bill might be properly billed by the management as a Happiness program.

Levine Bros. Open New Plant.

With a modern establishment exceeding completely the proportions of their former location, Levine Brothers, Inc., announce the opening of their new fruit and produce plant in their own building at the junction of Water and Commerce streets.

The plant, containing a large cellar and three main floors, has the advantage of central location. There are many labor-saving devices so that large quantities of fruits and produce can be conveniently handled. Among these improvements is a 2-ton elevator of latest type. The banana rooms in the cellar are two in number, and are of the latest type. They are 30x15 feet each, with 7-foot ceilings, and a combined capacity of one car.

The main floor contains the concern's offices. This floor also accommodates customers and serves for loading and unloading of products.

On the second floor are located two modern cold storage rooms, each 50x75 feet in size, and general storage facilities. Cork insulation renders the cold storage rooms genuinely up-to-the-minute. The remainder of the floor serves for general purposes of packing.

On the third—the top floor, one can find a complete storage space for such special produce as potatoes, onions, apples, as well as beverages.

Levine Brothers, Inc., succeeded James E. Moore in this business in 1921. In its present location, the firm of Levine Brothers, Inc., realized an ambition of establishing in Norwich a completely equipped plant covering the fruit and produce trade and to furnish its list of customers with products that are handled in the best possible manner.

The officers comprise: President, A. L. Levine; treasurer, Saul H. Levine, secretary, Henry S. Levine.

Cold Weather Ahead

Change Oil!

Is your car one of 54 makes or 365 models that requires a Winter grade of oil? Consult the Mobiloil Chart of Recommendations today!

Watch the Thermometer!
When it stays between 32° F. and zero consult the Chart to see if your car needs Mobiloil Arctic Below zero ALL cars (except Fords) require Mobiloil Arctic.
FORDS: Use Mobiloil "E" at all temperatures
30
20
10

For safe and "trouble-free" Winter driving, you should use an oil that will flow freely at zero and, at the same time, adequately withstand the heat of the engine. Otherwise you may encounter bearing trouble and pay heavy penalties in wear and depreciation.

For Fords—Gargoyle Mobiloil "E" meets these Winter requirements of the Ford Engine.

For all other cars, changing oil during the Winter months, Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic is the correct grade.

Both flow freely at ZERO

See the dealer who displays this sign. He'll drain and refill your crankcase with the correct grade of Gargoyle Mobiloil.

DANIELSON

GUY L. BAKER'S TRANSACTION WAS PERFECTLY LEGAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—Danielson gets incidental mention in the widespread consideration of the case of Guy L. Baker, former assistant cashier of the defunct First National bank of Putnam, through the fact that he withdrew from the Brooklyn Savings bank here the money credited to Ellery Baker, his father, of whose estate he was administrator. This withdrawal was made as long ago as March, 1923, almost a year and a half before the crash that revealed the condition of the Putnam bank where Mr. Baker was then employed. In so far as the Brooklyn Savings bank was concerned, there was nothing at all irregular about the withdrawal of the Ellery Baker account. As administrator of the estate, Guy Baker had the authority to draw it, and the money, amounting to about $1,200, was paid him without question and the account closed.

Funeral services for Royal C. Rawson of Elmville were conducted at the undertaking rooms of A. F. Wood, Monday afternoon by Rev. Roger C. Stimson of Danielson Methodist Episcopal church During the service Miss Electa L. Sheldon of East Killingly sang My Lord, Thy Will Be Done, and Lead, Kindly Light. Miss Amelia Hutchins was organist. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Oliver P. Bartlett, Abner S. Young, Henry E. Anderson, James Danielson, Burdette C. Hopkins and John F. Lewis.

Monday morning the funeral of Miss Catherine Whalen was held from the home on Dyer street with a solemn mass of requiem at St. James' church at 8 o'clock. The officers of the mass were Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S. Many relatives and friends were at the service. The body was entombed at Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were John Doyle, John Whalen of Putnam, Edward Mather, Thomas Dooley, Albert Grenon and William Mathieu. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Manufacturers of textiles in this territory are quoted as feeling, at least in some instances, that business during 1926 will show material improvement. Worsted concerns are doing a splendid business at the present time, and the woolen market is more encouraging than it has been for some time. There is a prospect, too, of better selling possibilities for cotton textiles during the first three months of this year than have been noted for the past two and a half years, a period about as difficult for cotton manufacturers in southern New England as can be recalled over a long period of time.

From their home in Goodyear Monday, the funeral of Clara A. Cayh, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cayh, was held, burial being at St. Joseph's cemetery in Dayville. During Monday there was also held at Dayville the funeral of Robert R. Slaniski, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Slaniski. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements at both funerals.

Curiosity of people here has been aroused by the appearance of National bank bills of different denominations in payrolls and other local circulation during the past few days, these bills being in some cases more than 40 years old, yet in excellent condition. Where they have been all these years is a mystery. Some of them are on the old First National bank of Killingly, long since out of existence. The bills on this bank carry the signatures of Silas Hyde as president and Henry N. Clemons as cashier. Both these former well known residents have been dead for many years. The bills are as good as the day they were issued. It is not improbable that this money, of which there appears to be a considerable quantity, has been hoarded away or, possibly unexpectedly recovered from some hiding place. While admitting that they are aware that the old bills have come to light here and that some of them have passed through their institutions, bank men here were not inclined to discuss the matter or reveal any particular information they may have about them. The $5 bills of the bank many years ago absorbed by the First National bank of Killingly, the Windham County National, are of the issue of February, 1882. They have the brown backs that were familiar on currency in use a generation ago, but not seen in these later days.

Something of a hitch in the program for the construction of additions to Killingly High school at a cost of $150,000 has developed through the discovery that the plans as drawn provide for construction that would place part of the proposed additions on property of Mose H. Berthiaume. The Berthiaume property, adjoining the high school property on the easterly side, includes a right of way of greater width than was taken into consideration when the plans were drawn. Now with the plans prepared, the special building committee is confronted with the necessity of making some arrangement with Mr. Berthiaume or revising the plans in case such arrangement can not be made. There have been discussions of the matter between the interested parties, but no definite decision had been reached as to what will be done up to Monday afternoon.

A meeting of the Civic federation is to be held Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. H. B. Crosby of Academy street. This meeting is one that would have been held last Friday except for the holiday.

Mrs. F. O. Armington will have the members of the Woman's auxiliary of St. Alban's church at her home for a meeting Thursday afternoon.

Elton Jenkins, formerly engaged here as an electrician, is dead at his home in New Bedford.

Mr. and Mrs. George Witter of Brooklyn have been spending a few days with N. A. Witter of Mechanic street.

Just how badly East Killingly needs a better highway leading to Danielson can be ascertained at this time by riding from Elmville to the Killingly Center section. Sections of the highway are deeply rutted and in terrible condition.

Snow, fog and rain figured in Monday's weather in Danielson, slippery going being a development of these conditions.

A regular drill for members of the Service battery tonight (Tuesday) will be followed by basketball, a popular diversion with the soldiers this winter. Officers of Motregor, W. R. C., and Colonel Edward Anderson camp, Sons of Veterans, will be installed at Wednesday evening's meeting.

Mrs. Mary Taylor returned to her home in Webster Monday after spending several days with relatives here.

A Critics' night program featured the regular meeting of Killingly grange Monday evening.

The body of William Waite, killed Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile on the Wauregan road, is at the home of his sister, Mrs. Edmond Vachon, of the West Side.

Collectors of furs in this territory have procured a particularly large number of coon pelts taken during the present season.

Priests of St. James' parish are engaged this week in further work upon the annual parish census, this involving visitations to the homes of all the parishioners.

MRS. ARMAND HENEAULT WAS NATIVE OF STONINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—The death of Mrs. Armand Heneault, 49, of Dayville, which occurred during the night at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester, was announced here Monday morning. Mrs. Heneault, in a critical condition of health, had undergone a surgical operation in the hope that she might regain her strength. Her death came as a great shock to the members of her family and her friends. Mrs. Heneault was a native of Stonington. Before her marriage she was Miss Annie Neville, daughter of Patrick and Helen Murray Neville. She leaves her husband and three daughters, Misses Katherine, Anna and Rose Heneault. The family has been resident in Dayville for a considerable period of years.

WAUREGAN PASTOR RESIGNS, AFTER EIGHT YEARS' SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—After a pastorate of eight years, Rev. William Fryling has resigned at the Wauregan Congregational church, the resignation to be effective April 1.

MRS. WM. H. BURTON LEAVES ELEVEN GT.-GRANDCHILDREN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—A death here early Monday morning was that of Mrs. Josephine Burton, 84, widow of William Henry Burton, who died many years ago. Mrs. Burton was born in Canada in 1842, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis LaMondy and of a family long since migrated from France. Mrs. Burton had been a resident here for more than 45 years. Mrs. Burton whose death occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gallup, had been critically ill two fortnight. Mrs. Burton leaves two sons, Henry and Hiram, both of Danielson and two daughters, Mrs. Gallup and Edna Cook of Bucke, N. Y. She leaves also 15 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

DEER FOUND DROWNED IN THE CHASE RESERVOIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—A buck with 8-point antlers, the animal drowned probably a week or ten days ago, was removed from the Chase reservoir near East Killingly Monday morning by Deputy Game Warden Gurdon E. Withey of Danielson. The ice had to be chopped away before the carcass could be taken out. Disposal of the deer, a splendid animal, was made by Warden Withey. It was indicated that the deer was drowned after breaking through the ice while going across the reservoir.

D. Baker, N. T. White, John E. Child; vocal solo, Miss Doris Lindeman with Alan Upham at piano; selection by the chorus; remarks and reading by Maurice Child.

GUY L. BAKER'S AFFAIRS GROW MORE AND MORE TANGLED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 4—Further developments in the case of Guy L. Baker, former assistant cashier of the First National Bank, are not calculated to bear out his statement that the $16,300 which he admitted having stolen, represents the full amount of his peculations.

As executor of the estate of his father, Ellery Baker of Pomfret, who died two years ago, which estate amounted to $3,400, he appropriated the greater part, if not practically all of it. He was appointed, executor when his father died and G. Harold Gilpatric, cashier of the First National Bank, signed his bond.

According to Willis Covell of Pomfret, judge of the probate court, there was $1,500 belonging to Ellery Baker's estate in the Putnam Savings Bank which Guy L. Baker, as executor, had withdrawn before Gilpatric's attempted suicide. Another deposit of $1,100 in the Brooklyn Savings Bank and one of $500 in the Savings Bak of New London were also withdrawn. A small part of these funds were in the First National Bank at the time it was closed. The amount represented by the 56 per cent. dividends that the bank has paid out to young Baker as executor, were evidently used by him, as he says now that he is totally without funds.

Judge Covell is making an investigation but he does not expect to recover very much, if any, of the funds of the Baker estate. He said that young Baker had neglected to make regular accountings to him but had promised to make a full settlement when his youngest sister became of age, February 20th of this year.

There are nine living children, besides the former bank official. He is the only one who was given a high school education and he has been looked up to by the other members of his family.

After he left the bank, in October, 1924, he and his wife went to Pomfret and lived with his mother who is a semi-invalid. When she went to see him in the Hartford jail in the hope that bail might be arranged, she did not know that all of the little estate of the family had been dissipated by her son. He was treasurer of the Howe-Marot school for girls at Thompson at a salary of $1,000 a year and a bill was presented by him recently to the corporation for services at that rate from January 1, 1924 to August 1, 1924. The bill has not been paid.

After the closing of the bank, a note for $1,000 was found as one of the assets of the bank, bearing the name of Mary Louise Marot, the president of the school corporation. She declared that the note was a forgery, although the signature was genuine. In securing a loan from the bank, Miss Marot, said that she had signed a paper and Mr. Gilpatric, with whom she transacted her business, told her that he had made a mistake in the blank form he had given her, and had her sign another. The first paper she signed, she said, afterwards became a $10,000 note and she did not learn of the fact until after the bank failed.

This was one of the counts in the indictment to which Gilpatric refused to plead guilty, saying that he had no knowledge of the transaction. Whether the body of the note was filled out by Gilpatric or Baker is still unanswered.

In the winter of 1924-25 Mr. Baker and his wife went to Florida in a Cadillac sedan, which Baker had purchased in the spring of that year for $3,000. They remained there several months spending money liberally. It is said that he had an opportunity to accept two or three positions there but refused them, on the ground that the pay was not high enough. While in Florida at that time he sold his equity in a house he owned in Putnam, valued at $10,000 to or through Henry H. Davenport but it is understood here that Florida property was part of the consideration and that he realized but little money from the sale. The Bakers returned to Putnam in the spring and went again to his mother's to live. For several weeks during the late summer and fall he was bookkeeper for the Putnam Motor Company. It is said that his leaving there was because of a discrepancy in the cash receipts, but Baker disclaimed all responsibility in the matter.

WESTERLY

JOHN O. MILLS PRESIDENT OF WESTERLY MASONIC CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 4—John O. Mills was elected president of the Westerly Masonic club, No. 176 at the sixth annual meeting, held in the club rooms, in the Potter-Langworthy building Monday evening. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Harold D. Livingstone; secretary, Albert E. Barber; treasurer, Lewis Stanton; member of executive committee for three years, Charles A. Freeman.

These officers were all named by a nominating committee, Fred N. Robinson, William R. Chapman, James H. Blacker, Abraham H. Datson and Samuel Bailey.

President Mills came to Westerly from New Britain to engage in the furniture business and was a member of Harmony lodge, No. 21, F. and A. M., of New Britain and affiliated with Franklin lodge No. 20, F. and A. M., May 20th, 1919. Since that time he has been interested in Masonic work in Westerly. When the Masonic club was organized Mr. Mills was of great assistance in securing its furnishings. He is a member of Palmer chapter, No. 28, R. A. M., of Pawcatuck, Mystic council, No. 29, R. and S. M., of Mystic. Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly and Palestine temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Providence, R. I. In Scottish rites he is affiliated with Solomon's Grand Lodge of Perfection, Rhode Island Council, Princes of Jerusalem, Rhode Island Chapter of Rose Croix and Rhode Island Consistory, all sitting in the Valley of Providence, R. I.

Mr. Mills is a former president of Westerly Board of Trade, which preceded the present Westerly Chamber of Commerce and is treasurer of the new Westerly hospital. He is also actively associated with other organizations of church, social and benevolent nature.

Following the hearing of annual reports of officers and committees which showed the club to be in a flourishing condition, refreshments were served and card games, pool billards and a social time completed the evening.

TOWN COUNCIL SELECTS SPECIAL HIGHWAY COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 4—Members of the Westerly town council, President John D. Nichols and Councilmen Rogers E. Trainer, Harry H. Coleman, Isaac G. Smith, A. Clifford Holdsworth and Thomas F. Moore, the only absentee being Councilman Peter Nardone, held their January meeting in the council chambers Monday morning. Others present were Council Clerk Everett E. Whipple and Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr.

At the special council meeting held last Tuesday evening, when there was complaint of the poor condition in which the highways of the town had been left following the installation of the sewer main drains, action was continued to the regular meeting. As a result the following committee was appointed by Chairman John D. Nichols, Councilmen Rogers E. Trainer and A. Clifford Holdsworth to confer with the members of Water Commission to ascertain what has been done by the contractors installing the sewer system in Westerly toward repairing the roads.

The report of Dr. Samuel C. Webster, health officer, showed one case of encephalitis and one case of measles for December.

Chief Brown reported four arrests for December, one for reckless driving and three for intoxication.

The bill for $665 for the services of Wallace & Co., of Providence for the installation of a system of town accounting contracted for by the old town council, covering a period of seven months' services at $95, was held up by the council in its careful scrutiny of bills against the town. On motion of Councilman Holdsworth the councilmen voted all other bills paid, including one of printing and advertising amounting to $602.42 of which an item for the printing of 400 copies of Town Ordinances amounted to $445.

Other amounts voted paid were for water works bills, $2,510.78; sewer bills, $3,731.04; poor department bills, $759.55. The town hall account, Coleman's Electric shop, lamp, $.66; Samuel Girven & Co., keys, $.60; and Westerly Ice Co., ice, $3.01. Town officers, Thomas E. Robinson, milk inspector, $200, and George L. Madison, summoning jurors, $10.20 and James Lapalbo, damage to fowl, $6.

Harvey C. Perry appeared before the council relative to charges made by fitnessmen, especially in reference to their charges for carrying to and from the new Westerly hospital, nurses, who he said, did not receive much pay while training. The distance, he said, from the Westerly hospital to the Washington Trust building was 1.2 miles and to the railroad station from the Westerly post office one-quarter of a mile scale of fares, Mr. Perry said, called for 25c in the "compact part of the town," and from the town ordinances he was shown that the southern boundary of that section was Wells street off which the hospital is located. Councilman Smith informed him that the matter had come up to the council at a previous special session and that the procedure decided upon was to have complaints made to Chief of Police Brown where an extra charge was made for as Police Commissioner Coleman stated, the Duguid Jitney's scale made Clark street the limit of its $.25 charge, among the rates of other jitneymen on file.

Annunciato Vuono of Bradford came before the council concerning a letter about the closing of a road, "Bars lane," at Bradford, sent to the council previously by him and expressed his fears that it had been thrown in the waste paper basket, and read the council an account from the Norwich Bulletin in which it was stated that no action was taken on the matter, as the case was scheduled to come up in a future session of the superior court. Another document which he had was a Westerly director, 1894, and he was admitted to the council table to show the council fathers. Solicitor Ferguson told him the council had no jurisdiction as it was up to the highway department of the town of Westerly. Mr. Vuono said he had been referred by Providence authorities to the council and ended "I'm going to close up Wood Hill road." Solicitor Ferguson told him to do so and then he would see what would happen. Councilman Holdsworth assured Mr. Vuono that his letter had not been destroyed, but was in the council files and that no more of the council's time should be taken up for he should go to the highway department.

Raffaelo Casertano, 117 Canal street, complained to the council that his store windows were broken by a tree located near the bridge there and it was stated that a tree near 131 Canal street gave trouble. The complainant was referred to Tree Warden Everett Barns.

The report of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was read and voted approved and recorded. For 1925, it was shown that there had been a total of 228 arrests. There were 49 arrests for intoxication.

Dr. Thomas E. Robinson, inspector of milk, read his report. It was voted approved and recorded. It showed that during the year 109 applications for milk dealers' licenses had been considered. Such licenses expire March 1st. During the month seven samples of milk had been tested.

In the sewage assessment bill for $361.13 for Luigi Siciliano, 36 John street, the petition for a five-year apportionment was granted.

A letter under date of Dec. 8th, in application for appointment as police constable with power to serve civil process was received from James W. Burke also a similar one under date of Jan. 2nd was received from Michael J. Burke. No action was taken by the council.

A petition signed by residents of Rocket street, praying that one electric light be installed between Nos. 22 and 28, was received and referred to the street lighting committee.

In the matter of determining ownership of street poles formerly the property of the Shore Line Electric road, in which an agreement was entered into by the Westerly Light and Power company and the Westerly Automatic Westerly and Watch Hill were reported Telephone company, 14 poles between as taken over by the Westerly Automatic Telephone company.

On motion of Councilman Smith, seconded by Councilman Trainer, the action of Town Treasurer James M. Pendleton under date of Dec. 30, 1925 for six months, taking up notes amounting to $21,542.23 at 4 1-2 per cent and another due June 30, 1926 at the same rate amounting to $1,857.77, were voted approved and confirmed.

The councilmen then took up the telephone tolls and rates charged by the Westerly Automatic Telephone company.

The following resolution, prepared by Solicitor Ferguson, was voted passed:

Whereas, a certain complant by the town council of the town of Westerly against the Westerly Automatic Telephone company, is now pending before the public utilities commission of this state and,

Whereas, to properly prosecute said complaint it is necessary to engage the services of an engineer or engineers conversant with the construction maintenance and operation of telephone plants and,

Now therefore, it is

Resolved: That J. G. Wray & Co. be engaged, under the direction of the town solicitor, to make an examination of such properties of the Westerly Automatic Telephone company, as may be deemed necessary, for the purpose of securing evidence to prosecute the aforesaid complaint. The indebtedness to be so incurred not to exceed $500.

The following was voted passed:

Whereas, the Post road, Nooseneck Hill road and Bradford road all terminate at different points in the village of Westerly, and,

Whereas, the connecting of said highways, in the town of Westerly would relieve traffic congestion on state highways and facilitate travel in the southerly part of this state and travel between the southerly and northerly confines of this state, and

Resolved, That the members of the legislature from the town of Westerly are hereby requested to secure such legislation as may be deemed necessary to conduct said highways by incorporating as a state highway and causing same to be constructed and reconstructed by the state board of public roads those certain highways in the town of Westerly, beginning at the junction of Tower street Granite street, thence in a northwesterly direction along Tower street to the junction of Tower street and Oak street; thence in an easterly direction along Oak street to the junction of Oak street, Bradford road and Old Hopkinton road; and thence in a northeasterly direction along the Old Hopkinton road to Nooseneck Hill road.

On motion of Councilman Coleman seconded by Councilman Holdsworth Charles Ferraro, having the approval of Chief Thomas E. Brown, was named a special constable for the patrol of the Pierce street section, in uniform.

Building Inspector George E. Ellis was made inspector for the year ensuing, his first appointment having been until the first of the year. The necessity of a suitable building code, to be adopted by the town for the inspector to work under, was recognized and as a result Councilman Holdsworth, with second by Councilman Smith moved, and the vote was passed authorizing President Nichols of the council to name the committee and it was further suggested that the town solicitor be included. President Nichols announced that he would not name the committee, at that time, but give it more careful study.

Councilman Coleman of the police committee, brought up the matter of parking in front of the new building of Westerly's United theatre, on Canal street, from which location the jitney stand had been removed, with the idea that no parking be allowed there, also the change of lengthening 15 minute stops to 30 minutes. Action on these matters was continued to the next session that a study of the conditions might be made, Solicitor Ferguson was of the opinion that restrictions should be called for only from May 1st, to Nov. 1st., but that the judgment of Chief of Police Brown in the matter would be the best to follow.

When Council Clerk Whipple asked the amount of fee to be charged the United theatre, saying that $100 was asked for the Rilven Opera house and $25 a year from the Watch Hill theatre, Councilman Trainer said he thought the council should be "enlightened" as to the character of the building and who the parties were behind it before a license was issued to the new theatre. Solicitor Ferguson, in answer to the question, stated that the council had absolute jurisdiction To some of the council who thought that the opening of the theatre should not be held up, yet a report from at least the building inspector should be received.

Mr. Cheney, representing the American Gas Accumulator Co., of Elizabeth, N. J., which some time ago left a flashing beacon for traffic for trial, appeared and stated that he would be pleased to leave one which he would be willing to have stay for observation. Providence had purchased ten and his company was working out an electric traffic control system there. He was referred to the police committee of the council.

Having the approval of Chief Brown, P. L. Brown, of Franklin street, George A. Stillman, of Main street, and Paul D. McCarthy, of Potter, were voted extra constables without power to serve civil processes without pay.

A letter was read from the Westerly Chamber of Commerce, by Secretary Hawke, under date of Dec. 30th, in which was a vote passed by that chamber that the lowering of Union street and extension be undertaken, if for the best interests of the town as a whole. "Father late" was the only comment made on it.

Guiseppe Savona, of 26 Cherry street, Pawcatuck, who received an unexpected visitation from Connecticut state troopers from the Groton barracks, New Year's eve, with the result that he was arrested on complaint of the alleged keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors, did not appear in Stonington town court Monday morning, before Judge Williams. No session of court was held because the Connecticut state troopers were engaged in court cases in Norwich following raids made there, and were unable to appear against him. Trial of the case was continued one week. Meanwhile the accused is continued under the bonds of $2,000 for which Salvatore Savona and Thomas F. Durkin became surety.

Jude William A. Wilcox, of Pawcatuck, will leave Westerly the middle of the present, for New York to attend the 37th. annual exhibition of the Madison Square Garden Poultry association. Last year Judge Wilcox won the blue ribbon first prize on a showing of bronze turkeys. This year he has entered the Narragansett strain George L. Stillman, of Dublin farm, is the exhibitor of single comb Anconas.

CONGRESSIONAL SESSIONS

There is an interesting note in the statement attributed to senators and representatives in congress that they hope this will be a short session. Is it possible that they do not realize that this is a matter which rests almost entirely with them? Congress isn't kept in long sessions because the people of this country like such things. The administration and the country are invariably much better satisfied if the national law makers will knuckle down to business and make their stay in Washington a short instead of a long one. Unless there is some emergency which demands congress to be in readiness to meet, new developments, the shorter the session the better.

At the opening of the 69th congress someone was quoted as saying that congress would be thanked if it would pass the tax reduction bill and adjourn. That indicates the sentiment against long sessions of congress and the belief born of experience that congressional sessions are long because the members of congress so decree.

Hoping that the session will be short will not make it so. Action to such an end is required. It is realized that much of the delay is due to the playing of politics and the studied activities of the insurgents, who know that it will never be possible to have their plans adopted and yet because of it they are determined that the majority shall not act in accord with its desires.

There are a number of important matters before the present congress outside of the appropriation bills. They deserve to be acted upon without needless delays and it is such a method of disposing of the congressional business that prompts the hopes for a short session. It is constructive business for which the members of congress are sent to Washington. They should be as fully alive to this as their constituents and yet it is already apparent that certain of the minority leaders are laying their plans to obstruct, delay and handicap even after they have heard through the ballot box and otherwise from the people of the United States.

MR. HUSTIS' SERVICE

It is not every railroad man who reaches the presidency of a company, although it is by no means unusual for a railroad man to work his way from the engine cab to the head of the concern that first employed him. James H. Hustis has, however, had the distinction of not only being the president of one railroad but of three, and all of them in New England.

Mr. Hustis began his work in that capacity with the Boston & Albany where it attracted much attention. From that company he was called to the New Haven road to remain for only a short time after which he went to the Boston & Maine, with which he is at the present time and from which he has recently resigned to be effective in the spring.

It was a highly commendable service that Mr. Hustis rendered for the Boston & Albany. His stay with the New Haven road was decidedly short, but his record as the head of the Boston & Maine is particularly good. For that system, which has been through some hard years and is not as yet entirely out of the woods though showing excellent improvement, he has done a great deal.

A well informed railroad head, Mr. Hustis knew New England conditions and he had much advance information concerning the property he was to direct. Getting the Boston & Maine back onto its feet has been an uphill struggle in which the road's president has played a conspicuous part. He has sought to resign before but he states that this time it is final. There would be no little satisfaction if he could remain to see the results that are expected from the reorganization of the Boston & Maine now underway, but he apparently believes that with the prospects excellent and conditions in the future favorable for the road it is a good time for the changing of presidents. The indications are that Mr. Hustis has reached the point where he believes another should take the reins. At least that is what he makes necessary by putting in his resignation.

FIREBUGS

The capture of a fire bug means much relief to any community. It is a cause for rejoicing in New York quite as much as in Podunk. The pyromaniac cannot be allowed his liberty without a heavy penalty being paid for it. It may mean only the destruction of property, but it may mean also the loss of life.

Time when Fire Marshal Brophy of New York suspected, chased and captured a man fleeing from a fire to which he was responding he caught a much wanted individual for he had been terrorizing various sections of the city by his love for the flames and his desire to see the fire companies respond. The admission that he has recently set 40 fires, a dozen of which were started on Christmas eve, indicates the importance of the arrest.

But what attracts particular attention in connection with this arrest is the fact that the accused has been engaged in this practice before. A matter of two years ago he was convicted and sentenced to 18 months in prison for arson. Whether he was allowed to serve out his time is not known but it is apparent that his punishment taught him nothing. Giving him his freedom was like calling him back to his old practices. It would seem that the fellow hadn't the mentality to overcome his weakness in this direction, and if that is the case it is something more than punishment that he needs. He may be sent to prison repeatedly without changing his inclination. He has a mental trend that needs to be corrected, or else he should be kept where he will not have a chance to exercise it upon the public.

The thought of having the house burned over your head, your business wiped out, your life threatened in the middle of the night by having a torch intentionally applied by such an individual is not exactly a happy one. The firebug is beyond toleration. If it is impossible to teach him differently he needs to be kept under restraint. The protection of the public is a matter which cannot get too much attention whether it is a case of dealing with a criminal or a defective.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE EXPENSE

When President Coolidge asks congress for an appropriation of $50,000 for meeting the expense of participation in the conference for the discussion of a programme to be considered at a disarmament conference, it should be granted. The president well says, in his special message, that what is being undertaken in Europe is in keeping with the sentiments of this country. It has been previously said that we were always glad to be of assistance to the countries of Europe in the way of furnishing advice, and this is a time when that can be done. Whether there will be a disarmament conference no one knows. At the present time the efforts are being headed in that direction.

In his annual message the president clearly set forth where this country stands relative to European affairs. We are not disposed to hold aloof. If we can be of assistance, and are called upon, we are not going to sit with folded hands and ignore the appeal.

This country has taken a commendable stand in regard to disarmament. We started the ball rolling regarding naval disarmament. Naturally the other countries which are impressed with the way the naval plan has worked out are desirous of knowing how we stand concerning further disarment. They may not expect us to direct the conference, but our attitude under such conditions and possibilities must naturally be sought, and the president is right when he says our place is at the conference. If there is to be such representation there must of coruse be provision made for the expenses. That is what the president is now seeking. Approval of the appropriation will carry with it the approval of the acceptance of the invitation.

CONFERENCE OUTLOOK

There is nothing which has occurred during the recess in the deliberations of the coal miners and operators to indicate that there is going to be any more inclination to an early adjustment of their differences than there was when they parted last week.

From the statements which have been made by leaders of the miners about their adamant stand against arbitration and the temper which is being shown by certain ones in the coal regions, the indications are that some important suggestion must be made at the psychological moment in order to bring the conferees to a compromise. What that will be or where it will come from is not indicated.

In such deliberations as have taken place it has been demonstrated that the disposition to let the facts be the guide is lacking. Until and unless certain acknowledged advantages are granted the leaders of the miners will not listen to an adjustment, and in making an adjustment they will have nothing whatever to do with arbitration, and yet it has invariably been the case that they have benefited by arbitration, the method that was resorted to for years to settle disputes without interrupting the mining of coal. Had arbitration been accepted there would have been no strike and conditions among the miners would not be what is being claimed. And if the appeals for a chance to get back to work are sincere the miners are not getting proper representation at the conference. When the operators insist upon arbitration of disputed questions they seek to impose no injustice. Arbitration doesn't work that way if there is justice in the appeals of the employed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Each day brings us just that much nearer to spring.

Have you noticed the increase we are getting in the length of the day?

Having turned into the New Year it is time to begin figuring up your 1925 income.

The man on the corner says: Have you become thoroughly acquainted with your new calendar and automobile marker?

The idea of going swimming every day in the year is a grand one. But most people would prefer following the warm water.

With Florida bothered with a flood, cold, snakes, embargo, Crackers and real estate agents what a joy it is to be in New England.

January is traveling right along and as soon as the ice crop is gathered it will not be long before we are out gathering arbutus, eowalips and other spring flowers.

Much is being said because Senator Borah did the unusual and attended the president's New Year's reception. Perhaps Senator Borah felt like he might be forgotten if he didn't.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3—The reopening of the 69th congress after its twelve day recess, took on the air of a holiday for boys. Usually staid and dignified, senators slapped one another on the back, stood with arms entwined, laughed and joked as after an eight months' separation, then took into the fold of senatorial comradeship, a number of new comers.

Looking down from the press gallery one quickly learned that political difference and partisanship are quite separate from personal relations among senators.

There was no difference in the cordiality of greetings exchanged between men of stout republicanism, democrats or even rank outsiders who cannot be depended on to affiliate with either party, when the test of a close vote comes.

It was the same in the house, when 435 members talked, laughed, met new representatives with outstretched hands and marked cordiality and managed also to get in a good deal of political work before the house was called to order.

There was much less routine in the senate for that is what is known as a continuing body, and doesn't begin all over, as does the house every two years. In that way only a few new men were brought before the vice president for taking of the oath, all others who had been elected or appointed before adjournment last March, having taken their oaths of office at that time.

The leaders of both branches have laid plans for a busy session allowing as little time as possible for useless or impossible legislation to block the way to passage of bills.

In the senate, the world court has the right of way, but will be laid aside by agreement to let the Nye case come up for a vote. Nye will be denied a seat, it is fully expected, on the ground that the governor of North Dakota had no legal right to appoint a senator to succeed the late Senator Ladd; opposing views will be expressed by certain democratic senators, on the ground that a senator is a state officer and so comes under the appointive right of the governor, whereas a senator, is a national official, would necessarily be elected under the laws of North Dakota. About two days are to be allowed for the debate. Then the world court will come to the front.

In the meantime a number of bills will be introduced, among them a public building bill to erect necessary government buildings in the District of Columbia, but apparently a blanket public building bill for postoffices throughout the country will find hard sledding in the economy plan of the administration and congress.

Senator Borah insists the anti-court sentiment is growing and some of the opposition senators are hopeful his measure will fail the necessary vote to pass.

The sensation of the New Year's reception at the white house, was the presence of Senator William E. Borah who smilingly acknowledged it was the first social event he had ever attended in the executive mansion, except his recent dinner as guest of the president.

Senator Borah has held that social affairs are not an obligation on senators or congressmen, and that a white house invitation does not savor of the royal degree that makes an invitation a command. When he entered the great east room and took his place in the line about to be formed, a murmur of surprise went through the room. "Why there's Borah," was whispered from ear to ear; "does that mean that he will stand with the president on the world court after all?" Mr. Borah merely smiled and said he came to pay his respects to the president, and plainly showed, that though he may not agree with President Coolidge on many details of administration or legislation, he holds him in very high regard. When asked if he proposed to go a step further and attend the diplomatic luncheon given by Secretary of State Kellogg, Mr. Borah again smiled and said, "No, Mrs. Borah is ill. I shall not attend." As Borah has never attended, his absence, though now chairman of the foreign relations committee, will not be regarded as a slight. New England carried off the palm at a reception. Not only are President and Mrs. Coolidge New Englanders, but the supreme court, as it was presented, was led by Chief Justice Taft, of New Haven, the senate, by Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, president pro tempore, and the house, jointly by Speaker Longworth and Floor Leader Tilson, of Connecticut.

Although the affair was truly democratic and simple, yet there was, of necessity assignments according to official rank, and the brilliant costumes of diplomats made it something out of the ordinary. The minister from Denmark, for instance, wore his full court dress, of bright scarlet, heavily trimmed with solid pure gold, and with much white and silver and many medals glittering with precious jewels. The delegation of Japanese was the next striking sight; there was a score or more, all very short, all very plump all very brown, all much bespangled with gold and jewels. With them were the women of the delegation, dressed in most modern fashion, with short skirts, pointed toes and high heeled shoes, and bearing all the ear-marks of Parisian gowns, and grooming. But the 3,000 plain citizens of the United States, who were received in the early afternoon, received no less warm and cordial greetings from President and Mrs. Coolidge than did the official dignitaries who led the morning reception.

Lest the citizens of the United States fail to realise that the nation's capitol is the great "show place of the nation," it may be well to say that the capitol, with its adjunct, the senate and house office buildings, cover 46 acres of floor space, yet none of the buildings are more than five stories in height. It takes a constant force of 400 employes to keep the buildings clean and in order besides extra help on big occasions.

Members of congress who spent Christmas in their New England homes returned in time to be in their seats at the opening of congress today. The postoffice bill will be the first to be considered in the house, which has already gone ahead in its legislation with strides far in excess of its usual custom. A June adjournment is predicted by practically all senate and house leaders.

Congressman Tilson, republican leader of the house, issued a holiday statement in which he said, in substance, that the country is on such a high wave of prosperity that only unwise action by the people of the country can change the tide of success. He referred to the confidence the entire nation has in President Coolidge and admonished the republicans to keep a tight grip on the policy of honesty progress and achievement they have. Colonel Tilson is making good as leader and already has the legislative program well in hand.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

"I saw a cheering sight today," remarked the fluffy-haired blond, laying aside her sewing and accepting a cup of tea and a buttered muffin. "There were three 18-year-old girls on the bus that I came out here in this afternoon, girls of the most expensive looking type. And not one of the three had anything on her face but skin."

"How d'you mean skin?" inquired the young matron with the auburn wave, in amasement. "It sounds like one of those Mexican peeled dogs."

"Oh, no," explained the fluffy-haired blond, casually. "I mean an honest-to-goodness nature complexion, you know."

"Hmmmmm," said the young matron with the auburn wave.

"Hmmmmm, yourself," retorted the fluffy-haired blond, reaching for another muffin. "I'd almost forgotten how pretty a regular kid can be."

The sewing circle nodded.

"Their skirts covered their knees quite politely, too," added the fluffy-haired blond, "and they even had sleeves on their arms."

The circle murmured astonishment.

"But don't you think," said the newest member timidly, "that their manners and morals are just only—"

"No, I don't!" said the young matron with the auburn wave, stirring her tea so violently that the cup slipped and her hostess rushed to the rescue of her Colport china.

"This just only business won't do," continued the young matron with the auburn wave, when order was restored. "Up until recently I too have been stoutly maintaining that our rising generation was not really decadent. Only posing, you know—frankness and independence and too innocent to realise it's own brashness, and all that sort of stuff. The regular line of argument that we hear so constantly—"

The young matron with the auburn wave paused morosely.

"Most of my married friends with daughters coming along toward that age have been stoutly maintaining the same thing," she said, "but I've noticed lately that they do their insisting in an increasingly loud voice, and with a panicky look around the eyes. And I overheard a scrap of conversation the other day—well—"

"O, tell us!" urged the sewing circle.

"Can't," said the young matron firmly, "because it was conversation between a mother and daughter whom you all know, and it's hard luck enough for a nice woman to have such a vulgar looking child attached to her, anyway, without the disgusting remarks of the offspring being circulated about. It positively made my hair curl."

"That's nice," suggested the fluffy-haired blond. "I'd listen inan any line of conversation that would give me a permanent wave that was permanent. Which brings me back to the point we started from. The cheering sight I saw today may be a hopeful omen for the future, but it gave me quite a jolt, personally."

"What's it to you?" inquired the young matron.

"Much," said the fluffy-haired blond. "I have to maintain my own giddy prestige, don't I? For the last five years the debutantes have gone around looking like such imbeciles that all we older girls have had to do to keep a mile ahead of them was to wear decent clothes and have our faces washed. And of course to turn up our noses just a little in the grande dame manner. It's been so easy that I suspect we've got lazy."

"Well," continued the fluffy-haired blond, "if the sign I noted today was a true sign, and the young of the species is about to return to normal, you'd better go get a wiggle, as the lady robin said to her husband at supper time. You've been awfully careless about your hands lately and the coil of your hair is crooked."

"Horrors!" exclaimed the young matron, feeling of her hairpins. "This thing may be only too true. Think of the time we've been wasting. And besides—" she hesitated.

"Cheer up," said the fluffy-haired blond, lightly, "we may be out of practice, but what's that? Any time I'm afraid of the debs or subdebs will be when I'm bald and pigeon-toed and tired of living, and that will be never. I'm going home now on foot. Three miles before dinner beat a lip stick to nothing. Au 'voir."—Exchange.

From Small Beginnings

Christopher Columbus, the Great Voyager

For generation after generation as far as is known, there had been no sailor in the family of Colombo—of "Columbus" as we call him today. Without exception every member of the family had sat within doors and had worked with tools and implements, using the hands very skillfully and never venturing very far from home. So far as is known there had been no spirit of adventure shown in the family, no call to go to the remote places of the earth, so far as is known Christopher Columbus himself, up to the age of about 23, showed no spirit of adventure. Those who saw him about 1473, saw a young weaver who went about his business very soberly and very faithfully. Then something happened. What it was, no man knows. What it resulted in was the discovery of a new continent, the great land of America. The decisions of youth are often tremendous in all reality, but this decision of the young Italian weaver to leave his home and his loom and go a-roving was one of the most momentous decisions ever made. "Where are you off for?" someone asked the youth. "Off down the Mediterranean, away to the island of Chios!" Columbus may have answered. That, apparently, was his first voyage—merely a sail down the blue Mediterranean to the Green Islands. It is an interesting picture to think of the young weaver standing at the rail of the strange old sailing vessel, looking off at the lapping waves and saying to himself: "I should love to sail on—and on— and on—beyond the edge of nowhere!" When he was 26 he sailed in the other direction, passed out of the straits of Gibraltar, and was captured by pirates. Perhaps, after all, Columbus owed his greatness to his mother-in-law. That good lady one day showed her sailor son-in-law some queer papers about the sea. Christopher studied them, bent over them, and was away in imagination. They were papers about the unknown oceans, and the lands that lay beyond. That was the beginning of Columbus's dreams of sailing to a new beyond. America owes its discovery to a mother-in-law! Everyone knows how, at 51, Columbus began to try to interest the rulers in his great project, and how at last, at 41, he was the first to sail across the unknown seas. Few remember that at 49, after many famous journeys, he was sent back from America to Spain in chains. He was a man who experienced poverty, hard work, dangers, wrecks, pirates, prison and the favor of princes, and who won immortal fame. Even after his death he crossed the ocean twice, or his body was carried back and forth. All honor to the weaver boy who dreamed his dreams and set out on his travels!

Stories That Recall Others

Mutually Tired.

John, age five, is a winsome youngster, quite popular with the juvenile colony in his neighborhood. Only occasionally does John transgress the laws laid down by his mother, but recently he happened to get "in bad" and it was necessary to administer a lecture or two.

The last one was at the dinner table where John was listening politely to his mother's advice. Finally she said: "Now, John, I am getting mighty tired of giving these lectures, mighty tired."

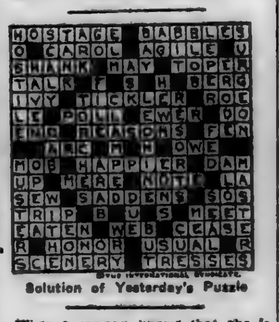
John promptly replied: "Yes, mother, and I'm tired of being the audience."

Disappointed.

The day before Christmas the department in which Mr. X worked was extremely busy. Just when the rush was greatest and Mr. X had his hands full he heard a voice behind him that sounded like the paymaster, saying, "Merry Christmas." Mr. X replied in kind and when the rush had ceased a bit found a long white envelope on his bench. He started to open the envelope, but the rush set in again and he slipped it in his coat pocket and forgot about it.

At Christmas dinner a friend of Mr. X told of a man who had worked for 25 years for a firm who had received a gift of $900 and a bonus in addition which brought his total up to $1,100. Toward the end of the story Mr. X rose abruptly and hurried to his business suit, his mind tumbling one thought after another. One thought was: What sort of gift might come to one after 15 years' faithful service.

Hastily opening the envelope he drew out a paper resembling a check. On the partly opened check Mr. X saw, handwritten, the words, "Three hundred." "Wow!" exclaimed Mr. X. Opening the check up full Mr. X read: "From the Bank of Prosperity pay to bearer 365 happy days of 1926."



Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

When a woman knows that she is homely she isn't ashamed to boast of her ability as a cook.

Left arm sprained and ligaments torn

FELL FROM TOP OF BOX CAR

Sustains painful injury but gets quick relief

Men who handle big hazardous jobs demand quick, effective help for sprains, strains, lame backs and bruises.

A freight brakeman on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway fell off the top of a box car on his left arm, spraining it and tearing the ligaments loose.

"I suffered great pain," he writes. "Then I got a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and it relieved the pain right away. I have now no pain to speak of at all. The swelling has nearly all gone down." (Name and address given on request.)

What is the magic of this amazingly effective remedy? Sloan's sends an increased supply of healing blood right to the spot that hurts. That's what conquers the pain. No need to rub. Sloan's does the whole job. Just put it on. Quickly and surely, it kills pain, reduces swelling and inflammation, drives out stiffness from lame muscles. Get a bottle. All druggists—35 cents.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

OBITUARY

Nathaniel T. Bacon

Nathaniel T. Bacon, a son of the late Rev. Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon formerly a pastor in Norwich, died Sunday morning at his home, The Acorns, Peace Dale, R. I.

Mr. Bacon was in his 68th year and had been at his office Saturday morning, planning to leave Monday on a trip to Ohio, Alabama and California.

He graduated from Yale and was a civil engineer, and for many yeras he was associated with the Society Process company of Syracuse, N. Y., having his headquarters at Peace Dale. He gained some note as an inventor, linguist and chemist and was the author of several treatises on chemical formulae and molecular action.

He was also for many years president of the Narragansett Pier railroad and as such was the first to introduce the use of the gasoline bus for short line railroads in this vicinity. He was also the principal owner of the Sea View railroad property, a South county electric line abandoned a few years ago.

He had wide interests in the south, where he owned a large cotton plantation and was engaged in the lumbering industry.

He was deacon of Peace Dale Congregational church and, among philanthropies, gave much of his time to Near East Relief work. It was while engaged in this work abroad last summer that he was summoned to the bedside of his wife, Helen Hazard Bacon, also widely known for her philanthropic interest, who was critically ill. Mrs. Bacon rallied after her husband's return on Oct. 19, but died Oct. 26.

Mr. Bacon was an honorary member of the American Chemical society and the Society of Colonial Governors and a member of the Yale club.

He was married on Oct. 6, 1885, to Helen Hazard of one of the pioneer families of Peace Dale. A son, Leonard T. Bacon, now in California, and a daughter, Mrs. E. D. Keith, of New Haven, and five granddaughters survive him.

WEDDING.

Miss Jessie K. Spaulding, daughter of Mrs. Carrie G. Spaulding of Ithuca, N. Y., was married Saturday night to Benjamin F. Lewis of Springfield, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Johnson of 112 Benedict terrace, Longmeadow, Mass. Rev. Randolph S. Merrill of the First church of Longmeadow, performed the ceremony. A few friends and relatives attended. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Johnson and a teacher in the public schools of Ithaca. Mr. Lewis is the son pf the late Rev. Charles E. Lewis of New London, and is now engaged in the clothing business in Springfield.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH RE-ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the First Baptist church was held at the church on Monday evening, preceded by the annual banquet at 6:30, which was followed by the roll call to which there were 126 responses, either in person or by letter.

The business meeting was opened at 7:45 with the pastor, Rev. E. C Dunbar, presiding, and prayer was offered by Walter M. Cowan, superintendent of the Sunday school. The annual reports of the pastor, the church officers and the different organizations showed an active year in which the membership and the finances has been maintained in a satisfactory manner. During the year the church celebrated its 125th anniversary.

Church officers were re-elected as follows: Clerk, Miss Mazie I. Stamm, treasurer, Mrs. Nellie Rathbun; treasurer of benevolences, Miss Gladys Thornes; trustees, Deacon Charles R. Cross, E. Lattue Bliven, Frank D. Davis, Frank Robinson and Edward S. Babbitt were re-elected deacons and Percival Harwood was elected auditor The church council consists of the following church members: Mrs. Frank Robinson, Mrs. Clarence Smith, Mrs Lena Perkins, Earl Stamm, George Rathbun, Mrs. Charles Stamm, Mrs Charles R. Cross, Mrs. Herbert Willey, Herbert Willey, Jr., Mrs. Martin Farrell, Mrs. Lina Leach and Mrs. Annie Church.

The officers of the Sunday school were ratified as follows: Superintendent, Walter M. Cowan; assistant superintendent, George H. Amburn; secretary, Miss Marguerite Copeland, treasurer, William C. Amburn; collector, James Tourtellotte; chairman of birthday fund, Mrs. Lena Perkins; educational committee, Mrs. E. LaRue Bliven, chairman; Miss Bernice Willey, George H. Amburn, Miss Jessie Leach.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Louis A. Wheeler, for baskets given the church, was passed, a rising vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Minnie Amburn and her committee, for the banquet, and there was a vote of thanks to the newspapers for publishing church items.

INTERPRETIVE DANCES AT PRETTY DINNER DANCE

A pretty dinner dance was given Monday evening at the Wauregan hotel by the Monday evening adult class of Mrs. Edward Andrews. The tables were arranged in cabaret form in the ball room, with orange candelabra and flowers as the decorations, and dinner was served from 8 to 9. Favors were distributed and between the courses a programme of interpretive dances was given that comprised the following: Anitra's dance, Dolly Edmond; Zigeuner Aze, a toe dance, Bella Allard; The Gypsy Vagabond, Ruth Brown; Polyhymia, Nancy Pitcher. Arnold Goldstein was pianist for the interpretive dances and Zimmerman's orchestra played for the dancing after the dinner hour.

CONTROVERSY WITH CHICAGO OVER NEW ENGLAND FREIGHT RATES

The New England Traffic league, of which the Norwich Chamber of Commerce is a member, has recently sent to the local organization the appended explanation of the controversy between the western civic organizations and the eastern organizations, regarding the Eastern Class Rate Readjustment.

The West is appealing to the interstate commerce commission to have a straight mileage charge rate from the east to the west instead of the present differential rate which has existed for some time and which is of interest to all shippers and manufacturers of New England. For some time past the interstate commerce commission has been holding hearings on this subject and the New England Traffic league has employed able counsel and rate experts to be represented at these hearings.

The whole question shows a tendency on the part of the middle western section of our country to secure all the business possible from the New England states. As is well known, New England must import all its raw materials, the freight rates of which increases the over-head costs of production which compels the New England manufacturer to enter keen competition with his western competitor. There is grave danger that if the rates proposed by the western associations are adopted, that many New England industries will feel the effect of the western competition and will lose a large amount of annual business to the west. The appended explanation indicates the stand taken by the New England Traffic league on this question with the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Eastern Class Rate Readjustment

To Members of the New England Traffic League:

It has come to the attention of the League officers that the transportation department of the Chicago Association of Commerce has sent to some New England manufacturers, a copy of a letter addressed to the undersigned, relative to league circular 465.

As there seems to be no way of determining the extent to which this practice has been followed, the league, at its last regular meeting, authorized the preparation and distribution of a circular containing first, a reproduction of circular 465; second, a reproduction of Mr. Haynes' letter of November 27, to the chairman of the executive committee; and third, such extracts from the testimony of the Chicago witness as occasioned our previous circular.

While disliking to take this step, under the circumstances, it was decided as necessary in order that all might determine for themselves the justification for the circular questioned.

On November 7, last, the following information was distributed to the League's Membership in circular form:

NEW ENGLAND TRAFFIC LEAGUE

Position of the Chicago Association of Commerce in the Eastern Class Rate Case

To All Members:

Presumably, you will be interested to learn that at the Chicago hearings in the so-called Eastern Class Rate Investigation, representatives of the Chicago Association of Commerce appeared in behalf of many Illinois interests, including their own association, advocating:

1. That the group rates so long operative to and from New England and C. F. A. territory should be discontinued and straight mileage rates substituted.

Every New England shipper realizes that a straight mileage scale to and from the territories questioned would very materially restrict the distribution of New England merchandise in the middle-west.

2. That the practice of applying New York rates westbound from the Boston Rate Zone to C. F. A. territory be discontinued, and the eastbound scale which is somewhat higher than the westbound scale applied in both directions.

In other words, the middle-west is out for an equalization of rates and suggests that it be brought about by raising the westbound rate basis, and further states, that those jobbers and retailers who, in a majority of instances, pay the freight will gladly meet the additional charges resulting from an adjustment such as is proposed.

Perhaps some will be interested to develop whether or not this is the opinion of those they do business with.

This is distributed merely as a matter of information.

F. W. Hunt, Secretary. W. H. Day Chairman, Executive Committee.

On November 27, Mr. J. P. Haynes, traffic commissioner of the Chicago Association of Commerce, addressed a letter to the chairman of the league's executive committee, taking exception to this circular. As information his letter follows in full:

THE CHICAGO ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE
10 South La Salle Street
Chicago
November 27, 1925.
File 100-1.

Mr. W. H. Day,
Chairman, Executive Committee,
New England Traffic League,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Day:

Through the courtesy of one of our members we have received a copy of your circular No. 465 of the seventh instant, under the caption: "Position of The Chicago Association of Commerce In The Eastern Class Rate Case."

Aside from the misstatement of fact, the promulgation of this circular represents about the most unethical practice that has ever come to our attention, and we are at a total loss to appreciate how an organization of the standing of the New England Traffic league could stoop to such a practice.

The information conveyed to your members through the medium of this circular is in many respects absolutely false, and in every other respect exceedingly misleading.

You state that we have advocated that the group rates so long operative be discontinued, and straight mileage rates substituted. What we did advocate was a continuation of grouping, but more recognition of mileage in establishing the rates between groups.

You further state that we have advocated that the practice of applying New York rates westbound from the Boston rate zone to C. F. A. territory be discontinued, and the eastbound scale, which is somewhat higher than the westbound scale, applied in both directions. We are at a total loss to understand how you could have misconstrued our position in this matter, as we undertook to conclusively show, and we feel that we succeeded in showing, that the present westbound rates from Boston on the New York basis are unduly high, and that the traffic moving thereunder is contributing more than its proper share of the burden of transportation. The application of our tentative scale, as submitted in this proceeding, would result in a first class rate between Boston and Chicago of $1.30, as compared with the present westbound rate of $1.43 and the present eastbound rate of $1.49; this tentative rate of $1.30 is based upon the Chicago-Boston mileage, and if the average mileage of the present Boston Group should be applied the rate would probably be further reduced.

Your further statement to the effect that we have testified that the equalization of the eastbound and westbound rates should be brought about by raising the westbound rates, and that our jobbers and retailers will gladly meet the additional charges is not supported by any testimony of record.

Throughout Mr. Hochstedler's testimony he indicated by numerous comparisons and stressed the fact that under the present adjustment, as a whole, the long haul traffic is being unduly penalized, and insisted that this unjust penalty be removed in the readjustment of the rates under consideration.

Now let us for a moment consider the source of this investigation. The joint carrier-shipper petition seeking the investigation, and to which your name is subscribed, advances two reasons as justifying the proceeding, viz To effect a solution of the fourth section problem, and to harmonize the interterritorial rate system with the existing intraterritorial rate system in the Central Freight Association and New England territories. The lack of harmony as between the interterritorial and intraterritorial rate systems consists of:

1. Percentage relationship of the lower classes to first class.

2. Higher rates for longer distances and lower rates for shorter distances under the interterritorial rate system than under the intraterritorial rate system.

3. Different rates in opposite directions under the interterritorial rate system while under the intraterritorial rate system the rates in all cases apply between.

In our presentation we have undertaken to suggest to the commission a practical way of overcoming the difficulties which you, together with other shippers and the carriers, told the commission should be overcome as a result of this proceeding, and at the same time protect to the greatest possible extent the long haul traffic, including traffic between New England and Chicago.

We trust that you will be big enough and broad enough to immediately withdraw your circular No. 465, and transmit to your membership a true statement of the attitude of this association. Otherwise, as much as we deplore such methods, it will obviously be necessary for us to see that your members are given a picture of the true situation.

We shall greatly appreciate early advice of your further action in the matter.

Yours very truly,
(signed) J. P. HAYNES,
12-19-25 Traffic Director

The first charge made in our circular is that Chicago advocates the discontinuance of the group rates so long operative to and from New England and C. F. A. Territory. At page 8553 of the record appears the following language:

"Q. I am clear, am I not, in so far as Michigan is concerned, that your scheme would abolish the groupings?

A. The present grouping, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. It certainly would, not only in Michigan but every place else."

The second charge made is that Chicago advocates the substitution of straight mileage rates for the present group rates. At page 8538 of the record the following language appears:

"Q. Is it fair to summarize your testimony by saying that you would subordinate everything to mileage?

A. So far as the class rate structure, as such, is concerned, yes.

Q. And you would ignore everything else?

A. Yes sir."

The third charge made is that Chicago advocates that the practice of applying New England rates westbound from the Boston rate zone to C. F. A. Territory be discontinued and the eastbound scale, which is somewhat higher than the westbound scale, applied in both directions. At page 8569 of the record, Witness Hochstedler said:

"The proposition submitted by carriers contemplates the continuation of a basis of rates, that in our opinion, cannot be justified; that is, the practice of carrying different bases of rates eastbound than westbound between given points. We are opposed to any scale now under consideration or that may be proposed which is not to apply between given points in this territory."

In equalising the rates in both directions, Mr. Haynes admits in the fifth paragraph of his letter that they would discontinue the use of the New York rate basis westbound from Boston rate points. Therefore, it seems fair to interpret that his organization advocates the application of the eastbound basis in both directions. In fact, when discussing this issue under cross-examination, Witness Hochstedler said at page 8529 of the record:

"I would advocate that the New England Central Freight association rates be placed upon a relative level with the C. F. A.-New York rates."

The fourth charge made is that Chicago alleges that those jobbers and retailers who, in a majority of instances pay the freight will gladly meet the additional charges resulting from an adjustment such as is proposed. At page 8514 of the record, when discussing the effect upon Chicago jobbers and retailers on an equalization of the rates to and from C. F. A. territory, the following language appears:

"Q. Then your decision was based clearly, squarely and entirely upon the discriminatory theory without any effect upon the shippers?

A. Naturally, the westbound shippers and receivers of westbound freight will have to pay more under that adjustment."

Commencing at Page 8529, the following language appears:

"Q. Have you discussed this question of increasing the rates from New England westbound with any of your jobbers in Chicago?

A. We have.

Q. Is Marshall Field & Company in favor of increasing the rates on shoes and drygoods from New England to Chicago?

A. I think possibly we can put one that will testify.

Q. I am asking you, as a member of of their representatives on the stand the committee, I assume you found that out. I am willing to take your word for it.

MR. HAYNES: Mr. Commissioner, I object to that question, for the reason that the Chicago Association of Commerce, of which Marshall Field & Company is a member, has four thousand receivers and shippers, of which they are only one. The transportation committee of that association has endorsed the principle of the same rates between. That carries for them as well as all other members.

COMMISSIONER EASTMAN: The objection is overruled. The witness can answer whether or not he knows anything about the position of Marshall Field & Company. If he does, he can say so.

WITNESS: I have not discussed the matter with Marshall Field & Company. I have with Carson Pirie & Scott, who are in the same business as Marshall Field & Company, and their position is that there is no justification for the principle of lower westbound rates than eastbound."

The following pertinent quotations from the record speak for themselves:

"Q. Well, if you were located in New England instead of Chicago, would you advocate the same kind of mileage scale as you advocate here?

A. I do not care to answer that question, I am not located in New England."

At page 8588, the following language appears:

"Q. Take those you are now appearing for, the shippers of Illinois, will they be benefitted on the whole substantially by the discarding of the McGraham scale and the adoption of a mileage basis such as you have described?

A. Why, I think they will."

Reproduced as per vote of the league December 15, 1925.

W. H. DAY, Chairman,
Executive Committee.

Secretary.

FELL INTO TRAP WHILE OPERATING BUS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 4—Concededly the victim of a rather shabby deal John J. Shea, Jr., 24, of Norwich, was presented in a justice's court in the town of Sterling today. Justice Edith M. Kennedy, of the town of Plainfield presiding, to answer to a charge of violating the motor vehicle laws Shea has been seeking a place as driver of one of the motor coaches operating on a line between Providence and Norwich. This line makes a practice of operating busses from Providence via Fairbanks Hill, to the Connecticut-Rhode Island line near Oneco, and then transferring the passengers to a bus bearing Connecticut registrations and running between the state line and Norwich. There have been occasions when busses having only Rhode Island registrations have been run over into Connecticut. Keeping along until it met the connecting bus, Shea, acting as a spare driver, on a recent day, was found operating a bus without a Connecticut registration in the town of Plainfield. State Officer Edward Streamens of the Danielson barracks boarded the bus and when the machine was running through Sterling placed Shea under arrest for operating a motor vehicle without proper registration. It is understood that the regular driver rather "ducked" out on Shea when he found the bus was being watched by a state officer and is alleged to have told Shea to take the bus right along into Providence, suggesting the probability of his getting a regular job as driver. In view of all the circumstances, Justice Kennedy imposed a fine of $25 and costs, remitting $15 of the fine. Shea had to scurry around on his own account to get the money to pay the fine and costs.

MUSIC ASSOCIATION ENJOYS SCOTCH-CANADIAN SOPRANO

The January meeting of the Norwich Music Association, held Monday evening, in Slater Hall annex, had a very enjoyable programme furnished by Marion Armstrong, Scottish-Canadian soprano, with Miss Elly Luettman accompanist.

Miss Armstrong displayed a voice of pleasing quality which she used very effectively in her selections and was especially delightful in her group of old-time Scotch songs which concluded the programme. As encore numbers she gave two old Scotch songs Chairlie Is My Darling and The Old Fashioned Town.

Miss Luettman, who provided especially satisfactory accompaniments and was on the programme for a piano solo, was obliged to cancel this because of illness.

Miss Armstrong's programme was given as follows, including as an encore number, after the second group of songs, There Are Fairies In The Bottom of Our Garden:

Aria—Suicidio from La .....
Gioconda, ... Ponchielli
Apalsemen ..... Flegier
Invocation to the Sun-God .. Troyer
The Lady Picking Mulberries .. Kelley
Auld Scotch Sangs
The Hundred Pipers
My Ain Folk
There's Nae Luck About the House
When You and I were Young Maggie.

RESERVES DECISION IN TRIAL OF $500 SUIT

Judge C. B. Waller reserved decision in the common pleas court here Monday after hearing the trial of the $500 damage suit of Joseph J. Chirigo, a contractor of this city, against Pasquale and Marie Angelone, also of Norwich.

The plaintiff seeks to recover $365, alleged to be due him on a contract for services rendered in constructing an addition to the Angelone home in October, 1924.

The defense claims that the addition was not constructed in a good workmanlike manner as set forth in the complaint and refuses to pay balance due.

A counter claim is also set up for $21.60 for a number of bushels of potatoes.

FUNERALS
Moses H. Ballou

Moses H. Ballou, formerly a resident of this city, died Saturday at his home in Uxbridge, Mass. Mr. Ballou, while a resident of Norwich, lived at No. 429 East Main street. He was employed by the New London-Norwich Poster Advertising company until about a year ago when he moved to Uxbridge.

Mr. Ballou was born in Central Village and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard W. Ballou. He is survived by his father, his wife and seven children.

CIVIL SUPERIOR COURT IN COMMON PLEAS ROOM

The January additional session of the superior court, civil side, with Judge C. L. Avery presiding will be held this (Tuesday) morning in this city in the common pleas court room as the superior court room will be occupied by the session of the criminal side of the superior court.

Cases assigned for trial in the civil side of the court are Thomas J. Kelly, trustee vs. Norwich Savings Society, Margaret F. Kendall vs. James Lumsden, et al, John Nazaruk vs. John Krwosknik, et al.

Wild Animals On Display.

Three big lions that were on display in cages in the window of the Talking Machine Shop on Franklin street and two monkeys in the Bellas candy store window on Franklin square attracted much attention on Monday. They are parts of an indoor circus that is to appear later in the week at the Palace theatre. The animal troupe includes also an elephant, Lucy, the animal that played in "Bally of the Sawdust," a trick mule and several trained ponies which are housed in a barn in the city.

SUSIE AND HER BOY FRIEND SEE THE OLD YEAR OUT AND THE NEW IN

The Boy Friend took Susie out to see the New Year's eve sights and apparently the girl saw plenty according to the letter she writes to the sports editor. Her letter follows:

Dear Sports Editor:

Gosh, ain't New Year's a wonderful time? I'll say it is. Never had so much fun in all my life as I did New Year's eve. I guess I ain't the only one either. The boy friend musta had a change o' heart 'cause he's put some o' them musty shekels o' him into circulation. Whatda you know, he's been and traded the old fliver for a new car. One o' them shiny blue ones with a lotta nickels on it, overgrown tires an' breaks on all them round wheels. He calls it a coupe. Oh boy, ain't he stuck up over that boat.

Well, he pilots that new bus up to my homicide on New Year's eve and stays outside tootin' that horn. I didn't pay no 'tention to it, thinkin' it was some fresh shiek eallin' on the jane next door. 'Twasn't long 'fore the bell rings and when I goes to the door there's the boy. "Didn't ya hear me blowin'?" he asks. "Was that you, says I, I thought it was a automobile." "Well it is a auto, says he, just come out an' give it the once over with them beautiful green eyes o' yourn." Gosh, I thought the boy musta been hittin' the high spots, 'cause he ain't generally mushy like that. Well, I goes ouf an' when I sees that hack I forgets I'm a lady an' that the neighbors is all hangin' outta the winders gettin' a eyes full. "Is it for me?" I asks. "Well, it ain't eggsactly yours but you is goin' to have the first ride," says he. Well, I runs into the house an' grabs my best clothes and gets into 'em like I was goin' to a fire. When I comes out the boy is polishin' the car with his silk handkychef an' hops in.

"Where you wanta go?" he asks. I tells I ain't fussy an' we starts off. He tells me why he didn't give nothing but candy an' stockin's for Christmas was 'cause he hadda make a first payment on the car. Well, I forgives him and we rolls along down towards New London and otst towards New Haven. Gosh, they was a lotta cars on the road and some o' them busses musta had a lotta alchahol in the radiators 'cause they was goin' like my old man walks when he gets luminated. They was plenty cars parked along the road, too. Well, we drives along for some miles when we comes to a place all lit up like church on Xmas. The boy friend stops an' we gets out an' goes in. When we gets inside, oh boy, what a scene. Gosh, the buildin' wasn't the only thing what was lit up. They was little tables all 'round the place an' on them tables was nothin' but bottles, all colors, all shapes an' sizes, quarts, pints and etc.

Gosh, I seen right off that this want no place for no young innercents like me an' the boy, an' I declares myself to him. But no, he was goin' to see the sights and believe me, they was plenty to look at. Well, we gets a couple seats at a table with three fellers an' three girls, or at least they was tryin' to make folks think they was maidens. They couldn't fool me 'cause I could see right through the paint. One o' the fellers asks me if I was thirsty, and when I say's yes, he pours out some white stuff from a bottle what has a feller's name on it. Gorton, was the feller's name, I think. I was superstitious of the stuff an' I only sips it. It had a taste like wintergreen and it makes my knees feel funny so I lays off the stuff. The boy deems likewise an' I sees right away that we'd better get out 'cause I think that stuff was botze. I know some o' them girls had been indulgin' in something besides water the way they acted.

They was one feller I knew from Norwich an' he was actin' like a plain feller. He'd take six or seven bottles and stand 'em on end an' then walk on the tops without fallin' off. Then he'd throw 'em up an' catch like a jugler. Gosh, I bet he couldn't do that without bein' all lit up.

Well, long towards midnight things got pretty rough and noisy, everybody havin' horns and paper hats and confettie. Well, when midnight comes the lights go out an' somebody grabs me and kisses me. Gosh, I was mad and I hauls off an' wallops him. I thought at first it was the boy friend but it twant 'cause he was huggin' some other girl. Gosh, I was sore and believe the boy friend knew it 'cause he says innercentlike "Didn't I kiss you when them sights was out?" "You knowa darn well you didn't" I tells him, "but you ain't got nothin' on me 'cause some feller kisses me." Gosh, then he was sore, but I didn't tell him I socked the other lad. I knows hows to play my points.

Gosh, they was plenty liquor in that place an' I thinks. "O, Prohibition where is thy enforcement?" I hope you didn't go to none o' them parties 'cause the temptations is great. Well, we gets home all right but it ain't no fault o' the boy friend.

Well, I seen where them fellers Dugas and Barber is goin' to bowl for $100. I am goin to see that matches too. Gosh, I went over to them alleys with the boy friend but they was busy so we didn't stay but I'm goin' agin some time. I don't get much time seein's how I'm learnin' to drive the coop. Gosh, if I ever learns to guide one o' them autas without Rollerin. Whoa every time I wanta stop I'll be a lucky kid.

Well here's how,

Yours as ever,
SUSIE.

P. S. This is a punk letter but its the best I could do 'cause I think I musta drunk more'n I thought I did New Year's eve.

CARPENTIER COMING TO AMERICA AS MANAGER OF SPANISH HEAVYWEIGHT

PARIS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Georges Carpentier, former light heavyweight champion of the world, sails Wednesday on the Majestic for his third fistic invasion of the United States within five years.

Carpentier announced that his principal purpose in sailing for America at this time is to represent Paulino, the Spanish heavyweight, in American negotiations until Francois Descamps, manager for both, reaches the United States.

Descamps, recently received an offer from Tex Rickard, the New York promoter, for a bout between Paulino, who is known in Europe as the "Tiger of the Pyrenees," and the "Wild Bull of the Pampas," Luis Angel Firpo, of Argentina. The wily Frenchman considered the offer satisfactory, but as Paulino has been signed to meet Soldier Jones, the Canadian heavyweight, in Paris, February 2, he has delegated Carpentier to meet Rickard and sign final articles on behalf of the Spaniard.

The former light heavyweight champion himself shower offers to meet either Jack Delaney or Paul Berlenbach, the present champion of his class, but was loath to say he was ready to accept either offer. He already has a contract with a Los Angeles promoter to meet the winner of a bout between Sailor Huffman and Jimmy Delaney and would prefer to go through with this fight before tackling Jack Delaney, the tough French Canadian, or Berlenbach.

Carpentier said, however, that it was quite unlikely he would do any fighting in America except that he would carry out his Los Angeles contract if called up to do so. Nevertheless he intends to go into light training as soon as he reaches New York. He has been in Descamps training camp at La Guerche for several weeks and says that he feels in as good condition as ever.

Descamps said today that he feels no anxiety concerning the result of the bout between Paulino and Jones and that he expects to leave for New York with his "Tiger of the Pyrnees" about February 10.

In boxing circles here there has been some talk about the intention of the American promoters to stage a fight between Paulino and Carpentier. When asked about this today Georges replied, "I am a married man with a little four year old daughter and don't want to get killed yet."

Will Be Offered Bout With Delaney.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Georges Carpentier will be offered a match with Jack Delaney, Bridgeport light heavyweight, when he arrives here from France, according to Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Tex Rickard.

The Frenchman is expected to accept terms for this engagement, to be held probably in February at the Madison Square Garden. If victorious he will be offered a bout with Paul Berlenbach present holder of the 175-pound title which "Gorgeous Georges" won from Battling Levinsky in 1920 and lost to Battling Siki in 1922.

Carpentier's last visit here was in 1924 when he lost bouts to Tom Gibbons at Michigan City, Ind., and Gene Tunney in New York. His most spectacular invasion occurred in 1921 when he was knocked out by Jack Dempsey in the "Battle of the Century" at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, for the heavyweight championship.

Carpentier was considered to have been past his fistic prime when he made his last American tour. His famous "right" seemed to have lost some of its effectiveness. He will celebrate his thirty-second birthday on January 12, the date on which he is likely to arrive here. He has been fighting since 1907.

PAN-AMERICAN EXHIBITION OPENS WITH 500 PAINTINGS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27 (AP)—Marking the first time South American art has been placed on exhibit here since 1915, the Pan-American Exhibition, with 500 oil paintings and etchings on display, opened today.

The opening was in conjunction with the dedication of the first unit of a series of eight additions to the Los Angeles Museum in Exposition Park.

Artists living in the United States, Mexico, Panama, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Chile, France and Spain are represented in the collection, which will remain on display until January 1, when the Latin-American section will start on a tour of the important museums of the United States, while the North American contingent is visiting South America.

Among the North American artists who have their work on exhibition are Frederick E. Frieseke, Karl Anderson, John H. Gostlicar, Mary Cassatt, John P. Carlson, Leon Kroll, Elmer Schofield and John R. Grabach. Diego Rivera, of Mexico, considered by art critics as one of the greatest living painters, and Manual Vega, Cuban, also have contributed to the exhibition.

EFFECT OF MOVIE HOUSES ON THEATER WILL BE DISCUSSED

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 13 (AP)—Whether the movies and other forms of entertainment have really "killed" the legitimate theater will be discussed by prominent actors, playwrights, managers and educators at a conference on the American theater to open here November 27.

The meeting, held under the auspices of Carnegie Institute of Technology, will be for the additional purpose of studying the potential influence of the community theater movement and to ascertain the nature and extent of the movement now going on in American colleges for the promotion of interest in serious drama.

A survey of all American colleges made by Carnegie Tech shows that 75 per cent of the institutions include some form of dramatic education in their courses of study.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With Christmas and New Years following close on each other, there was not the progress made on local construction work as during the three weeks preceding the last week in the year. Figures showed that more permits had been granted in 1925 than during any previous year but the total valuation of buildings as placed by the owners, was considerably lower than in previous years.

The total valuation of buildings in the city and town of Norwich was $1,-373,875, According to the report of Straus and Co., of New York, who made a survey of building conditions in all cities in the country, to the Norwich total can be added about 15 per cent., as this company claims that owners in Norwich clip off about that amount when making their applications for building permits. This would make Norwich's total for the year approximately $1,600,000, as a correct valuation.

The last quarter of the year showed that there had been 64 permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton, for buildings and alterations valued at approximately $116,700. During the first few days of the new year there were no building permits issued by Fire Marshal Stanton, but it is expected that they will start to come very soon. This is the slack time of the year for building, especially the starting of new structures, the larger proportion of the work at present being interior alterations and work on buildings started during milder weather. All building trade publications predict that 1926 will see an enormous amount of building and that the increased activity in the building lines started during 1925, will increase as the present year advances. According to trade papers there was no real boom in building during 1925 but the growth was steady and there is no prospect that there will be a slump in the building lines. Local contractors look for an increase in building during the present year and it is expected that with a cut in the tax rates, the contracts will be larger than during the past year. There was plenty of work for local contractors but it was small work with very few large contracts.

Westerly

The plans will be completed about January 15 for a new store front for the Ailing Building, High street, Westerly, for the W. S. Ailing Rubber Co. The plans will call for a new front 118 feet long, one story high, with artificial stone and copper trim. Provision will be made for six stores, with the vestibules and tile show-window floors and plate glass and copper show windows.

The Dr. J. Howard Morgan residence at 43 High street, is being demolished to make way for a theater to be erected on that site for David Novogrod. Plans for the proposed new building have not been published as yet in detail.

In Charge of Successful Supper

The committee in charge of a successful supper given Saturday evening, at the Buckingham Memorial by Division No. 19, Ladies' auxiliary, A. O. H., comprised: Mrs. Theodore Levitsky, chairman, assisted by Mrs James Fox, Mrs. Edward Sullivan Mrs. John Niles, Mrs. Mary McNally Mrs. Jeremiah Shea, Mrs. Frederick LaFontaine, Mrs. William Sharkey and Mrs. Patrick Brennan.

Binghams In Washington

United States Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, Mrs. Bingham and their five sons left Hot Springs Saturday night, for Washington, in this town as an engineering camp for Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, have been announced a committee headed by Smith F. Ferguson, of New York City, is raising funds and has been authorized to arange for the proposed construction. It is planned to start work in the spring. The site was acquired by the university several years ago.

New London

Plans are being completed for an addition and alterations to the dwelling of Louis Lubchansky, 49 Howard street. The present house will be changed by making it into an apartment house, containing six apartments of five rooms each. The addition will be of frame construction. New baths will be installed for each apartment and there will be a new steam heating plant and new electric wiring. Work will be started early in the spring.

Bids based on the original plans for alterations to the Pequot Casino property on Pequot avenue were rejected. Architects and engineers, have refigured for Waldo E. and Daisy L. Clark, owners of the property.

The contract has been awarded for the proposed addition and interior changes at the post office building on State street. The addition will be in the rear, of brick construction, one story high. The alterations will include a new alcove in the lobby, providing additional boxes. There will be a new heating plant and other improvements. The plans were prepared by the architectural office of the treasury department at Washington, D. C.

MISS WILLS HOPES TO MEET SUZANNE IN EUROPE

NEW YORK, Jan. 4—(AP)—Expressing hope that her trip would bring forth a contest with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, despite illness which forced the French tennis star to withdraw temporarily from a recent tournament at Cannes, Helen Wills, three-time national women's champion arrived here today from her home in Berkeley, Cal., preparatory to sailing for Europe.

Accompanied by her mother, she will embark Wednesday on the DeGrasse for Havre. They will remain in Europe, Miss Wills said, until next August. Although she has made no definite arrangements to compete on the tennis courts of France, the California girl, who intends to study art abroad in addition to exhibiting her skill at the net, asserted she intended to play "extensively and intensively" in important tournaments of the Riviera winter season, affording Mlle. Lenglen frequent opportunity to cross rackets with her.

"Would I be disappointed if Mlle. Lenglen's illness prevented her from playing against me? Well, I will admit I have been looking forward to a match with her, and certainly would enjoy such a privilege," Miss Wills said. "If I do not meet her in southern France this winter, there is the possibility that we will be opponents at Wimbledon, England, next July, where the American women's team, of which I expect to be a member, will compete."

FABER'S TEAM BEATS BATTERY FOR FIRST TIME

In the 5-30 game in the Norwich Indoor league Monday evening at the armory the Stars administered the first defeat of the season to the Battery B team by the score of 5 to 1. The winners started off strong piling up eight runs in the first two innings while the losers lone tally came in the ninth when Lewis singled, stole second and third and scored on Goodrow's hit.

For the winners Faber was surely the outstanding player. The Battery was unable to do much with his fast ball with which he fanned six of their men. Gilbert also played well, pulling off several sensational catches in left field. Leffingwell and L. Cimikoski also put up nice games for the Stars.

For the losers Lemieux, Goodrow, Berberich and Lewis were the outstanding players.

The score by innings:

Stars	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	3	—5

Umpire Malcolm.

In the first game at 6.30 there was some dispute as to the proper score, the Nutmegs claiming a tie score at 4 to 4 and the Tigers claiming a 4 to 3 victory. There was no regular scorer for either team and this was the cause of the argument. Both teams were very positive in claiming their scores. This is the first argument that has arisen during the league and it is hoped that it will be the last one.

The present league standing is as follows:

	W	L	Pct
Battery B	4	1	800
Stars	3	2	600
Nutmegs	1	3	250
Tigers	1	3	250

WESTERN BASKETBALL GETS STARTED THIS EVENING

CHICAGO, Jan. 4—(AP)—A month of practice games finds the western conference basketball teams for the opening of the 1926 season tomorrow, the opening game being between Minnesota and Wisconsin at Madison. Next Saturday, eight quintets swing into action, and Illinois plays its first conference game next Monday.

Michigan and Ohio have made the best showing in non-conference contests prior to the six ten openers.

WILL NOT ASK SANCTION OF LIGHTWEIGHT BOUTS YET

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Sanction by the state athletic commission of the proposed lightweight tournament will not be sought by Madison Square Garden officials until after Friday night's matches, Jess McMahon matchmaker of the garden announced today.

"We don't want any losers in the list we show to the commission," said McMahon, "and as we have three lightweight bouts carded for Friday, the three winners will be placed on the list submitted for approval.

"The youngsters in the class, Joe Glick and Harry Felix will have a chance to enter the tournament if we withhold our application for a sanction until after Friday. Glick meets the tough punching Danny Kramer and Felix boxes with Lois Visconti on the same card with two of the outstanding lightweight contenders, Sid Terris and Lucien Vinez of France."

COLLEGIATES APPEAL TO LANDIS FOR SUPPORT

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic association will appeal to Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis for his support to curb the practice of organized baseball in offering professional contracts to college under-graduates, Brigadier-General Palmer E. Pierce, president of the N. C. A. A., said today.

"College baseball is being slowly destroyed by organized baseball," said General Pierce, "we feel that by going straight to Landis with our appeal we can curb this practice before it reaches dangerous proportions."

General Pierce said the heavy programme at the recent N. C. A. A. annual convention prevented him from bringing this measure up before the delegates but he said he had described the situation in a personal appeal to Commissioner Landis.

It was also intimated that a similar appeal will be made to professional football which is considering the advisability of engaging its own high commissioner before next fall.

The colleges of California have already gone to Commissioner Landis with a protest.

Peter Gives Himself Away

Impulsive folk, do what they may,
Are sure to give themselves away.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit, squatting on the big log in which he had found shelter from the storm, watched Reddy Fox floundering through the snow with Jumper the Hare only a tantalizing jump or two ahead. Peter now realized as never before the use of those big feet Jumper possessed, and which had so often been laughed at. Jumper was traveling easily on top of the snow. He didn't sink in enough to bother him in the least. Peter himself, so very much smaller than Jumper, was a prisoner right there because he couldn't get about in that soft snow fast enough to be safe.

"I wish my feet were big," muttered Peter wistfully.

Jumper was teasing Reddy Fox. It didn't seem right to tease one who was hungry, but Peter knew just how Jumper felt? Many a fright had Reddy Fox given Jumper. Many a time had Jumper had to run and dodge to save his life from Reddy. Now he had a chance to get even in a way . It isn't nice to get even, but some times it is a great temptation. So Jumper was keeping just out of reach of Reddy and was laughing at him. It wasn't often that Jumper had such a chance and he was making the most of it. He was so intent on this that he had forgotten everything else. He had forgotten that there might be other hungry enemies abroad. In short, he was so enjoying this teasing of Reddy Fox that he had forgotten to watch out, a thing that none of the little people of the Green Forest can afford ever to do.

So he saw what at first looked like a drifting shadow

Now, as you know, Jumper's coat was snowy white. Sitting still he looked like a little heap of snow, and the sharpest eyes would be likely to overlook him. But when he moved, as he was doing now, watchful eyes would be almost sure to see him. This is why he should never for a moment have ceased to keep watch.

Now Reddy Fox wasn't the only hunter abroad that night. In fact there were several. But there was one to whom the snow made no difference in getting about. It was Hooty the Great Horned Owl. Hooty was hungry, for he had not been able to hunt the night before on account of the snowstorm. So his great fierce eyes looked even fiercer than usual as on his noiseless wings he hunted through the Green Forest. He was on his way to one of his favorite hunting grounds when he caught sight of Reddy Fox floundering along in the snow. At once he headed that way to see if Reddy might have started some one that he, Hooty, could catch.

As he drew nearer he saw Jumper the Hare. If Jumper had been squatting motionless the chances are that Hooty wouldn't have seen him. But Jumper was hopping along on the snow just ahead of Reddy Fox in the most provoking way. Now if there is any one dinner Hooty likes it is a dinner of Hare. He saw at once that Jumper was giving all his attention to Reddy. That Hare dinner looked like a sure thing. I am certain that Hooty would have grinned if he could have it. He set his great curved claws ready to strike and noiselessly, for all the world like a moving shadow, headed straight for Jumper. "It would be fun to take a dinner right from under the nose of Reddy Fox," thought Hooty.

It was Peter Rabbit who was first aware of Hooty the Owl. Peter was greatly interested in watching Jumper and Reddy, but he didn't forget to watch out for possible enemies. So it was that he saw what at first looked like a drifting shadow, but which in a moment he recognized as Hooty the Owl. By that time Hooty was just reaching with those great feathered feet with their dreadful claws, to seize Jumper. Without stopping to think that he was giving himself away, Peter thumped that old log. It was the danger signal. Instantly Jumper dodged.

FINE AND JAIL SENTENCE FOR LIQUOR VIOLATION

In the city court Monday morning a fine of $200 and costs and a jail sentence of 10 days was given to Charles Gencarelli, a tailor of 434 Main street, on the charge of violation of the liquor law. He paid $220.58 and went to jail. He was arrested Saturday afternoon by State Policemen Fred Caron and Giles Watson with Eddie Jones, worked as a spotter, and bought a bottle of liquor for $1 from Gencarelli.

Walter Kellas paid a fine of $1 and costs for operating his automobile with 1925 markers. He paid $11.45.

"INVESTMENTS THAT GROW."

A Fair Example No. 3

Of the correct way to handle a business man's investment account to make it grow. This happens to be a manufacturer in a nearby town, and the period covers about three years. Up to that time he was a persistent bond buyer. He received from us a notice a few days ago as follows:

Dear Sir:—

We are pleased to inform you that at present prices your investment holdings have shown the following appreciation in value—

$12,975 on 50 shs. National Fire Insurance Co.
$14,000 on 150 shs. Fire Association, Phila.
$ 3,120 on 200 shs. Narragansett Elec. Ltg.
$ 2,200 on 100 shs. North American Common
$ 8,000 on 20 shs. Gray Telephone Pay Station
$48,125 on 50 shs. Aetna Life

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of
LOUIS WUNDERLICH
Died January 5, 1925.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in thy grave, so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
And in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.
MRS. LOUIS WUNDERLICH

NOTICE TO CREDITORS
AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 4th day of January, A. D. 1926.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

Estate of Oscar L. Brown, late of Norwich, in said District, deceased.

Ordered, That the Administrator cite the creditors of said deceased to bring in their claims against said estate within six months from this date, by posting a notice to that effect, together with a copy of this order on the sign-post nearest to the place where said deceased last dwelt, and in the same town, and by publishing the same once in a newspaper having a circulation in said district, and make return to this Court.

NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest, HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

NOTICE

All creditors of said deceased are hereby notified to present their claims against said estate to the undersigned at 214 Main St., Norwich, Conn., within the time limited in the above and foregoing order.

NAPOLEON B. LEWIS, Administrator.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 4th day of January, A. D. 1926.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge

Estate of Casmir Wojtkun, late of Griswold, in said District, deceased.

Mary Wojtkun, of Griswold, Conn., appeared in Court and filed a petition praying, for the reasons therein set forth, that administration be granted upon the estate of said deceased, alleged to be intestate.

Whereupon, it is Ordered, That said petition be heard and determined at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, on the 4th day of January, A. D. 1926, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of the pendency of said petition, and of said hearing thereon, be given by the publication of this order one time in some newspaper having a circulation in said District at least three days prior to the date of said hearing and that return be made to this Court.

NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest, HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKETS AT A GLANCE.
New York.

Stocks: irregular; "Katy" preferred at record high.
Bonds: firm; several rails establish high record.
Foreign exchanges: steady; French francs resume advance.
Cotton: higher; foreign buying.
Sugar: lower; European selling.
Coffee: firm; higher Brazilian market.

Chicago.

Wheat: firm; bullish Missouri state report.
Corn: higher; unfavorable weather.
Cattle: higher; unfavorable weather.
Cattle: higher; better grades showing most advance.
Hogs steady.

MARKET WAS BULLISH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(By The A. P.) — Speculators for the advance staged another series of bullish demonstrations in today's stock market being aided by the lowering of call money rates and the apparent continuance of a heavy January reinvestment demand. Heavy profit taking and sporadic bear selling forced minor recessions in some of the rails, merchandising issues and specialties but the general list closed irregularly higher. Trading was in large volume. Friday's sales running over two and one-quarter million shares.

Commodity markets also pointed upward. May and July wheat options closed about four cents a bushel higher on reports of unfavorable crop weather in the Argentine and Europe. Cotton advanced 29 to 36 points on buying influenced by the more cheerful business outlook. The jump of 28 to 33 points in coffee futures was in direct reflection of the announcement that the Sao Paulo coffee loan had been underwritten in London. Sugar was unchanged.

In the stock market, the steel shares developed an unexpected burst of activity and strength in apparent anticipation of excellent first quarter earnings based on steadily increasing orders. United States Steel common advanced to within a point of its record top, while Crucible, Gulf States, Republic and Youngstown Sheet and Tube moved a point or more higher. The sudden jump of six points to 138 1-2 in Baldwin revived rumors that dividends would benefit through early sale of its Philadelphia real estate. Other equipments followed in its wake.

Motors were again spurred about in what appeared to be the usual "window dressing campaign" on the eve of the New York Automobile Show. Chrysler (old stock) scored an extreme gain of 5 points by touching 216 and then eased to 214 1-2; Hudson closed over five points higher at 122 3-4 and General Motors, Fisher Body, Briggs Body, Jordan, Willys Overland, Nash, Paige-Detroit, Stromberg Carburetor and Yellow Cab showed net gains of 1 to nearly 3 points.

Chief speculative interest in the rails centered in those issues mentioned in connection with the proposed Southwestern merger. "Katy" preferred advanced 2 points to 95, the highest price ever recorded, and St. Louis-Southwestern touched a new peak at 71 3-8 and then eased to 70 1-4 for a net gain of 2 1-2 points on the day. Hard coal carriers were in supply on rumors that operators and miners still were far apart in their efforts to bring about a resumption of anthracite mining. Delaware and Hudson broke over four points and Lackawana closed a point lower. Heaviness also was apparent in Chesapeake and Ohio, Reading, Coastline and Nashville, and Seaboard Air Line.

Rails were again active in a number of specialties with the rapid advance to a few issues suggesting a retreat or an overcrowded short interest. Net gains of 3 to 5 points were registered by United States Rubber, Postum Cereal, South Porto Rican Sugar, Savage Arms, Shubert Theatre, the Commercial Solvents issues, Lacledo Gas, Phoenix Hosiery, and Union Bag and Paper.

Call money renewed at six per cent., eased to 5 1-2 and thence to five, despite the deficit of about $12,000,000 in reserve shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement, only about $10,000,000 in loans were called by New York banks this morning, but fresh funds in large amounts were forthcoming later as the dividend and interest checks made their way back to the banks. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Heavy buying of French francs, which rallied about 1½ points to 3.84 cents and then eased slightly, featured the foreign exchange market. The demand was engendered by the better feeling created by the parliamentary victories of the new Briand ministry and the heavy renewal of subscriptions to refunding securities by French holders. Demand sterling held firm at 4.86 2-4 and other European rates moved within rather narrow and irregular limits.

RAIN TODAY; FAIR, COLDER TOMORROW

Norwich Bulletin

NORWICH, CONN., TUESDAY, JAN. 5, 1926

FULL ASSOCIATED PRESS DESPATCHES

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Tuesday, Jan. 5, 1926

THE WEATHER

Conditions

Pressure is relatively low off the southern New England coast. During the last 24 hours rains have occurred in the Atlantic and Gulf states. Temperatures are above normal from the plains states eastward.

The outlook is for rain on Tuesday in the Atlantic states. On Wednesday the weather will be mostly fair in the states east of the Mississippi river. Except for rains in northern New England and along the south Atlantic coast. Temperatures will rise on Tuesday in the middle and northern Atlantic states and it will be colder on Wednesday in practically all states east of the Mississippi river.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Fresh south and southwest and weather partly overcast with occasional rains Tuesday.

Forecast

For Southern New England: Rain Tuesday and Tuesday night; Wednesday fair; colder in interior.

TAFTVILLE

That the Army-Navy club is coming into prominence as an athletic and social organization is shown by the great increase in membership during the past year. Organized on July 14, 1916, the club has made such wonderful strides in progress that it has been compelled to extend its quarters from time to time, and at the present time occupies spacious quarters in the entire b... Louis hall building on Dion street.

Being equipped so well for the development of young American manhood has brought the club into such prominence that many professional boxers are daily using these quarters as their training place. Such men as Young Coulon, Frankie Busch, Martin Flaherty, Kid Wagner, Young McCarthy, Minnow Beauregard and several others are to be seen daily doing their stunts in the preparation of their classes, and they figure some day to make champions in their respective classes.

Besides the attractions for the boxers, the club has several high class wrestlers who will be heard from in the near future. And then there is the athletic apparatus for the beginners in the gymnastic line. This is to be developed during the coming month when an instructor will be provided to put the boys through the courses that will start them on their way to "physical fitness" to fight their daily battles in life.

The opening of a junior membership for the young men over 16 years of age is expected, and will be one of the great steps forward in trying to make the Army-Navy club the best of any in this part of the state.

The social part of the club is another feature that is appealing to those who are not interested in the athletic line. Three pool tables, several card tables, a reading room, musical instruments, shower baths, a canteen, and most anything that could be desired to pass the weary hours away can be found at this popular club. With an orchestra of its own, which gives several concerts during the winter months there seems to be very little lacking.

With a membership of over 200 and still going strong, the club is governed by President Archie Molleur; secretary, John E. Benoit; treasurer, Thomas Labbee, and an executive board of seven members who spare no pains in seeing that everything is being done to make this organization one that cannot be headed by any other in this part of Connecticut.

The end of this month will find the club in a joint carnival with the Sacred Heart church in order to obtain funds to make still bigger and better improvements for the benefit of the active membership. "On Your Toes" seems to be the slogan, and from the evidence shown every member is carrying out this slogan, so that the anticipated progress of the Army-Navy club will be realized.

Mrs. John Unsworth of North B street was pleasantly surprised Saturday evening at her home by a number of friends. Mrs. Unsworth was presented with a clock. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable social evening followed.

Superintendent Victor H. Davis has announced that the annual business meeting and election of officers of the Taftville Congregational church school is to be held in the parlors of the church this (Tuesday) evening.

Miss Sophie Dudek of South B street has been a recent visitor in Hartford.

The local schools opened Monday morning for the winter term, after being closed for the Christmas and New Year vacation.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion sallow—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have active, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no disagreeable after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

PROPERTY HOLDERS VOICE OBJECTIONS TO PROPOSED SEWER ASSESSMENTS

At the January meeting of the court of common council Monday evening in the council chamber, Herbert B. Loewy was appointed a supernumerary police officer of the local police department. The meeting was a brief one lasting only about 20 minutes. There were no petitions to be acted upon and only two claims were received. The council meeting was preceded by the Lake street sewer assessment hearing which was opened at 7 o'clock, lasting an hour.

The hearing was on the proposed assessments for benefits to property holders through the layout and construction of the sewer from Lake street playground to Hickory street, from Baltic street to North street, in Brook street, in North street from Hickory street to East Baltic street and in Pratt street. The cost of the sewer was $56,556.49.

About 50 people attended the hearing, some of the property holders included in the proposed assessments appearing with counsel. A number of those present registered objection to the proposed assessments claiming their frontage had been figured wrong, that their land is low, making the sewer of no benefit to them, that the sewer does not pass in front of their property, etc.

Maps showing the layout of the sewer and copies of the proposed assessments were placed before the property holders for their inspection. The hearing lasted until 8 o'clock at which time it was closed by Mayor Waters as there was no one else who wished to be heard in regard to the sewer assessments. The committee will take the assessments under further consideration before making a final report to the council, probably at the February council meeting.

The regular meeting of the council was called to order about 8:15 o'clock by his honor, Mayor Milo R. Waters, and the minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading according to custom.

The following reports were received and accepted: Monthly report of the street department; monthly report of the city treasurer; quarterly cash statement of the water department; quarterly report of the chief of police; quarterly report of the fire marshal.

The committee on public works reported that the sewer in Geer avenue and in Summit St., from Geer avenue to Carpenter street, has been completed at a cost of $2,498.36. The committee reported that the following persons are benefited by the layout of the sewer:

Southerly side of Geer Ave.—Dennis Sullivan; John J. Sullivan, and Loretta Sullivan; M. E. Maguire and Eliza B. Maguire; Ludwig Dierman, Katherine Cook, Elizabeth L. Schuler, Axel E. Johnson, Eunice J. Brown, Eva B. Tefft, Aleck Sienkowski, Josephine Sienkowski, Wladyslaw Jablonski, Louis Gresser, Julia Gresser, Ralph Hayman, Elizabeth C. Hayman, John Lelrick.

Northerly side of Geer Ave.—Jennie F. Joslyn, Lulu M. Davey, Christian E. Baer, Emma Baer, Oscar Silverman, Axel E. Johnson, John Seneiski, Joseph Schaffhausen, Catherine Schaffhausen, Aleck Sienkowski, Frank Piekowski, Anthony Kirchner, Eleanor Scatoni.

Westerly side, Summit St., Lawrence H. Tefft, John H. Tefft, Leon E. Taylor, Elizabeth M. Taylor.

Easterly side Summit St., Clarence Sholes, Henry G. Montle.

The committee recommended that Mayor Waters, Alderman Gebrath, Councilman Spellman and Councilman Looby be appointed a committee to hear said persons and all others in interest in reference to a proposed assessment for benefits from the construction of the sewer and to report back to the council and that a hearing be held at 7 p. m., Feb. 1st.

The report was accepted and the resolutions adopted.

Alderman Gebrath of the public works department, offered a report of progress on the petition for the acceptance of Tyler Ave., and the report was accepted. Alderman Gebrath stated that the committee recommended the acceptance of South Golden street as soon as the proper deeds are prepared and the layout made. The police committee reported that the petition of H. H. Gallup for the changing around of the arc lights on Washington St., has been granted. The committee also reported that the petition of Dr. John T. Boynton for an arc light in front of his premises at No. 175 Broadway had been granted. Both reports were accepted by the council.

It was voted that the city treasurer pay to John H. Barnes, counsel for Frieda Blinderman, $57.50 in full settlement of her claim against the city.

It was voted that the city treasurer refund to the Norwich Free Hebrew Institute $100.80 on the city tax of 1925, as the property is entitled to exemption as it is used for school purposes.

Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, chairman of the police committee, recommended that Herbert B. Loewy be appointed a supernumerary police officer. The city clerk was instructed to cast one ballot in favor of the appointment and Mr. Loewy was declared elected as a supernumerary officer.

Claims were received and referred to the finance committee and corporation council as follows:

From Richard Heberding, No. 66 Norwich Ave., for a broken front spring on his automobile while he was driving through Boswell Ave., on Dec 19th. He stated in his claim that his machine dropped into a hole in the street.

From Henry R. Sebastian, R. F. D. No. 1, for a broken rear spring on his Ford machine while he was driving through Hamilton Ave., Dec. 4th.

Bills were approved as follows: Public works department, $10,486.05; fire department, $6,258.92; department of cemeteries, $395.44; park department, $276.26; gas and electric department, $74,086.26; water department, $3,054.40; police department, $6,232.92; street lighting, $3,150.13; Deep River reservoir, $16,174.12; finance department, $54,737.13. As there was no other business to be transacted the meeting adjourned about 8:40 o'clock.

SUIT OVER HIGHWAYS BROUGHT AGAINST COLCHESTER

Suit against the town of Colchester has been brought in the superior court by Joseph Piecars of that town because of the action of the selectmen of the town in voting to discontinue one highway in Westchester and build another.

The plaintiff asks in his suit to have the selectmen restrained from discontinuing the highway running generally in a westerly and easterly direction from the Westchester road, and crossing the Gerimy river, which intersects the highway above a factory located there.

Piecarz also asks to have the selectmen restrained from laying out a new highway leading to his property, which highway is to be bounded and described as follows: "A way or road from a point on the highway nearly opposite the residence of Teodosyu Skopowski to the land of Joseph Piecars and to build such bridge as is necessary to cross the stream known as 'Pine Brook.'"

These highway changes were voted by the selectmen on May 4, 1925, the highway which was discontinued having adjoined and crossed the land of Piecarz. He asks for an assessment of the damages and benefits incident to the action taken by the selectmen and he makes the claim that the discontinuance of the old highway was contrary to law and beyond the legal powers of the selectmen, as well as being against the common convenience and necessity of the public and the private convenience and necessity of the plaintiff, who has been grievously injured by the action of the selectment, and will be injured by the new highway layout, which he claims is also against common convenience and necessity of the public and the private convenience and necessity of the plaintiff.

The suit is returnable in February.

GRAND JURY SUMMONED FOR SUPERIOR COURT

Sheriff Sidney A. Brown has summoned in a grand jury for the opening of the January term of the original superior court this (Tuesday) morning in this city. The jury has been summoned to be present at 10 o'clock and it is the present expectation that instructions to the grand jury will be given as soon as court opens and that the case of Eugene J. Berry of this city will be presented to them.

Berry chloroformed his two little boys at his home, Boswell avenue, last October and it is for the grand jury to decide whether a true bill for first degree murder will be found against him.

Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton was engaged Monday summoning witnesses who will appear before the grand jury, these including the medical examiner, police officers and others.

As soon as the grand jury has received its instructions and has retired to hear testimony, State Attorney Arthur M. Brown will proceed to take pleas in the other cases that are on the superior court docket that will come before Judge Allyn L. Brown, who will preside at this session.

NEW BOND LAW ON AUTOMOBILES IN EFFECT

The new responsibility law requiring motorists convicted of serious motor vehicle law violations to post a $10,000 bond following such a conviction went into effect January 1.

The law was passed in the 1925 session of the general assembly of the state legislature and includes convictions on reckless driving, driving while under the influence of liquor, evading responsibility, causing injury or death to a person and causing damages of $1,000.

Bonds posted may be collateral, cash or real estate. The bonds are to be posted with the motor vehicle department.

The new law not only provides responsibility for drivers found to be at fault in serious accidents but is expected to lessen the number of serious accidents inasmuch as many drivers have not the means of providing such a bond are expected to be more careful.

FREED ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE IN GROTON COURT

Matthew T. O'Brien of Allen street, Groton, held on a technical charge of manslaughter under a court bond of $1,000, as the result of the death about three months ago of Lewis Olbrys, 18, of New London, was discharged Monday morning when his case was brought up in Groton town court. Olbrys died at the hospital in New London of injuries received when a motorcycle which he was driving collided with O'Brien's automobile at Eastern Point road, Groton.

Prosecuting Attorney Warren B. Burrows stated in court that no information had ever been written against O'Brien, and that although the case had been before the attention of the court for three months, no evidence of culpability against the defendant has been found. The recommendation of a dismissal by the prosecuting attorney was sustained by Judge C. C. Costello.

The case has also been in the hands of Coroner J. J. Desmond of Norwich, who, owing to illness, has been unable to give a finding.

A bit in the horse's mouth doesn't prevent his getting hungry.

CONNECTICUT HAY CROP LARGER THAN LAST YEAR

New England's production of hay, unlike the crop in most of the states was larger last year than in 1924, according to figures from the department of agriculture at Washington. This crop increased in but 11 states besides the six of the northeastern group. However New Hampshire alone of the New England states reported a higher price per ton for hay on Dec. 1, last, than on the same date in 1924. For the country as a whole this price had risen 28 cents.

The hay crop in New England was larger by 26,000 tons this year than last, although the land in hay had increased but 6,000 acres. New England's hay crop totaled 4,439,000 tons last year and 4,699,000 tons this year.

Maine's crop of hay showed the largest increase, 125,000 tons, while the second largest increase was in Vermont, 61,000 tons. New Hampshire was third with an increase of 49,000 tons, followed by Massachusetts with an increase of 24,000 tons, Connecticut with 10,000 tons, and Rhode Island with 1,000 tons.

Connecticut and Vermont were the states reporting a larger hay acreage. The hay crop for the entire country dropped from 112,796,000 tons last year to 99,515,000 tons this year, the value per ton on December 1, being $12.98 last year, and $13.26 this year.

JUMPED FROM AUTOMOBILE TO STOP RUNAWAY HORSE

With a daring leap from the running board of an automobile to catch the reins of a runaway horse, John F. Gorman, a well known automobile salesman, rivalled the best movie thriller Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock on North Main street and brought the frightened animal to a stop after being dragged about 75 feet near the Marguerite corner.

The horse was attached to one of the American Express wagons and had been frightened by the sound of testing rifles at the Warner Arms Co., in Greeneville, where the driver had left the wagon standing while he was delivering express matter. Dashing across the railroad tracks and up into North Main street, the animal started towards the city on the run and came down North Main street at a rapid gait but without hitting anything.

Mr. Gorman was just driving an automobile out of the Willys-Knight station on North Main street and the horse dashed by. Gorman gave chase in the automobile, shot past the express wagon, brought his machine to a stop ahead of it and completed his thrilling work by a jump from the running board to catch the reins at the horse's head.

Gorman's reckless bravery saved what would probably have been serious damage if the horse had been allowed to continue on through Main street and into Franklin square as the horse was headed for the stable in Franklin street and could hardly have got through the traffic without smashing into automobiles and possibly hitting pedestrians.

HARTFORD SPEAKER FOR WORLD COURT DINNER

Plans for the world court dinner which is to be held here at 12:15 p. m., on Friday, Jan. 15, were made at a meeting of the Norwich World Court committee which was held Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms with the chairman, Rev. A. N. Foster, presiding.

The speaker at the dinner is to be Dr. Carter, who is to speak at a mass meeting in New London, on the evening of the 15th. By request of the committee, Rev. Mr. Foster will preside at the world court dinner.

Arrangements for the distribution of tickets were placed in the hands of James C. Macpherson and Mrs. Willis Austin. The committee has been very agreeably surprised at the amount of interest that has been shown since the first announcement of the plans for the world court dinner and a good-sized gathering seems to be promised. A publicity committee was appointed at the meeting.

Those present at the meeting included representatives of the Lions, Rotary club, Merchants association, Chamber of Commerce, Manufacturers association, Ministers association, and the original world court committee.

NORWICH RATED 14TH., IN BUILDING ACTIVITY

Norwich is listed in 14th place among the cities of the state in the matter of new construction, alterations and additions for the first 11 months of the calendar year, according to figures compiled by S. W. Straus, national building survey. The Norwich total was given at $873,919 With a total of $1,283,274 during that period the city of New London was 10th., exceeding the totals for Middletown, Meriden, Bristol, Norwich and Torrington.

Torrington, with $468,650 in new construction, brought up the rear. Hartford topped the list, $19,808,830, with the figures for December indicating that a high mark of better than $21,000,000 for the entire year would be reached by the Capitol City. New Haven was listed second with $7,200,147 in new work authorized, with New Britain, Waterbury, Stamford, Bridgeport, West Hartford, Danbury, Manchester and New London following in order.

LEG BROKEN WHEN HIT BY YANTIC TROLLEY

Albert Dawson, 55, who lives at the Yantic boarding house, had his leg broken Monday night, about 8:55, when he was hit by a north-bound trolley car, as he was walking along the road at the Yantic flats.

According to the report that was made of the accident, Dawson was observed by the operator of the oneman trolley car, Morotman Bennett, walking along the road out of the path of the car, but as the trolley car reached him, he suddenly stepped over into the tracks and was hit before the motorman could stop the car.

Dawson was taken to the Buckus hospital by a man who came along in a Massachusetts automobile and volunteered his help to the motorman to get Dawson to a doctor. The break in his leg is around the ankle.

There is always a commanding presence about the subpoena.

MADE PLANS TO HOLD TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL

Plans were made for a standard teachers' training school of Norwich when the executive committee of the Norwich council of Religious Education was in session Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. The school will be held on Thursday evenings to cover the period between Easter and Children's day, which will mean a matter of ten sessions.

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, of the Norwich Town Congregational church, who is chairman of the teachers' training department of the Norwich council, is now preparing a scheduled programme for study and is making arrangements for teachers to carry out the programme.

This is the second school of its kind that will be held by the Protestant churches of the city for the year. The first, conducted on an intensive plan, was held last September, when the meetings were held in the Central Baptist church.

POETRY

New England

Here where the wind is always northeast
And children learn to walk on frozen feet,
Wonders begets an envy of all those
Who boil elsewhere with such a lyric yeast.
Of love that you will hear them at a feast
Where demons would appeal for some repose,
Still clamoring where the chalice overflows
And crying wildest who have drunk the least.

Passion is here a solace of the wits,
We're told, and Love a cross for them to bear,
Joy shivers in the corset where she knits
And Conscience always has the rocking-chair,
Cheerful as when she tortured into fits
The first cat that was ever killed by Care
—Edwin Arlington Robinson.

The Christmas Tree Remembers

I am familiar with the wind's wild hands
That to my bending branches all night long,
Brought melodies of distant, dreaming lands,
And from my rooted silence drew a song.
But now through branch and tinsled twig there sings
The happy laughter of a child's delight,
And I have learned a song of dearer things
Than ever wind, could teach me in the night.

I am accustomed to the stars' frail rays
That perched like birds upon my tossing crest
And gilded all my darkly brooding ways
And made of me their silver, shining nest.
But now small, tender hands have made me fair
With crystal globes and robes of gold and green,
And set a star within my dusky hair,
A gayer star than ever I have seen.

I am familiar with the chains of snow
With which the winter bound my slender grace,
And with the flowers of the frost, aglow
And delicately woven as fine lace.
But now the holly warms me like a flame,
And ribboned gifts have budded from my bark,
And now I know it was for this I came Up from the soil and from the forest dark.
—Faith Baldwin in St. Nicholas.

But later he called upon the driver and apologized for the rough language and expressed gratitude for the accident. It seemed that the cow had been lame for several years and had been treated without result. The bump given by the automobile had put the cow's dislocated hip back into place so that she could once again walk on all fours.

"NOBODY KNOWS" HOW LONG COAL PARLEYS WILL LAST

Announcement Made by Operators' Spokesman, While Indicating That No Change Would Be Made in Their Stand—It Was Further Vouchsafed That Discussion Was Along the Lines of Previous Sessions, But That "Progress Was Being Made"—Conferees Will Resume Session Today.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—"Still deadlocked" aptly describes the situation in the negotiations between anthracite miners and operators who are attempting to end the hard coal strike now in its fifth month.

Shortly before seven o'clock tonight, after a session of nearly five hours, announcement was made that the joint conference of six miners and six operators had adjourned until eleven o'clock tomorrow morning. With this announcement came the following message from the conference room:

"The conference met this afternoon and continued consideration of the possibility of reaching an agreement. the discussion was along the lines of previous sessions."

No amplification of this statement could be had from either side, as both operators and miners remained in seclusion at the Union League club, where the meetings are being held, as the guests at dinner of Alvan Markle, of Hazelton, Pa., chairman of the joint conference.

The only other word that drifted out of the meeting was that "progress was being made."

Whether this progress was a material step forward in the way of laying the ground work for an agreement or merely earrifying the views of one side or the other could not be learned. Most observers took the adjournment to tomorrow as an indication that nothing definite had been agreed upon.

The conference under the leadership of W. W. Inglis for the operators and President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine workers, was resumed at 2 p. m. after a recess taken New Year's eve.

Before entering the meeting each side expressed itself in the strongest terms that no concessions had been decided upon and that there was no change in their attitude on the fundamentals at issue. The operators resumed negotiations encouraged and stiffened by the action of the anthracite operators' conference at a meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in the forenoon at which, it was announced, that a resolution had been unanimously adopted approving all that the mine owners' representatives had done in their conference with the united leaders last week. It was indicated by the operators' spokesman that no change would be made in their stand. Replies to questions as to how long the negotiations would continue along the present, lines were: "Nobody knows."

The anthracite operators' conference is composed of more than 30 operators representing every coal company in the industry. It holds the same relation to the operators as do the tri-district scale committee to the anthracite miners. The scale committee has not been in session since it met in Harrisburg more than a month ago and accepted the peace plan offred by Governor Pincho.

The miners' sub-scale committee held no meeting during the recess and went into the joint conference today in the same position it held when the meeting adjourned December 31. This position is that the miners will not accept arbitration to settle the strike.

The operators are on record as willing to throw the controversy into arbitration with the understanding that wages and working conditions may be reviewed and readjusted once a year at the request of either side.

The miners are not only opposed to arbitration but are unwilling to sign any agreement that does not fix wages definitely for the period of the contract. They had made it known that the workers are willing to sign an agreement any where up to five years on definite terms, and are not willing to takes chances on possible wage reductions through yearly reviews.

It is implied from the statement issued tonight that the discussion today "was along the lines of previous sessions" that arbitration was again fully dealt with. It is believed that new angles in the discussion of arbitration were put forward, but whether either side took kindly to them remains to be revealed.

When the joint conference met today after each side making it known that it had nothing new to offer, it was expected in some quarters that the meeting would quickly come to an end. This pessimistic view began to change as the conference lengthened from early afternoon into the evening.

If the break comse, observers will look to Washington to make an effort to bring an end to the long stretch of idleness. The present negotiations are the result of Governor Pinchot's efforts to bring about an agreement and a greak up of the conference would mean the end, for the present, at least, of the Pennsylvania governor's endeavors to have mining reasumed.

It is not unlikely that if the negotiations continue into next week or are broken off that Mr. Pinchot may have something new to put forward in his message to the special session of the legislature which meets January 13.

The special session was got called primarily because of the strike situation, but was contemplated by the governor for consideration of a number of other subjects before the suspension began September 1.

During the day a committee of three clergymen, representing the Scranton Ministerial association of eighty churches, met President Lewis and Major Inglis separately and urged that every effort be made to reach a settlement during the present negotiations.

The committee said it desired to present the "human side" of the situation and declared that the emergency community welfare fund of $23,000 had been expended for the relief of miners' families. The clergymen said that both Mr. Lewis and Major Inglis had received them courteously and taken their representations under advisement.

DR. CHARLES A. FARRELL ON TRIAL FOR PERJURY

WATERBURY, Jan. 5—(AP)—Dr. Charles A. Farrell, former city physician, was put on trial in the city court today, on the charge of perjury in connection with the murder trial of James Gizzi recently. The physician testified at Gizzi's trial that he had visited Gizzi at his cell in police headquarters the day he was arrested and found him suffering from a hernia.

The prosecution in the present case insists that Dr. Farrell did not visit Gizzi, as stated, and that he consequently committed perjury in his testimony in the murder trial. Officers of the local police department testified today, that Dr. Farrell could not have visited Gizzi without their knowledge and that they did not see him at the station at any time on the day, in question, June 8, 1924.

Attorney Frank P. McEvoy, counsel for Dr. Farrell, drew from the police officers on cross examination, admission that Dr. Farrell had visited prisoners at the station on past occasions without their knowledge. The police officers' only record of visits by any physicians to prisoners is contained in a small notebook. Attorney McEvoy drew from the officers admissions that Dr. Farrell had visited at least seven prisoners in their cells for which there is no entry in the notebook.

A $70,000 CLAIM ALLOWED AGAINST GILPATRIC ESTATE

HARTFORD, Jan. 5—(AP)—A claim of $70,000 filed against the bankrupt estate of G. Harold Gilpatric by John F. Carpenter, representing the Mary Gardner estate of Putnam, has been allowed by Judge Arthur E. Howard, jr., truste of the bankrupt estate, it was stated today by Lawrence A. Howard, counsel for the trustee.

This completes the list of claims to be recommended to Referee in Bankruptcy Saul Berman and, with other approved claims published last week, brings the total of claims approved by the trustee, to about $861,000. The list will be filed in a few days and if approved by Referee Berman, a preliminary dividend to creditors will be in order.

RANSACKED HOUSE AND SET FIRE TO BARN

WEST BROOKFIELD, Mass., Jan. 5—(AP)—Three masked men late tonight bound George Patrenas in his lonely farm house north of this village after shooting his watch dog and ransacked the house. They left, only to return in a short time to set fire to the barn destroying it with its contest.

THREE SEAMEN BURNED TO DEATH AT MIAMI, FLA.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 5—(AP)—Thre seamen were burned to death and several others were injured this afternoon when a flare-back on board the Gulf Refining company barge "Gulf Sprite," caused an explosion and fire.

MAY REDUCE THE ENLISTED STRENGTH OF ARMY 4,000 MEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—Budget limitationson enlisted pay for the regular army for the fiscal year of 1927 if effected, will make "unavidable" a four-months or more cessation in army promotions affecting more than 4,000 men. Secretary Davis of the war department disclosed this situation today in a formal statement announcing the policy to be pursued if a reduction of approximately $3,000,000 for enlisted pay, recommended by the budget, is approved by congress.

The average actual enlisted stretch of the army would remain at 118,750, under this policy, but, the announcement said, "inasmuch as a lesser amount is available in the budget for "pay of the army" during the fiscal year 927, it will be necessary to reduce the number of non-commissioned officers, privates first class, and specialists below that authorized at the present time."

EDITOR OF WALL STREET, ICONOCLAST INDICTED

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—George Graham Rice, editor of the Wall street Iconoclast, whose alleged "blue sky" stock exploits have ranged from coast to coast, was indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiracy to defraud. He was released in $7,500 bail and given two weeks in which to enter his plea.

Rice is accused of having misused the mails in connection with the sale of securities of the Fortuna Consolidated Gold Mines company. Named with him in the indictment were John Hogan, Lewis W. Alexander, Moe Herman, David Lyons and Howard Winder.

In a statement following the indictment Rice charged that Wall street was trying to "silence him" because his paper had analyzed margin transactions and "violated the unwritten law of Wall street never to educate a sucker."

Problem of Export of Surplus Crops

Correspondence on the Subject Made Public Yesterday by Vice President Dawes.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—(AP)—Vice President Dawes today made public the exchange of ideas upon the agricultural problem of the exportable surplus which has been carried on for the past year between Sir Josiah C. Stamp, of England, economist and member of the first commitee of experts, reparations commission, and now chairman of the London & Midland railroad, and Messrs. George N. Peek and Chester C. Davis, proponents of certain economic principles involved in the agricultural question.

This correspondence was carried on through Vice President Dawes, as intermediary, and centers around economic principles alone, and not upon any specific bills which have been introduced for agricultural relief.

In discussing the agricultural question in Chicago, President Coolidge, while stating that "The initiative of the farmers themselves, with such assistance as can be given them by the government without assuming responsibility for business management, through financing and through the cooperative movement, would appear to be a wise method of solving this problem," add "of course, I should be willing to approve any plan that can be devised in accordance with sound economic principles."

This exchange of ideas bears upon the economic principles which may be involved in such legislation.

The agricultural proponents state: "While the discussion has centered to some extend around an export corporation, it is realized by us hat possibly the principles herein upheld may find constructive and practical interpretation through other legislative means." They call attention to the fact hat in the discussion Sir Josiah Stam, whom Lloyd George calls the "world's greatest practical economist," makes no mention of the shibboleth of "price fixing."

They contend that his comments may well be considered as "defining the boundary line beyond which alleged economic discussion of the question becomes an appeal to economic prejudice." They state that: "They have realized from the first that to obtain a satisfactory step in advance, partisan politics must not creep into the discussion, and that appeals both to the prejudice of the business men (by reference to price fixing) and to the prejudice of the agriculturalists (by the injection of irrelevant subjects) should be avoided."

Sir Josiah Stamp, in his comments, states: "That there is a considerable amount of substantial agreement between the correspondents."

The vice president states that "his idea in initiating this discussion was to help to eliminate politics from the discussion of a question primarily economic in its nature, and if the consideration of measures for agricultural relief assume a political nature the chances of a sound economic solution for the difficulties of agriculture will be injured."

Neither he nor the proponents in the discussion have referred to any specific bills for agricultural relief, the vice president pointed out, the object being to narrow the economic discussion down to the essential economic principles which it is claimed must be the basis for intelligent legislation, giving relief to agriculture.

Mr. Peek, of Moline, Illinois, is president of the American council of agriculture and Mr. Davis is grain marketing director of the Illinois Agricultural association, of which Sam H. Thompson, of Quincy, Illinois, newly elected president of the American Farm Bureau federation, is the head Mr. Thompson, in a recent speech, disclosed the existence of the correspondence with Sir Josiah Stamp.

SHOT BY POLICEMAN OF WHOM HE WAS TO COMPLAIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—In front of the lieutenant's desk in a Brooklyn police station today, Policeman John J. Brennan whipped his service revolver from its holder and fired three shots at Samuel Kraniof, a glazier who had come to the station to complain against Brennan. Shot twice in the chest, and in the abdomen, Kraniof was taken to a hospital in a dying condition.

The station house was thrown into an uproar by the shooting. Other policemen seised Brennan, wrested his revolver from him and evne before the ambulance came for his victim, he had ben stripped of his shield and locked in a cell. He was temporarily suspended and charged with assault.

Kraniof came to the station to complain against Brennan after an argument earlier in the afternoon. Brennan, summoned from the reserve room, opened fire almost as soon as he saw the glazier.

DISTRIBUTION OF LARGE ESTATES IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 5—(AP)—By the terms of a decree of final distribution passed by Judge Gilson today, the estate of the late Ezekiel G. Stoddard, formerly president of the New Haven bank, was directed to be divided among Carlos French Stoddard, Louis E. Stoddard and Esther Stoddard Butterworth, children, and Mary De Forest Stoddard, widow of the testator, after the payment of an inheritance tax due the state of Connecticut, which was found and determined by the court at $44,180.53. The amount as shown in the inventory of the entire estate was entered at $1,354,200.50.

Another large assessment under the inheritance act was today made against the estate of Mary G. Townsend, the widow of the late George H. Townsend, of Raynham, who left a total estate for distribution amounting to $782,089.64. The tax as determined by Judge Gilson amounted to $35,989.08.

Floods Are Causing Apprehension in Paris

Several Deaths From Drowning Are Reported From Various Sections of France.

PARIS, Jan. 5—(AP)—Parisians and the people of the suburbs residing for a mile on either side of the Seine retired to their beds this evening filled with anxiety lest they be driven out by the rising waters before morning, the official announcement that the highest crest of the Muddy wave threatening Paris from the north and east will not be reached until tomorrow and the incessant rains have caused the population the greatest perturbation since the present inundations began.

The Seine, after a slight fall during the day, was again rising this evening. The Marne is on the rampage, with a considerable rise today, flooding the suburbs of Bry, Champigny, Reperreux and Nogent, causing a thousand inhabitants to evacuate their homes and seek refuge in Paris.

The Oise is still on the upward trend at Creil, after reaching a maximum since the record flood of 1910 at Compiegne. The principal street of Creil is under water and the residents are receiving provisions by boats; they are living in the upper stories of the houses, all the factories in the districts have suspended work, and temporarily 10,000 persons are unemployed.

Several deaths from drowning are reported from various districts, among them Mezieres, where the Meuse is overflowing the entire countryside, flooding the iron works and factories between Mesieres and Givet. Nothing remains above water in the village of Ham excepting the slate roofs of the cottages. The dike which since 1880 has kept back the waters, suddenly gave way.

Paris is showing no signs of panic before the flood threat, but the city authorities are piling up sandbags along the edges of the river in the most exposed area of the city. But these precautionary measures appear very weak to fight the onrushing tide.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE BY EVELYN NESBIT THAW

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—(AP)—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, whose prounged New Years party ended early today when she tried to kill herself by swallowing poison, tonight was reported resting quietly at a hospital here, although still in a serious condition.

Physicians who at first believed her suicide attempt would prove fatal, tonight expressed the hope that they would be able to save her life. They said she had a chance to recover because she had been drinking alcohol which is an antidote for the poison she took.

The divorced wife of Harry K Thaw and who several years ago had tried suicide, offered little explanation of her act, except that she did not want to live and was tired. She had been filling an engagement as a cabaret entertainer here and was scheduled to leave today for Florida to fill a similar engagement.

Mrs. Thaw's 15 year old son, Russell, who is here from the east for a holiday vacation, was with his mother when she tried to end her life. Mrs. Thaw's negro maid summoned him and he prepared an antidote and hurried her to the hospital. His prompt action, doctors said, helped her chances for recovery.

Among her correspondence little was found to throw any light on her act. Two letters from Pittsburgh and signed "Mamma", discussed financial affairs and another letter signed "Dock" from Brownsville, Pa., asked her to apologize to "Al" for him. Tonight a telegram was received from a man at Atlantic City, who signed the message "Al McDonald," and asking Mrs. Thaw to wire him if she were able. Later he called Mrs. Thaw's physician by telephone to inquire as to her condition. He intimated he was a personal friend.

CONN. WILL HAVE 1,558,996 POPULATION ON JULY 1

HARTFORD, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Based on the rate of increase for the past five year, Connecticut will have a population of 1,558,996 on July 1, according to estimates compiled by the state department of health for use in calculation of statistics such as, births and death rates. The growth for the state will be approximately 55,500 from the estimate of a year ago, and an increase from the 1,380,631 shown by the federal census of 1920.

Hartford's population on July 1, according to the estimate, will have reached 164,228, Bridgeport will have 170,717 and New Haven 181,823. The estimated population by counties is Fairfield 971,561; New Haven 467,392; Hartford 393,501; Litchfield 80,282; New London 113,554; Windham 55,799; Middlesex 49, 185; Tolland 27,722.

FORMER KLIGRAPP OF KLAN HAS RECEIVED THREATS

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 5—(AP)—Arthur J. Mann, former Kligrapp of New Haven chapter, knights of the Ku Klux Klan, recently disbanded, today said he had received threats by telephone because of his action in making public yesterday the fact that the chapter had disbanded, and also because he had criticised and condemned the order.

It is understood that there is a second group of klansmen holding allegiance to an organization which came into the state last February after a schism in the national body. This second group has since organized as the Ku Klux Klan of Connecticut.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 5—(AP)—Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, today expressed the opinion that the peak in rubber prices has been reached and that a decline will come in time. Mr. Firestone, who is here on business, would not venture an opinion as to when the prices would start downward, but said he was positive that the top had been reached.

A GREAT GRANDSON OF ROGER SHERMAN DIES AT 98

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—John Sherman Mackintosh, 98 years old, great grandson of Roger Sherman, of Connecticut, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, died here today at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. F. H. Nowell. Mr. Mackintosh was in business in Boston for more than fifty years. He was a native of Canton, Mass. Interment will be in Forest Hills, Boston.

MAY HAVE GRAND JURY PROBE OF PUTNAM BANK LOOTERS

Such Action is Being Considered by State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn—If Probe is Undertaken Investigation Would Include Inquiry Into Charges of Forgery Laid Against Gilpatric and Baker, and to Ascertain Whether the Alleged Crimes Were Committed in Hartford County.

HARTFORD, Jan. 5—(AP)—State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, in an interview today, said he was considering calling the grand jury to investigate the affairs of G. Harold Gilpatric and Guy L. Baker, looters of the First National bank of Putnam, and others who may be implicated with them.

The specific purpose of such an investigation if undertaken, he said, would be to learn whether a crime had been committed in Hartford county by them, or any one else involved with them, so that if necessary the proper criminal action can be taken against them.

The grand jury will not be called to make the investigation, said Mr. Alcorn until he is satisfied there is a good reason for bringing it, in the nature of probable cause against the principals or any one that his own investigation might suggest was criminally involved.

A sense of public duty, coupled with the events of the last few days, in which Baker turned up as a self-confessed embezzler, are the reasons which have determined Mr. Alcorn to consider calling the grand jury.

"I have been considering the matter in my mind, for some time," said Mr. Alcorn, "and see no reason now why it should not be known, because if is a fact public duty requires that I look into the matter as fully as possible to see whether a crime has been committed in Hartford county."

Mr. Alcorn and Edward J. Hickey of the state's attorney's office have been in conference the last few days on certain phases of Gilpatric's affairs which have recently come to light. What these phases are were not revealed.

The scope of the investigation, if undertaken, said Mr. Alcorn, will be unlimited. it will take in all the myriad financial operations of Gilpatric which he carried on in his dual capacity of state treasurer and cashier of the First National bank of Putnam, as well as the lesser operations of Gilpatric's assistant cashier, Baker.

The lines on which the investigation, if ordered, will proceed, Mr. Alcorn said, he could not define at this time, but compared the possible extent of it with the medical probe conducted by the grand jury in 1924, when the jury conducted the most extensive investigation, that had been known in the state up to that time.

While Mr. Alcorn would go no farther than that it is understood such an investigation would include inquiry into the circumstances which led to the suggestion that Baker had surrendered himself to the federal authorities because he was hounded by a blackmailer, rather than a tortured conscience.

It would also go into the charges that Gilpatric withheld Liberty bonds of the state for his own purposes to cover up periodic shortages of more than $200,000 from the First National bank of Putnam.

The extent of the investigation would be so broad, it is believed, as to include inquiry into the charges of forgery which have been laid against both the names of Gilpatric and Baker, to learn whether the alleged crimes occurred in Hartford county.

Mr. Alcorn intimated that he has been following the Gilpatric scandal very closely, studying it with a view to see if any duty devolved upon his office to probe it. Hitherto the Gilpatric case, and its ramifications, has been a matter which the federal government has handled exclusively, because the actual thefts from the First National bank of Putnam, a government rather than a state bank, were crimes against the government.

The crimes that are now gradually coming to light, however, suggest crimes against the state, which are beyond the jurisdiction of the federal government. For this reason the state's attorney's office is studying the situation and preparing, if justified, to institute the investigation by the grand jury.

As the so-called "Holden" grand jury has been discharged, it will be necessary to impanel a new one, if Mr. Alcorn decides to call it to investigate Gilpatric's affairs.

DEPOSITION OF GILPATRIC TAKEN AT PENITENTIARY

HARTFORD, Jan. 5—(AP)—The silence of G. Harold Gilpatric was broken again today when a deposition taken at the Atlanta, Ga., penitentiary, where he is serving in blindness a fifteen year sentence for embezzlements from the First National bank of Putnam, was opened with permission of Lawrence A. Howard, of Day, Berry and Reynolds, who is counsel for the trustee of the bankrupt estate of Gilpatric which is suing the Putnam Buick Sales company of Putnam, for the recovery of $1800, the proceeds of the sale of a car which it had sold but had not delivered to Gilpatric. The Buick company has offered $1257 in settlement of the claim, which has been refused by the trustee.

In his deposition Gilpatric said he bought the car in the summer of 1924 and paid about $2,000 for it, with a cashier's check drawn on the First National bank of Putnam, of which he was cashier. He said he did not authorize the application of a part of the $2,000 which was paid for the car to be applied upon any old indebtedness to the company.

An interesting thing about the deposition is the signature of Gilpatric which starts on the line and before it is completed, shoots off to an angle of 45 degrees above the line, probably due to his blindness. The signature is also stiff, like that of a person who finds it difficult to write, or like that of a person who writes in the dark.

C. H. MACKAY IS NEITHER TO "FORGET NOR FORGIVE"

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Clarence H. Mackay let it be known today that he intends neither to "forget nor forgive" his debutante daughter, Ellin's secret marriage to Irving Berlin, popular song writer and former singing waiter in Bowery saloons.

His assumption of the role of the unrelenting rich father left only one element missing to make it a perfect story-book plot—the kind that might have been staged with some of Irving Berlin's sentimental songs as accompaniment.

The daughter of the millionaire president of two telegraph companies has run away with the young man of her choice, against the wishes of her father—but she isn't going to any humble cottage with him to share his honest poverty.

Instead, the young couple are now in seclusion in the presidental suite in the Ritz-Carlton at Atlantic City, and they are booked to sail Saturday on the Leviahan, occupying again the presidential suite, which costs $5,000 a crossing.

NEWPORT REPORTS 25 CASES OF DIPHTHERIA

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 5—(AP)—About 65 persons, including three city officials, have been isolated in the contagious ward of the Newport hospital as the result of the development in the city of 25 cases of diphtheria of those isolated, forty are designated as known "carriers" of the disease, themselves apparently immune from contagion. State officials claim developments prove positively the value of the Shick test and immunization treatment.

CARDINAL AIDAN GASQUET REPORTED SERIOUSLY ILL

ROME, Jan. 5—(AP)—Cardinal Aidan Gasquet, archivist of the library of the Holy Roman church, is seriously ill and small hope is entertained for his recovery. The cardinal was unable to participate in any of the ceremonies toward the end of the holy year, and his condition became suddenly worse today when bronchial inflammation set in with disturbance of the cerebral circulation. The cardinal is 79 years old.

SEVEN PERSONS BADLY BURNED IN JAMESVILLE

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Seven persons were burned, one probably fatally, when flames trapped them on the second floor of their home on Oxford street in Jamesville late tonight.

Mrs. Maida Martin, 57, was so badly burned about the body that death may result.

PROVIDENCE MAN WON THE FIDDLERS' CONTEST

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 5—(AP)—In the presence of a personal representative of Henry Ford, sent here from Detroit, James T. Gaffney, of Providence, 71 years old, tonight was declared the winner in the second of the elimination contests being staged here by the Town Criers of Rhode Island, to select the champion old fiddler of the New England states. In the A. F. Albee theatre, where the contests are being staged, he defeated a field of six other candidates and won the right to fiddle tomorrow night in the final contest, with Josepher Shippee, of Plainfield, Conn., winner of last night's preliminary round, against a field of entrants who have not yet been heard.

The winner in the final tomorrow night will receive a medal emblematic of the New England championship, $25 in money and a check for his expenses while here. He will also issue, through the Town Criers, a challenge to "Mollie" Dunham, Henry Ford's famous Maine fiddler, to meet in a "grand sweepstakes contest.

The participants in the semi-final round tonight were from Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Their names and ages follow:

Ernest Summer, 65, Foxboro, Mass.; James H. Priest, 64, West Newton, Mass.; C. A. Gallipeau, 71, Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Frederick Cochran, 65, Brockton, Mass.; William Mitchell, 63, Providence; James T. Gaffney, 71, Providence; Philip Brady, 61, Brockton, Mass.

An 85 year old Bay State entrant, who did not dare leave his hotel because of the damp weather, sent word he would be on hand tomorrow night "rain or shine."

ARRANGING FOR BURIAL OF DOWAGER QUEEN MARGHERITA

BORDIGHERA, Italy, Jan. 5—(AP)—The body of the beloved Dowager Queen Margherita will rest beside that of her martyred husband Humbert in the Roman pantheon, thus the first "Italian queen" will be the first queen sovereign whose body will lie in the national sanctuary.

This decision was reached this afternoon after lengthy conference between King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini, after which the royal family and the head of the government left for Rome, where details of the funeral will be arranged tomorrow.

CARDINAL MERCIER SUFFERS A SLIGHT HEART ATTACK

BRUSSELS, Jan. 5—(AP)—Cardinal Mercier, who underwent a surgical operation recently, and whose condition has been reported since then as showing steady improvement, suffered a slight attack of heart failure this afternoon, but soon rallied, and his pulse and temperature were declared to be normal this evening.

Unless there are further complications it is expected the cardinal will be able to leave his bed tomorrow.

ROTARIANS HEAR TALK ON SUPERVISED PLAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 5—Dr. Allen G. Ireland, director of the Connecticut department of health and physical education gave an interesting talk on Supervised Play in conjunction with the Boys' Work committee program carried out by Chairman James P. Mustard at the weekly meeting of the Willimantic Rotary club held in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday noon. Vice-president James P. Bath presided over the session in the absence of President John F. Ahern who had been called out of town. At the close of the luncheon Song Leader Doc Jones assisted by a trio, Rev. A. S. Wheelock, John R. Pickett and Harry W. Standish led in a Rotary song. He then joined the trio in giving a quartet rendition of Pal O'Mine. John T. Quinlan was at the piano. Secretary G. E. Loiselle read the minutes and communications from Rev. Harry S. McCready of Oakland, Calif., extending New Year greetings; from the Hartford club thanking the local club for its part in presenting a gift at the 15th anniversary celebration and from E. Byrd Freeman, caretaker of the Y. M. C. A. for a gift given him. James B. Fullerton announced that a drive for additional capital for the Goyer Manufacturing company would soon be conducted through the Chamber of Commerce. On motion of the secretary the members voted their individual support to the drive.

Chairman Mustard was then placed in charge of the meeting. Dr. Ireland's talk touched at the vital fundamentals of child play which he said was a characteristic of youth and a fundamental to life. What older people see as play in a child, he said, is not play to the child itself, but the business of preparing for life's work. It is nature's trade school. He stated that the best possible means of abating the junior crime wave was to substitute the bad-habit forming interests of youth by furnishing constructive and wholesomely supervised play, and to give more attention to the education of the child through natural activities. He was accorded a rising vote of thanks for his talk. At the conclusion of the address Albert B. Smith moved that a commission of five Rotarians be appointed by the President to conduct a survey of Willimantic with a view of furthering supervised play. The motion was unanimously adopted. Adjournment was taken at 1:30 o'clock.

PRAISES NORWICH MAN IN FIDDLERS' CONTEST

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 5—Eugene Cote, of 98 Maple avenue, returned here, Tuesday, from the scene of the old-timers' fiddling contest held in Providence, Monday, under the auspices of the Town Criers. Mr. Cote was elated at the splendid "set-up" which he and his brother fiddlers received in the capital of Little Rhody. "We were treated to the best," he said. There was a lavish entertainment and a wonderful luncheon at the Biltmore. A radio concert followed and then fiddlers were assisted into luxurious limousines in which they traveled to the Albee theatre to see a great vaudeville show. The contests were witnessed by a capacity audience in the evening. Deafening applause marked the close of each fiddler's efforts. Among other contestants to whom Mr. Cote paid particular attention were, Jonathan F. Whitford of Eastford, 77 years old, and William H. Whitman of Norwich. All in all Mr. Cote said that it was the grandest thing that has happened since he was married.

The case of Antonio A. Costa of New Bedford, Mass., charged with reckless driving and having defective brakes on his automobile at the time that it collided with a team occupied by two women, was nolled by Justice of the Peace Charles E. Russ of the Chaplin town court Monday afternoon. Lack of evidence was given as the grounds. Costa paid the costs of $14.85. It was said, that the New Bedford man had settled for injuries received by the women occupants and for the damage to the buggy. Grand Juror Frank M. Landon prosecuted the case. Costa was brought before the court by State Policeman Arthur Williams of the Danielson barracks.

Plans for a carnival under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Joseph's hospital are progressing nicely with every committee working to make the affair a huge success. The auxiliary was organized in 1909 and it has purchased the material and made all of the sheets, pillow cases, operation shirts, draw sheets, night robes, bureau scarfs etc., now being used at the hospital. The auxiliary has been given much assistance in sewing in the past few years but it continues to bear the tremendous expense of purchasing the material. In addition to this the organization supplies $30 of current magazines and papers each year, gives flowers for the wards, board room and corridors on Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. Ice cream is also provided on these holidays. A large assortment of trays, vases and other articles have been purchased. The only source of income has been from dues of one dollar per year.

Miss Dorothy Morgan became the bride of Raymond Welden at a pretty wedding solemnized in Glendale, W. Va., Christmas eve, by Rev. P. E. Thronberg, at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was attired in grey crepe. She carried sweetheart roses. Her maid of honor was Miss Lydia Gilmer who wore a gown of henna colored satin and carried Columbia roses. Many guests were present at the recention dinner. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Morgan. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Welden and is a graduate of Windham High school in the class of 1922. He now holds a responsible position with the Parkersburg Silk mill in Parkersburg, W. Va., where his father is superintendent.

Funeral services for Mrs. Nellie A. Gager were held at the late home 350 Windham Road Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock with Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock of the Congregational church officiating. Included in the large gathering of friends and relatives of the deceased was a representation of the state officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. Burial was in the new Willimantic cemetery. The bearers were George Whitford, Donald Kramer, Elwood Walker and Clayton Gager. Arrangements were by Avery and Van-Zandt.

Alden Harrison Whitmore, 34, died in Norwich Monday noon having been under treatment there for tuberculosis. He was born in Putnam, August 27, 1891, the son of Edward F. and Hawley Stone Whitmore. The family removed to this city in 1902. He attended the local grammar schools and for some years was with his father in the dry goods business. He was one of the first to be drafted in the World war, being called to the colors on September 18, 1917 and stationed at Camp Devens, Mass. One week later he was transferred to the camp at Niantic and was a member of Company C, 101st. Machine Gun Battalion, 26th Division, A. E. F., which embarked for France on October 10, 1917. While in the training camp he was disabled from accident and shock and after being confined in seven different hospitals he was returned to the United States in April 1918 and honorably discharged for disability. Surviving him is his father and mother and a brother, Howard W. Whitmore of Hartford.

Dense fog, which followed two days of rain and temperature as high as 45 degrees made driving exceedingly dangerous over the highways in this section, Tuesday night. Several slight collisions and narrowly averted accidents made the life of the motorists anything but pleasant. In one instance shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening a Ford sedan owned and operated by Miss Mary Rose Blanchette, of this city suffered a bent fender and damaged steering apparatus in a collision with another machine on the North Windham road. Both drivers considered the affair of slight moment and unavoidable. The local machine was towed to Leonard Bros. garage here and repairs were speedily made.

Joseph J. Grimes, a member of Engine Company No. 1 has been suspended from active duty temporarily by Fire Chief Henry J. Kelley, the suspension remaining effective until the monthly meeting of the board of aldermen next Monday night when it is expected that action will be taken on the case. The nature of the charge or charges held against Hoseman Grimes were not made known.

Robert Fitzgerald (colored) well known to the police departments in Eastern Connecticut, pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy in police court here Tuesday morning. Fitzgerald has been before the local court 11 times on a charge of vagrancy since 1919 and as many times again before courts of neighboring cities. Fitzgerald is 32 years old. He has no home and when odd jobs become too scarce he finds a peaceful way of being sent to Brooklyn jail until the dull business period passes over. Judge Foss sent him to his so-called temporary home for 90 days.

Ashford boasts the oldest organized band in the United States, the Babcock Silver Cornet Band, dating back some seventy years and now takes pride in the forming of an orchestra of twelve pieces in part members of the Babcock band. The orchestra has its headquarters in Warrenville and has adopted the name of "The Pompey Hollow Harmonizers." Pompey Hollow is the original name of Warrenville and the adoption of the name is for the purpose of bringing back memories of the early days of the town. Seven members of the orchestra are residents of Warrenville. The organization is directed by Prof. A. E. Lyman of Columbia. The Warrenville members of the orchestra are: William Rak, trombone; Al Bassett, second violin; Fred White, snare drum; Robert Balch, bass drum and cymbals; A. E. Lyman, first violin and director; Mrs. Isdor Whitehouse, violin; Ed. Jackson, saxophone, and Mrs. Hazel Baker, piano. The other four members are furnished by Director Lyman.

A big get-together party at the town hall is being planned by the employes of the Holland Silk company who will invite all of the officials of the concern to be present, including President Kenney of New York city. The operatives are arranging for an entertainment in the form of a home-talent minstrel show. This will be followed by a dance. Mrs. Eileen Racicot is coaching the minstrel.

MYSTIC

ANNUAL MEETING OF UNION BAPTIST CHURCH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

MYSTIC, Jan. 5.—The annual meeting of the Union Baptist church was held in the vestry Monday evening. After a prayer was offered Rev. J. G. Osborn presided. The reports submitted from the various branches of the church were encouraging and gave evidence that this church is in a prosperous condition. The treasurer, G. H. Richmond, reported the income from the funds held by the church as $1,118.19 and that the expenses have increased. The cost of remodeling the church was much more than was planned and the new heating plant has greatly added to the cost, but it is expected to prove satisfactory. The electric lighting is all new. The reports were given by E. F. Wilcox for the trustees, L. P. Allyn for benevolence and Mrs. C. H. Wolfe for the Ladies' Aid society (they gave $540 for the building fund and have $275 in the treasury), Ladies' Missionary society, Miss Harriet Fish; World Wide Guild, Miss Happie Brown; Junior World Wide Guild, Miss Elizabeth Thorp; World Crusaders, Mrs. D. M. Bennett; Y. P. S. C. E., Miss Betty Wheeler; music, Mrs. R. H. Wilcox; organ custodian, Mrs. Julia Coats. These reports showed much had been done in missionary work both by money and boxes of clothing sent to schools and missions and the guild in remembering the sick and shut-ins The election resulted as follows:

Clerk, Mrs. Julia E. Coats; treasurer, George H. Richmond; trustees, Elias F. Wilcox, Louis P. Allyn, G. H. Richmond, E. C. Hall, Harold Thorp, Manning Miner and Alden Fish to replace the late Dr. J. K. Bucklyn. The assistant treasurers are Mrs. E. C. Hall and Harold Thorp. Five for prudential committee and five tithing men. Music committee, Mrs. R. H. Wilcox, Mrs. Julia Coats, Mrs. J. K. Bucklyn. A committee for Sunday school officers was appointed and they will report next Sunday and elect officers. Four deacons will be elected at the next covenant meeting the first Friday in February. Two deasons are at present unable to serve and one goes south next week leaking only two able to attend the services. It is thought the time has arrived when more are needed to assist the older ones.

The Phebe Rathbun tent, Daughters of Veterans, will have their meeting and a Christmas tree Wednesday evening in G. A. R. hall. Each member will carry a ten cent gift for exchange and a pleasant time is anticipated.

Stanton W. Brown and daughter, Miss Theodora Brown of Norwich Town, were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Gurdon Allyn's Sunday.

Miss Constance Irving, of Poquonoc Bridge spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Cutler.

Mrs. Carl C. Cutler has gone with Mr. and Mrs. George Berkander, of Providence, R. I., on a three weeks' trip to Florida. Their first stop will be at Jacksonville, then going to Palm Beach and Miami. They return by way of the west coast stopping at St. Petersburg, Tampa and other places.

Mrs. Freelove Miller, of Norwich, spent Sunday and Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Gurdon Allyn.

Miss Ethel Thompson is spending three weeks in Westerly.

The sewing society of St. Mark's church will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. G. H. Deneke.

The next meeting under the direction of the Farm Bureau for Old Mystic will be held in the Methodist parish house Thursday. It will be an all day session. Those attending are making various kinds of baskets.

WESTERLY

POLICE STILL SEARCH FOR MISSING SAMPLE CASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 5—Mysterious disappearance from the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad shortly after the departure of the afternoon 3 o'clock express, on Saturday afternoon, of 24 drummer's sample shoes, together with the dark gray wrapped sample case, was being investigated by the Westerly police department, and the New Haven railroad police on Tuesday. Sergeant Marks of the railroad police and Patrolman George H. Champlin, of the Westerly force, directed their attention to a careful search of the country adjacent to the Pawcatuck river and in the Pierce street quarter of the town. Their quest on Tuesday proved a fruitless one. The shoes could hardly be of service to any one who might appropriated them unless that party was one-legged, for the samples were all for the same foot.

EXPLAIN LIMITS OF THE CITY COMPACT SECTION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Jan. 5—The police committee of the Westerly town council, Harry H. Coleman, Rogers E. Trainer and Isaac G. Smith, together with Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., held a conference Tuesday afternoon, at Westerly police headquarters with all the jutney men of Westerly. The main topic of discussion was the rates of fare being charged passengers to the Westerly hospital. It developed that most of the rates charged as per schedule on file with the police department called for a 25c charge in the compact or built up section of the town. From the town ordinances the jutney men were shown that Wells street, off which the hospital is located, is the southern boundary of the compact section and the redicence of Winzenzie P. Brucker. 230 Canal street was defined as the northern boundary. The session was a friendly one for the matter to be talked over and discussed by the town authorities and the jitney men.

Charles Ferraro, named at the council meeting as a special uniformed constable, is to be detailed to do duty exclusively, at Westerly's new (Ispite) theatre building, when it becomes licensed, and not in the Pierce street section of Westerly, as announced in Tuesday morning's Bulletin.

The first regular session of Westerly probate court this year, was held in the Westerly town hall, on Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, before Probate Judge Edward M. Burke. Matters were disposed of as follows;

Estate of Thomas F. Howard. Petition received from Industrial Trust company for the probate of the estate of the testatrr whose death occurred Dec. 10, 1925, that letters testimentary be issued to them, named therein as executor. Will read, proved and admitted to probate, the witnesses being Herbert W. Rathbun and Edith M. Rathbun. The Industrial Trust company was confirmed as executor with bond of $15,000, without surety. Lewis Stanton was named as appraiser. A petition was received from the widow, Anne M., for a six months' allowance for support and use of furniture.

Estate of Guiseppe Maiorano. Petition received from Antonio Maiorano for the probate of the estate of the testator, who died Dec. 7, 1925, and that letters testimentary be issued. Will read, proved and admitted to probate the witnesses being Joseph T. Grills and John F. Gallagher. Maria Maiorano, named in the will, was confirmed as executrix with bond of $1,500. Joseph T. Grills was named as the appraiser.

Estate of Edward A. Hart. Inventory of former Watch Hill resident, received, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of Charles J. Butler. Inventory received, allowed and ordered recorded. Court adjourned.

That the ambulances of the Westerly Sanitary corps and the Westerly hospital will continue to be operated independently is learned as the Westerly hospital and the Westerly Sanitary corps have announced a plan whereby each will maintain its ambulance service on an independent basis, yet will co-operate with other organizations in cases of emergency Sanitary corps membership cards entitling a subscriber and his family to a year's service for $2.50, will not be honored by the hospital. The hospital rates for ambulance service will be the same as those charged to nonmembers by the Sanitary corps.

For Head Colds

THERE are many ways to treat a cold in the head, but only one DIRECT way, and that is with vapors that can be inhaled.

The easiest and most satisfying way to get these vapors is to snuff a little Vicks VapoRub well up the nose, or melt a little in a spoon or tin cup and inhale.

The medicated vapors reach immediately into every corner of the air passages, soothing and healing with every breath.

For other forms of cold troubles just rub Vicks over the throat and chest at bedtime. It is then the body heat which releases these vapors.

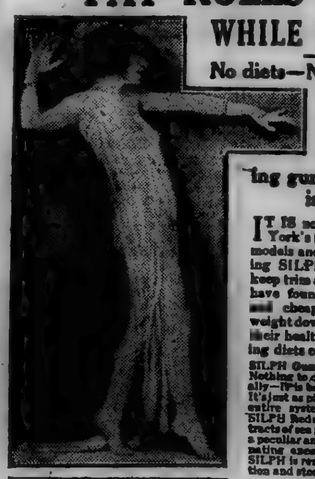
How Beautiful New York Actresses Get Slender With

SILPH REDUCING GUM —FAT ROLLS OFF WHILE YOU CHEW



No diets—No exercises—No dangerous drugs—3 pieces of delicious and refreshing chewing gum a day and gone is the FAT!

IT IS no secret today that New York's most beautiful actresses, models and chorus girls are chewing SILPH Gum to reduce and keep trim and slender because they have found it the easiest, safest and cheapest way to get their weight down without having to ruin their health or looks with weakening diets or tiresome exercises.

SILPH Gum works while you chew—Nothing to do—Nothing to take internally—It's better than eating candies—It's just as pleasant and it tones up your entire system while it reduces you. SILPH Reducing Gum contains the extracts of sea plants and herbs which have a peculiar and wonderful effect on eliminating excess fat. At the same time SILPH is remarkable to relieve indigestion and stomach troubles.

"SILPH Reducing Chewing Gum keeps me slender and well," says Tynia, beautiful actress from Earl Carrol's Vanities.

If You Are Too Fat Chew SILPH

IF YOU ARE BOTHERED WITH STOMACH TROUBLES AND INDIGESTION CHEW SILPH, providing of course you are willing to lose weight as SILPH seldom takes off less than 2 or 3 lbs. a week.

You chew SILPH as you would any ordinary chewing gum. SILPH is so agreeable, pleasant and refreshing that you will hate to give it up after you have attained the ideal proportions.

For those who are only plump, but fear the dreaded enemy FAT creeping on one piece of SILPH a day will do—It will keep those rolls of FAT away and you'll be able to eat all you want—SILPH is guaranteed absolutely harmless—DOES NOT CONTAIN THYROID OR ANY DANGEROUS DRUGS—It is the ideal way to reduce because it is so safe and cheap! Try it today.

Mrs. M. S. Howe of Troy, Ohio says, "I have taken one dollar's worth of SILPH and lost 10 pounds.

"The first order of SILPH has helped me wonderfully—I lost 7 pounds in a week." Miss C. Collins, Geneseo, Ill.

"Chew SILPH and be SYLPH-LIKE"

Get SILPH from any good drug store—sells for one a box, enough for one week. Distributed by Silph Medical Company, 9 West 60th Street, New York City.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON PEOPLE INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 5.—Mrs. Joseph Gareau, organist and several members of St. James' choir, were injured, none of them apparently seriously, early Tuesday morning on Killingly avenue, Putnam, when the machine in which they were riding, with Mrs. L. E. Kennedy driving, was in collision with a car owned by Chester E. Covill of Killingly avenue.

There was considerable fog and the highway was slippery at the time of the accident. As a result of the crash, Mrs. Gareau who was riding in the front seat with Mrs. Kennedy, received a cut on the forehead when thrown against the broken windshield. Mrs. Albert Bernier, riding on a "dinkey" seat in the big sedan, was hurled against the back of the front seat and painfully injured. She fainted, later was removed to her home here and during the afternoon was confined to her bed. She complained of pains in her chest and she has a badly sprained wrist. Miss Elizabeth Grennon of the West Side had her legs lacerated by contact with sections of a broken seat, while Mrs. Kennedy was thrown up against the steering wheel and somewhat bruised and lamed. Ovila Bernier and Raymond Ballard, riding in the rear of the car, escaped with a shaking up. Mrs. Gareau, it was said at her home Tuesday afternoon, was considerably lacerated and bruised in addition to getting a cut on the forehead above the bridge of the nose, but was resting quite comfortably.

Mrs. Kennedy was driving toward Putnam, bound for Pomfret, where the organist and some of the soloists of one of the choirs of St. James were to take the musical part of a requiem mass. Mr. Covill was backing a light truck out of his yard onto the state highway as the machine Mrs. Kennedy was driving came along and the accident followed. Both machines were considerably damaged. The accident happened about 8:40 a. m. Members of the Danielson party returned here and received first aid treatment at a local drug store, later going to their homes. Mrs. Bernier is under the care of a physician.

DANIELSON HAD 37 FIRES DURING THE PAST YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Jan. 5.—The 1925 fire record as compiled by Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department is as follows:

Oct. 13, 1 p. m., Box 56, Mrs. A. Tatro, Franklin, chimney.
Oct. 23, 4:15 p. m., Box 32, borough property, children and matches.
Nov. 5, 8:27 a. m., Box 33, Mrs. William Myers, Mechanic street, chimney.
Dec. 14, 10:45 a. m., Box 14, M. Loiselle, Carter street, chimney; 10:05 p. m., (S), Joseph Coquette house, Maple St., chimney.
Dec. 17, 4:20 a. m., Box 4, Connecticut Mills stockhouse, $1,000 damage.
Dec. 19, 7:30 p. m., F. S. Kennedy building, Dayville, $3,000 damage.
Dec. 23, 6:13 p. m., Box 14, A. Warner house, School street, chimney.
Dec. 29, 5:02 p. m., Box 18, Alton Frost house, Riverview, chimney.

Here is another record of a year of very small losses. The total loss, excluding the Dayville fire and not within the borough limits, was under $4,000. As in all other recent years the great majority of the times the department responded to alarms it was for chimney fires, not particularly to be worried about except as to the liability of their getting out of control and causing real damage.

From the home of his sister, Mrs. Edmund Vachon, West Side, Tuesday morning the funeral of William Varieur, also known as William Waite, of Wauregan was held Tuesday morning with services at the Sacred Heart church in Wauregan, Rev. J. C. Mathieu being the celebrant of the requiem mass. Burial was in Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were Arthur Vachon, Emile Vachon, Ernest Champigny, Samuel Marcheseault, all nephews of the deceased, who lost his life when struck by an automobile while walking along the Wauregan highway last Saturday night.

Mr. Varieur leaves two sisters, Mrs. Edmund Vachon of Danielson and Mrs. Eugene Champigny of Central Falls and one brother, Octave Varieur, of New Bedford, Mass. Martin T. Burns of Danielson of Danielson was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rev. James H. George, a former rector of St. Alban's parish, who is visiting here for a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Reed of Hawkins street, will conduct the service in observance of the feast of the Epiphany at St. Alban's church at 10 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning. Rev. Mr. George is here from St. Louis.

Edmond Vachon of the West Side is recovering from an injury to his thumb the member nearly severed, two weeks ago, by a circular saw that Mr. Vachon was operating while at work in Wauregan.

Eight inches of ice that covered Quinebaug lake Tuesday morning was cut somewhat by the high temperature and fog of the day, but a few days of snappy and continued cold weather will make the ice ready for harvesting. The ice gathering machinery has been tested out and is ready for service on an hour's notice.

A check-up shows that such a volume of business was done at the post office during the Christmas season as to insure the revenues for the fiscal year being sufficient to earn a increase in salary for both Postmaster E. H. Keach and Assistant Postmaster Earl Winslow.

Lieut. Harold E. Greene of the Service battery, 192nd F. A., stationed here, has been recommended for promotion to a captaincy and for assignment to the staff of Major E. L. Darbie, commanding special troops of the 43rd division. An order announcing the appointment is expected within a few days. Lieut Green in his new capacity will rate a captain of infantry troops. Lieut. Greene is a World War veteran with a splendid overseas record.

It was announced Tuesday that a complete accord and agreement has been reached between the building committee having charge of plans for erecting additions to Killingly High school and M. H. Berthiaume, Jr., relative to rights of way between the high school site and Mr. Berthiaume's property. This agreement removes all possibility of a delay in starting building operations on that account. The agreement reached is entirely satisfactory to both parties concerned.

The plant of the Bragg Woolen company at Tarkiln, R. I., in which Charles Bragg of the Central Worsted company at Central Village is heavily interested is to resume operations in the immediate future with a good line of business in sight. This is another of the signs of a good year in the textile business about which manufacturers are talking these early days of 1926.

Danielson's grand old man, who is ever young, Deacon A. C. Greene, and Mrs. Greene, have entertained during the holiday season their daughter, Miss Mary E. Greene, of Cambridge, Mass., and two of their grandsons, Edward C. Greene of Yale university and Albert M. Greene, Belmont, Mass., and who attends school in Boston. Deacon Greene, who is 95 years of age, and Mrs. Greene, have had great pleasure from the presence of their visitors.

Even among the old timers Tuesday would get a rating as belonging in the midst of a January thaw.

"Ask the man who drives one," a famous car manufacturer's slogan, would apply to bte driver of any other make if you wanted to know Tuesday how one likes motoring in a fog.

There are rumors about that the next section of the Danielson-Putnam state highway to be built will be from where the concrete now ends above Attawaugan southward through that village to a point near where the route branches to Dayville.

Distribution of the new issue of telephone directories was being made in Danielson Tuesday.

Trolley rails in Furnace, Cottage, Water and Dyer streets are to be removed in the spring, it was stated here Tuesday.

It seems that skunks don't wait for groundhog day if they feel like coming out in January, as they did in town Tuesday night.

Incident to the change of seasons, some of the manufacturing plants of the town are curtailing operations for the time being.

This (Wednesday) evening the newly elected officers of McGregor, Woman's Relief corps, will be installed by Mrs. Ida Thomas. Prior to the installation the meeting will be re-opened for the election of one officer to fill a vacancy. New officers of Colonel Edward Anderson camp, Sons of Veterans, also will be installed this evening. A delegation from the camp at Mystic is expected to attend.

Misses Marie Weaver and Elizabeth Dunn are visiting in Boston today (Wednesday).

MISS CRAWFORD TELLS OF LIFE AMONG INDIANS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—Miss Isabel Crawford, daughter of a Baptist minister, and a teacher among the Indians for many years, gave a very interesting account of her work among the Indians, Sunday afternoon, at the Brandy Hill Baptist church. Miss Crawford was born at Cheltenhan, Canada, and passed her youth in Manitoba, Cheltenhan and at Woodstock. In Manitoba, she had the experience of frontier life along the Saskatchewan and came in touch with the Indians. Later, at St. Thomas, North Dakota, she again became interested in the Indians. After graduating from the Baptist Missionary Training schools, in 1892, she was appointed by the board of the Woman's American Mission society, to the field work among the Indians.

Nearly eight years was spent by her among the Kiowas or Blanket Indians, at Elk Creek, and the Saddle Mountain, Oklahoma, resulting in an establishment of a fine church. Her experience was then put to use in the supervision of the work among the Indians, visiting all the stations of the Woman's society.

Miss Crawford says of herself that her success has been due to "splendid helpers, a cast-iron constitution, Scotch determination, Irish nonsense, the Divine call and the power of the Holy Spirit." Had any of these been lacking the results could not have been the same. She has faced the demands of Christmas festivities in remote places, of funerals and weddings, building of a church, holding services, killing pigs, training workers, preparing "big eats," and has met them all with undaunted courage and a high sense of humor, which especially distinguishes her both as a writer and a speaker.

Her dramatic sense led her to render the Lord's Prayer into the Indian sign language and a record of this has been published in a series of illustrations showing it as done by her in full picturesque Indian costumes.

A young woman had never been put in such fields before, when Miss Crawford began her work and she did a new and unique thing in winning as a girl, the confidence of the Indians and in breaking through their antagonism against the white race.

PUTNAM OFFICIALS ARE RE-APPOINTED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—At the last meeting of the old city council last evening, all of the former officials were reappointed as follows: City clerk, Thomas P. Ryan; city treasurer, Charles H. Brown; prosecuting attorney, Eric H. Johnson; city engineer, George W. Perry; superintendent of streets, Frederick Dumas; chief of the fire department, Ralph E. Thurston; assistants, Philias Cloutier and Alphonse Dumas; captain of police, William H. Jarvis sergeant, George Laird; patrolmen John Ryan, Benoni Durand, Albert Sponcey; health officer, Peter Gardner; board of health, Dr. George T. LaMarche, Dr. F. A. Morrell, Dr. F. T. Baldwin, A. Newton Vaughn, Arthur S. Macdonald, George W. Perry. Charles A. Richard, alderman-at-large, was elected president of the council.

The first meeting of the new council will be held Wednesday evening.

FILES APPEAL ON PROBATE OF GREGOIRE WILL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—As one of the next of kin, George Gregoire, of Longueil, Province of Quebec, Canada, has filed in the superior court for this county, an appeal from probate in the matter of the will of the late Joseph Gregoire, of Putnam, who died in a Worcester hospital about a year ago.

His estate was valued by appraisers at $11,000. One of the bequests was $500, and the furniture of the house in which he lived to his niece who had helped to care for him during his illness. To another woman who assisted in looking after him he gave $500.

The residue of his estate is left to his executor, Rev. Charles F. Bedard, to be expended in masses for the repose of the soul of the deceased. This is by no means unusual in members of the Catholic faith.

He is one of several distant relatives of Joseph Gregoire and his petition is filed by his attorney, Samuel B. Harvey, of Willimantic.

ALL BROOKLYN JAIL PRISONERS PUT TO PLEA

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 5—All prisoners confined in the Brooklyn jail, who are out on bail, were put to plea in superior court which opened on the criminal side today with George E. Hinman on the bench.

Several cases where the accused pleaded guilty were disposed of.

Raymond Brown of Windham, was given a suspended sentence of one year in the reformatory for breaking and entering, and placed in charge of Stanley Muirhead, as guardian ad litem.

Maurice Spector, charged with permitting his three minor children to remain in a place where they would be exposed to danger to their life, health and morals, pleaded not guilty and a jury trial was asked for.

Albian, C. Russell opened an automobile dealers place in Danielson and disposed of four cars that were sent him by a Providence firm, without making a proper accounting. He pleaded guilty and was given a sentence of six months in jail.

Christopher J. Riley, of Oxford, is the man who obtained from Charles A Thayer, house manger of the Putnam inn, $50 in cash on a check to which he had forged the name of James McWilliams, of Worcester, Mass. He admitted his guilt and in extenuation said that he had been drunk for three or four days and that when he got home and sobered up enough to realize what he had done, he came back to Putnam to try and make restitution. His previous record is good, his parents are well thought of and they had engaged a Worcester attorney to assist in representing him.

Judge Hinman said that the sentence would be one year in jail but that at the expiration of four months his attorney could ask for a parole which he indicated would be considered favorably.

Ferdinand Goyer, of Arctic, R. I., who was placed in a state institution at the age of eight, drove two people whom he knew, to Sterling, and when they left the car on an errand, he decided to run away with it. It lasted him as far as Illinois. There he sold it for $17, beat his way to California, and then returned to Arctic, where he was arrested. Sentenced to the reformatory.

Clifford H. Wilson, of Manchester, obtained enough money on a forged check, to enable him to get married and take his wife to New York. When she learned of it his bride insisted on him returning to Manchester to try and make restitution. His sentence was one year in jail.

Harry Beckett, Jr., John Jolicoeur and Silva Jolly admitted that they had robbed a man, in Plainfield, after assaulting him, but insisted that the intoxication was due to liquor that their victim had sold them. Beckett got from two to four years in state's prison, the others were sentenced to the state reformatory.

It is a distinct honor for Putnam that one of its residents, Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the republican state central committee should be named as one of the two people from Connecticut to act as advisory committee for the sesquicentennial celebration to be held at Philadelphia next summer. This commission, consisting of representatives from every state in the union, will have charge of the government's participation in the affair.

Ralph C. Booth, formerly assistant manager of the Southern New England Telephone Company at Waterbury, began his new duties at the local exchange this week, as manager of this district. Henry S. Lyons, who has been the manager here for the past several years, also began his new duties as manager of the Norwich exchange.

Mission Groups A and B of the Baptist church will meet on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Moses Leonard at her home on Livery street.

In the death notice of the Bulletin, the name Martin Truesdell should have read Martin Truesdell Putnam. He was one of the best known mill operators in the city and for 25 years, except for two short periods, has been in the employ of the Hammond Knowlton Silk company, now the H. K. H. branch of the Hemingway-Hayden Bros. Corporation. A year ago he was given a medal for 25 years' continuous service with the company.

Miss Catherine Geary has returned to her home at Portland, Conn., after spending the holidays with her aunt, Miss Margaret Dolan of Chapman street.

Miss Edith Pease has returned to Oberlin, Ohio, where she is a student at the Oberlin college, after spending a two weeks vacation with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Pease of Fremont street.

Mowry Ross of Philadelphia has been the guest of friends in this vicinity for the past week. Mr. Ross was a former well known resident of Woodstock, but is now an assistant engineer for the Reading company and is now superintending a $2,500,000 grain elevator for the Philadelphia Grain company.

Fred Jarvais, a student at a school in Hartford, has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jarvis of Livery street.

Everything is in readiness for the installation of officers of Union St. Jean Baptist of North Grosvenordale, which will take place in their hall on the afternoon of Sunday, January 10 Alma Forcier, of Goodyear has been chosen as the installing officer. A musical program will follow the installation and refreshments will be served.

Miss Mary Carpenter has returned to her duties as a teacher at Andover academy after spending her vacation in Putnam with her mother, Mrs. Alice Carpenter.

Chandler Morse and Franklin Perry, who have been spending their vacations with their parents have returned to their studies at Amherst college.

Gerard Cartier, a student at the New York University, spent part of his holiday vacation with relatives in the city.

Miss Catherine Frazio has resigned her position as a nurse at the Day Kimball hospital and has entered a noviate at Holyoke, Mass. Miss Brigid O'Toule of Clinton, Mass., has succeeded her at the hospital.

Mrs. Edith Cornell of New Haven has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. E. C. Morse on Seward street.

Miss Florence Tourtelotte and Mrs. Gilbert Johnson of Hartford have been the guests of their mother, Mrs. Ada Tourtelotte on South Main street.

Mrs. William Desauiniers is making a good recovery after a recent operation for appendicitis at the Day Kimball hospital.

After a five mile chase along the Post road at more than 50 miles an hour in which a shot was fired by a Stamford policeman, Roland E. Tolson of 2,300 Turnwell avenue, Bronx, N. Y., surrendered to the pursuing officers and admitted that the car which he was driving had been stolen in Bridgeport.

DEBT TERMS

Something to ponder over has been given to the house ways and means committee through the statements of Secretary Mellon concerning the debt funding agreements negotiated by the debt funding commission of this country with representatives of other governments.

When Secretary Mellon, in urging approval of the agreements, declares them to be the best obtainable, points out that a prosperous Europe is worth more to us than the entire debt and predicts that we must accept the terms or receive nothing, unless we are willing to go to war to collect, he speaks with the knowledge of one who has reached his decision after a full understanding of the facts concerning the debts and the capacities of the respective countries to pay.

There can be no sympathy with those who are urging the cancellation of the debts, but it must also be realized that, while we believe it of the utmost importance that the nations of Europe which borrowed for the purpose of conducting war should repay as much as they can, it is impossible to get blood out of a turnip.

Some are ready to go off at a tangent and to make a great flourish in the presentation of their demands. There are those who are doing this concerning the debt agreements and threatening to repudiate what has been done by the commission because they found that the capacities of the respective countries were not alike and that certain concessions must be made. It is easy to make a great howl over suspicions and imaginations. When a full understanding of the facts is obtained there is invariably a different attitude taken by those to who facts make an appeal.

The grandstander's must of course have their fling, but it will be with much surprise if the ways and means committee does not give endorsement to the report of the debt funding commission and urge its approval by congress.

FORESTRY PROBLEMS

Constant agitation and the setting of good examples is going to do much for the cause of forestry. For years there have been set forth repeatedly the growing scarcity of timber, the increase in the price and the turning to other materials, because the inroads into the timber supply has been so much greater than the provisions for a future crop.

The secretary of the forestry association of Massachusetts refers to the situation in a pointed manner when he says that we have eleven times as many people in this country now as we had in 1820 and only one third of the timber existing at that time to supply present needs, while the cost of lumber used in construction has risen from 25 to 35 per cent.

An example which cannot go unnoticed is that which has been made in the interest of public education by setting aside six towns on Cape Cod for research purposes. There the residents and the visitors are being schooled in the importance of fire protection, the methods to pursue and the results to be obtained from it. This means provision of patrols fighting of fires and protection of wooded areas.

Cape Cod is one of the those sections which has been visited by fierce forest fires. The effects of them are to be seen in many directions today, but there is no good reason why such repetitions should be tolerated, and certainly if education is all that is needed to prevent it it will be an investment worth while. Likewise there is the important subject of reforestation which goes hand in hand with the protection of the woodlands against fire. It cannot be expected that our forests can be raided without making some provision for future supplies We have reason to apply every possible effort for the prevention of the many forms of waste in connection with our forest lands and their products, but there is also a duty of no small magnitude in connection with the planting of more trees. The timber crop is entitled to encouragement quite as well as others.

GREECE'S DICTATORSHIP

Greece has been the cause of anxiety for a long time. There was a time when Greece stood in with the powers of Europe and was able to get assistance when it needed it, but there came a time when Greece displayed ingratitude and since then it has been floundering around in a sea of uncertainty. There have been wars, which were disastrous. There have been government changes, which haven't clarified the situation. There have been revolutions, which haven't seemed to terminate the belligerency in that country.

Before Greece has had a chance to cool off after the decision of the league of nations that it was the aggressor against Bulgaria and must pay an indemnity for its invasion of Bulgarian territory, there comes the information that the parliamentary form of government has been succeeded by a military dictatorship. Premier Pangalos has taken hold of the reins as if inspired by the manner in which Mussolini has acted in Italy and indicated that he was to direct affairs henceforth. With the backing of the army he feels that he has all the support that is needed. The Greek army has been, and apparently still is, a power in that country. It has much more influence there than it does anywhere else. It has been responsible for Greece undertaking certain things which it was expected to put through, but they resulted adversely. It apparently misjudged the Turkish army and was soundly trounced, and when it recently went against Bulgaria there was that same spirit of aggression which has long since made a bad impression.

Under such conditions the dictator is bound to be a pawn in the hands of the military. It cannot be believed that there is any truth in the report that a new quarrel is being picked with Turkey, in view of the Greek finances, its crushing defeat by Turkey and its recen' call to account by the league of nations. Greece has been in an unsettled state for a considerable period but there is nothing in its latest move which gives any assurance that it has taken a step that will better conditions.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN

When Magistrate Jean F. Norris of New York maintains that American fathers and mothers are not giving enough time to their children it is not a new observation. It is a view which has been expressed by many, some in a judicial position and some not.

Judge Norris speaks from her contact with children in connection with court cases, investigations made before the imposition of sentences and the tendency which has been noted among the young, in too many of such instances there can be noted the absence of that restraint which should come from the exercise of parental influence and responsibility. Letting the children shirk for themselves and denying them the good influences which they have a right to expect from parents is unquestionably responsible for much delinquency. None better than welfare workers and court officials can appreciate this deplorable situation.

But it is not solely in connection with moral side of the child's training that this lack of time and interest on the part of parents is to be noted. It is getting to be the custom for some parents to turn all such responsibilities over the teachers and expect the children to get at school what they lack at home instead of working in cooperation with the school training. The failure to respond to duty in this respect results not only in wrong tendencies, but in a disregard for the taint of criminality.

"If children are not taught to obey their parents, certainly it is not surprising for them to refuse to obey the law," is a view which it is not hard to understand. It is in fact the inevitable outcome of laxity in the home and it is deplorable to think that there are parents that are more to blame than the wrongdoing children.

ACCEPTABLE JUDGMENT

Strong endorsement of the action of Secretary Kellogg of the department of state in refusing admission to this country to Catherine Karolyi under the laws of the country has prevailed. Secretary Kellogg has maintained that he has acted under the law of the nation for the welfare of the country as the result of information which he has received but which he does not consider it expedient to divulge.

Catherine Karolyi seeks to come here to visit friends, but her purpose is to get into the country for lecturing purposes. She is known to be of radical tendencies and with a desire to spread her views about the country. In spite of the efforts of the secretary of state to prevent any such agitation, steps are now being taken through legal channels to require this country to accept her presence whether it wants it or not, and after she has been told that she is regarded as undesirable.

Perhaps it will be possible to force the secretary to change his stand through the courts, but there is reason to doubt it. The idea that we are obliged to permit her to spread her red or pinkish views in the role of a heroine is certainly interesting. If we are not in a position to protect ourselves against a lot of disturbers it is indeed unfortunate. We have reason to be thankful on the other side that we have a secretary of state who is alert to the desirability of applying the laws of the nation against such individuals whenever the opportunity presents. We are willing to accept the judgment of the secretary of state based on information before him that she ought not to be admitted.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When it comes to keeping new resolutions the first year is always the hardest.

Some of those who used to swear off at New Year's are now swearing at prohibition.

Another American girl finds she has married a fake nobleman. Another case of leaping before looking.

The man on the corner says: Dad's interest in the new mechanical toys should have disappeared before this.

There seems to be a chance for a poll to be taken to see how many want the coal strike settled until it can be settled right.

It was easy to intimate a lot of scandal in connection with the loss of the Shenandoah but it was not so easy to show it when it came to dealing with facts.

December weather is reported to have been normal. Now if the same can be said of January and February when the time comes, everyone will be satisfied except those who predicted something different.

In France objection is being raised because goods manufactured there are brought here, reshipped and sold in Paris as "made in America". This country ought to have grounds for a protest against such misrepresentation.

THE UPLIFTER

(The telephone operator is speaking to her girl friend.)

"'Lo kid. That you? How's the baby?

"Just swell. Posolootly. Say, old thing, listen. Ja ever stop a minute and think how full of funnies this world is—if you know what I mean?

"Sure you know. I mean all the different kinds of nuts that's runnin around loose, see?

"Well, say, girlie, listen. I wisht you would of been here a coupla days back when one of 'am blows in here lookin' for trouble, see? She was one of these here—you know nosey girlies if you know what I mean.

"Well, say, dearie, lookit here. She—you know—this here upstage dame—comes steppin' along and she gives me the double-O like those kinda folks does, and she says, 'Oh, so you're the telephone girl,' she says.

"'Posolootly. Can I do anything for you?' I says, reel kinda polite.

"'Yes, dear,' she comes back at me.

"And say, baby, listen. Right then was when I started to commence to get peeved, see? There ain't nothin' gets me so sore as havin' them kinda folks hand me that line of bunk, see?

"Well, say, kid, listen. I kep' right on actin' polite, that bein' my job, but it sure hurt, see? I says, 'Was they somebody had an appointment with you?' I says.

"'No dear. I just wanted to have a little chat with you,' she says.

"Well I wanted to say, 'Shoot, sister, and ankle along.' But did I? I did not. I just says 'is zat so?' and then she takes a dive down into her bag and she comes up again with a piece of paper about a foot long and printed all over, and she says, 'I'd like to ask you a few questions,' she says.

"Well, she done it all right. She sure did give me an earful. What she didn't pull off! Say! She asks me how old I am and how long I been workin' and was this my first job and if my pa and ma was livin' and how many kinds they was in the family and if so why, and was they workin', too.

"Say, kid, you'd of died had you of been listenin' in, see? First it struck me kinda comical, me thinkin' she was just some new kinda nut, but when it begun to seem like she's goin' to spend the rest o' the day makin' a monkey outa me I started to get kinda torrid on top. And when it come to her askin' me didn't I go to the movies every night I says, 'Say, lady,' I says, 'I guess there's a catch in this somewheres,' I says. 'I don't get you,' says. 'What's the big idea?' I says? She says, 'Well,' she says, 'I'm just gatherin' together information,' she says, 'so's I can write a book that'll help the girls in your position,' she says.

"Honest, kid, can you beat it? 'Help the who?' I says. 'There ain't but one girl in my position,' I says, 'and you don't need to worry about her,' I says 'She's sittin' pretty,' I says.

"Sassy? Well, ma says I was when I tells her about it. But honest, kid, I was so peeved—if you know what I mean. So I says, 'What ja wanter write a book for?' I says. 'I wouldn't bother to write no book,' I says. 'They's a whole pile more of 'em now than a person would ever wanter read,' I says. 'And anyway, we wouldn't want any of that line o' goods here,' I says. 'And furthermore the boss he don't let nobody try to sell no books around here,' I says. 'You'd oughta seen him this mornin' when one of them book agents was here,' I says.

"Gee, that dame was sore! She says 'I wasn't tryin' to sell no book' she says. 'I'm just gettin' the facts together to write one,' she says. 'It's all the same to the boss,' I says, 'and he's just about due to blow in now,' I says, 'so I guess you better beat it while you're feelin' good,' I says. 'And I don't mean maybe either,' I says.

"Sure she did. And, gee, ma was sore at me when I tells her about talkin' up so sassy. But say, kid, listen. This is how I dope it out, see? Maybe I'm kinda dumb—some folks seem to think so anyways—but I ain't dumb enough so's I don't know enough not to go round askin' other folks things that it ain't none of my affairs if I know 'em or if I don't know 'em, see? And that ain't so dumb, is it? I ask you.

"Well, bye-bye, kid. Gimme a ring when the boss ain't lookin'."—Chicago News.

Stories That Recall Others

"Tie Him to the Cart."

They were engaged in the weekly collection of the ashes and garbage, and that is never done without plenty of talk and noise. One of the fellows was stalling in the opinion of the leader of the crew. He wanted to express himself, perhaps jolly a bit and give the fellow to understand he would have to keep up with the others, so he blurts out in astonishment as the particular helper came up, "Why I thought we had lost you!"

"I thought we had lost him too," chimed in another.

Then as a bit of seasoned advice, the first one added: "Say, why don't you go down to —— store and get 500 or 600 feet of clothes line and we'll tie you to the cart? You surely are liable to get lost."

"Come on," said the diligent one who had been putting the barrel back where it belonged, "more work and less talk. Stop getting the ashes and papers in the street."

Low Finance

Two boys wandering along the street discovered a dime at the bottom of a light space under a grating. One knew where he could get a magnet and started off, the other boy accompanying. Back they came with the owner of the magnet to begin fishing. The proprietor of the store noticing the operations came out to see what it was all about. Then he went back, got a long stick, attached some chewing gum to the end and extracted the coin.

Being what he considered fair minded he produced a nickel and handed it to one of the boys. He started to stammer something like a thank you, then looked back at the other boys and ventured, "Would y' mind, mister, givin' us another cent, so's we can divvy up even?"

And the man with the stick, being still fair minded, and having a cent in his pocket made a further concession to the discoverers who hurried away to declare a cash dividend and indulge in reckless spending.

From Small Beginnings

Joseph Parker, Who Turned People Away From His Church.

"I can't get in! It's no use! And here I came early in the morning, too! It do beat all!"

The man shook his head and again plunged into the crowd that surged around a little church building in one of the poorer sections of London, about 1870. The whole street was full of people who would have liked to crowd their way into the little building to hear the famous preacher, Joseph Parker.

In a certain sense Joseph Parker, who died in 1902, was the Billy Sunday of his time. No one knew just what he was likely to say or to do—and they were all curious to know. He had started out in a small and unpopular place, after he had put himself through various courses—for he never had the opportunity to attend college or university as a regularly enrolled candidate for a degree. He was one of those many people who are born so poor that they have to work hard for every thing that they have in life. He had wanted an education and so he went and took it! That is, he found books, borrowed books, bought books, and studied.

Then, when the time came, Parker went to a few courses. Just as soon as he could do so, he began to preach. He was a very individual man, who did not care a penny for what the conservative people said or thought about him. He preached to the men of the crowd and he won them heart and soul. He did an immense amount of good with the humbler people of London, wrote a number of excellent books, and went on his way until he died at the age of 72. "He war the makin' o' me!" said many a poor workman when he heard the news that Joseph Parker was dead, "He came down here into these rough streets and he spoke right from the heart, he did!" For that reason Joseph Parker is still remembered.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Michael I. Pupin, who has succeeded to the presidency of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is a Columbia university professor who has gained world renown by his discoveries and inventions, largely in the field of electricity. A native of Hungary, he received his education in Prague, at the University of Berlin and at Columbia university. Joining the Columbia faculty as an assistant teacher of electrical engineering, he in turn taught mathematics and physics and finally came to a full professorship in the chair of electro-mechanics. Prof. Pupin's chief discoveries have been in the realm of electrical resonance, in the theoretical and practical aspects of magnetization of iron, and in electrical wave propagation. His telephonic devices are in use the world over. Honors have come to him from universities and scientific societies in America and Europe.

Such a Silly Quarrel

It seems to me that, willy-nilly,
Quarrels all are rather silly.
—Old Mother Nature.

When Peter Rabbit gave himself away by thumping the danger signal on the old log on which he was sitting in the moonlight he didn't think of himself at all. His one thought was to warn Jumper the Hare, that big cousin of his, that great danger was near. As for Jumper, he really did no thinking. He didn't know where the danger was or what the danger was. But by experience he had found out that the surest way for him to escape an enemy was to dodge. So now, without taking time to think, he dodged. It was lucky for him that he did. As it was Hooty the Owl barely missed him. Hooty's great claws found only snow.

But Hooty, big as he is, is quick in the air. Like a flash he turned and struck again, and again Jumper dodged just in time. But Jumper had no time to see where he was going as he dodged and this time he dodged within jumping distance of Reddy Fox. Like a flash Reddy sprang. Had there been no snow he certainly would have caught Jumper. But the snow interfered and once more Jumper dodged.

Now Hooty the Great Horned Owl had wheeled and turned and struck again just as Jumper dodged the third time and Reddy Fox sprang. It brought Hooty so close that one wing brushed Reddy's nose. Instantly Reddy snapped his teeth closed on that wing. Then things happened. Reddy didn't have hold of the fleshy part of that wing. He merely had a mouthful of the big stiff feathers. Instantly Hooty began beating him with that other great wing, and those blows hurt. All the time Hooty was striking at Reddy with his hooked bill and with his great claws, and all the time Reddy was hanging on and trying to keep out of the way of bill and claws.

How the snow flew! It quite hid the two fighters. Peter Rabbit was so excited that he almost fell off that hollow log into the deep snow. He sat up straight and his eyes looked as if they were trying to pop right out of his head. He could hear Reddy snarling and he could hear the snapping of Hooty's bill. Two or three times Reddy yelped. Peter knew then that Hooty had reached Reddy with bill or claw.

And then the fight ended as suddenly as it had begun. Reddy had let go of that wing. Out of the cloud of snow rose Hooty. Reddy sprang up trying to seize a wing again. But he missed, and then sat in the snow looking up and snarling at Hooty perched in a tree just out of reach. Reddy's coat was torn, but he appeared not to even know it. Hooty's wing had lost one big feather and some of the others were broken at the ends. He could fly, but that wing wouldn't be as good as the other for a long time. But Hooty didn't appear to be aware of this. Those two were too busy quarreling to think of their injuries.

"What right had you to try to steal my dinner?" demanded Reddy.

"It wasn't your dinner; it was mine, and if you had left me alone I would have had it," retorted Hooty.

"It wasn't yours. I saw Jumper long before you did, and you know it," declared Reddy.

"Then why didn't you catch him?" jeered Hooty. "You know as well as I do that you didn't have a chance in the world of catching that long-legged dodger. He was playing with you. That is what he was doing, playing with you. You were just floundering about in the snow and he was having no trouble at all. I tell you he was my dinner. If he hadn't been warned"—

Hooty didn't finish, but turned to stare over at Peter Rabbit. He had just remembered Peter. Peter didn't wait a second. He dived into that hollow log before Hooty could move.

Then Hooty and Reddy took up that silly quarrel again. They called each other names and each stuck to it that he had been robbed of a dinner by the other. And all the time the cause of their silly quarrel, Jumper the Hare was sitting snugly hidden under some hemlock boughs, thankful for his escape and chuckling as he listened to the silly quarrel over him.

The next story: "Another Snow-walker."

"What right had you to steal my dinner?" demanded Reddy.

OBITUARY.

Horace Dwight Bromley

Horace Dwight Bromley, son of the late Horace B. Bromley of Norwich, died Monday night at 11:35 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Orra E. Miner, in Windham, at the age of 77 years. Mr. Bromley's early years were passed in Norwich. Later he moved to North Stonington where he engaged in agricultural lines, specializing in the raising of high grade stock.

In 1873 he was united in marriage with Emily C. Woodmansee of Preston who lived only a year after the marriage. In 1877 he married Hannah Kinney of Voluntown who passed away in 1919. Three of the four children by the second marriage survive. They are Mrs. Eunice J. Brown and Peleg H. Bromley of Norwich and Mrs. Orra E. Miner of Windham; also six grandchildren and two great grand-children. The eldest daughter Mrs. Minnie A. Roode died in 1899. Two brothers and two sisters also survive. Mr. Bromley's church relations were with the Preston City Baptist church of which he was a member. He was essentially a home lover and the kind of neighbor who never lost an opportunity to lend a helping hand.

Michael J. Hickey.

GABRIEL BERKER TO BE PUT TO PLEA ON THE CHARGE OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Gabriel C. Berker, the former Norwich brokerage house manager, whose case has been continued through two terms of the criminal superior court without Berker being put to plea, is to be presented and put to plea in the present term of the criminal court in this city, according to an announcement made in court here, Tuesday afternoon by State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown.

Berker will be put to plea on the charge of embezzlement of about $49,000 in connection with the embezzlements by George E. Finn, formerly treasurer and secretary of the Bankers Trust Co. Finn was sentenced in January, 1925, to not less than five nor more than nine years in state's prison when he pleaded guilty to the embezzlement of $93,104.64, on Oct. 24, 1924. Some time after Finn was sentenced, Berker gave himself up to the Norwich police, was bound over to the superior court and was admitted to bail.

Berker's case was in the docket of the May term of the criminal court, but was continued at that time and again continued at the September term.

In announcing the business that would occupy the court this (Wednesday) morning, State's Attorney Brown mentioned Berker as among others who would be put to plea.

Others who will be put to plea this (Wednesday) morning are: John Grabowy, of Norwich, who was sentenced to a jail ter mof four months on Tuesday, on the charge of adultery. He will be called upon to plead to another statutory charge, Charles Hedge will be put to plea on a charge involving an offense against a female child. And Theron Morgan, of Salem will plead to statutory burglary. Morgan was not in court Tuesday when his case was called, but his counsel promised to have him on hand Wednesday. Howard Sloan, the former New London policeman, will also be put to plea on the accusation of rape made against him.

In forecasting the business that is still ahead of this session of court, State's Attorney Brown said that Eugene J. Berry will be put to plea Thursday, on the charge of second degree murder and that the jury will be called in next Tuesday for the trial of the case of Joseph Tocsko, of Norwich, who has pleaded not guilty to illegal sale of intoxicating liquor. The state attorney also indicated that another trial of the term will be that of the continued case of John Burns, of Jewett City, on a manslaughter charge because of an automobile fatality.

Upon the recommendation of State's Attorney Brown, a nolle was entered Tuesday, in the case of Harry Davidson and others, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Davidson and his partner in a Norwich laundry business had been bound over on a charge involving representations made in the sale of the laundry.

The state attorney said this was a case of an attempt to settle a civil difficulty by a criminal process and it should never have been brought to court. As a matter of fact, he said, the trouble between the parties had all been adjusted now.

State Attorney Brown also recommended a nolle in the case of Peter Duffie of this city, accused on statutory manslaughter for causing the death of former Alderman Edward Crooks whom Duffie ran into with his automobile on North Main street. Mr. Brown said that the coroner exonerated Duffie from criminal liability and he was satisfied now that the coroner was correct. A witness from Stonington had appeared who had volunteered information that was vital in this case. The nolle was entered.

The case of Philip Morgan, who had been detained as a material witness in another case, was erased from the docket. There was no charge against him.

STATE HOSPITAL PATIENT MAKES SUICIDE ATTEMPT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Jan. 5—Walter Konik, 22, a patient at the Norwich State hospital, attempted suicide here tonight by drinking a bottle of iodine at the Rhode Island hotel, where he had registered earlier in the evening. Konik registered at the hotel about 7.30 o'clock under the name of John Ruskin of New York. He was assigned a room on the fourth floor. Between the time of his arrival and the time of his attempted suicide he used the elevator several times. He had no luggage with him.

About 9.15 o'clock the office bell rang twice the signal for ice water. A bell boy, Carl Plymnton, answered the summons, going to the room. He found the door partly open but barricaded. Konik asked for a doctor. A guest in a nearby room, saw the situation and becuring some starch, seven glasses were mixed up and given to Konik. He was then put to bed.

On the dresser was a pint bottle half filled with iodine. The man was wearing brown overalls and over the pocket could be distinguished the word "Colony." Dr. M. H. Scanlon was called in and attended the man. The word "Colony" on the overalls led to the suspicion that the man might have come from the state hospital. The state hospital was called and through Dr. Frankil S. Wilcox, superintendent of the institution, the man was identified as Walter Konik.

Chief of Police T. M. Brown was notified and conducted an investigation. Chief Brown left the man in charge of Officer Norman until officials from the state hospital come here to take him back there.

Officer Morrison and James Murphy, authorities from the hospital arrived in Westerly at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning and brought the man back to the institution from where, it is understood, he had escaped a couple of days ago.

SHOW MEASLES INCREASE ABOUT THE STATE

The figures in the bulletin of the state department of health for the week ending January 2 show that there is an epidemic of measles in Bridgeport, the number of new cases reported by the health officer of that city being 114. The total for the state was 283 as against 180 for the previous week. Thirty-two cases were reported from Hartford, 19 from Waterbury and 15 from Wethersfield.

Cases of scarlet fever increased from 56 to 68 and new cases of diphtheria jumped from 34 with Hartford taking the lead with eight cases and Bridgeport second with five.

New Haven, with twelve led in the number of new cases of whooping cough, the total for the state being 58 or 27 more than in the previous week.

Whooping cough cases increased from 31 to 58, New Haven leading the other towns with twelve cases.

The bulletin emphasizes that there were no cases of typhoid fever reported for the week.

HOPE TO ESTABLISH CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

SHELTON, Conn., Jan. 5—Dr. Edward J. Lynch, superintendent of the Laurel Heights sanatorium, gave yesterday to the assembled medical officers of the state tuberculosis sanatoria an interesting demonstration of the fascinating difficulty of tuberculosis research.

Lately from several European laboratories have come claims that tubercle bacilli that, because of age, or other enfeebling influence, have lost their power to cause disease in animals, have been used successfully in vaccinating other animals against tuberculosis.

Dr. Lynch was delighted to find some months ago that one of his strain of bovine tubercle bacilli had become harmless for animals. He therefore began an elaborate experiment to prevent or cure tuberculosis in guinea pigs with his harmless strain. Naturally his hopes were high indeed.

His report yesterday however, showed that the vaccinated animals had more tuberculosis than the unvaccinated.

His paper, however, had the effect of rousing the doctors at the meeting to a lively discussion of the new anti tuberculosis work in various parts of the world.

It was generally agreed that, while neither the new gold cure nor any of the other cures had yet established their claim, there was every reason for expecting soon a successful outcome of the extensive activities of the thousands of brilliant minds that are now studying the tubercle bacillus.

Writes Thanks from Venice

People who suffered from serious diseases that started with a simple cough or cold realize the importance of checking them right at the start. W. H. Gray, Venice, California, writes, "Foley's Honey and Tar is wonderful for attacks of coughs and colds." Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives quick relief from coughs and colds. Stylish "Bobs"
Easy to Keep Thick, Wavy, Lustrous

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Blame Yourself If You Catch Cold

When it is understood that colds result from wrong living, bad air, loss of sleep, overwork and worry, you may realize that it is your own fault if you catch cold.

If you neglect your health, allow yourself to become tired, run down and with resisting power lowered, you leave yourself wide open to attack.

You can build power to fight off colds by taking Father John's Medicine. If you do catch cold you can drive it off by taking Father John's Medicine. The pure food ingredients in Father John's Medicine gives new strength and health—guaranteed free from drugs and alcohol.

MARILYN MILLER DENIES SEPARATING FROM HUSBAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Marilyn Miller, actress, said through a representative tonight that her relations with her movie actor husband, Jack Pickford, were harmonious and that reports of a separation were unfounded.

She believed that statements of martial trouble attributed to her mother originated with "certain people who have been annoying me in this way for two years."

Miss Miller said that she had received telegrams concerning her mother's condition today both from her husband and from his sister, Mary Pickford.

SCHAEFER PILES UP BIG LEAD OVER HOREMANS IN SECOND BLOCK FOR TITLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 5—(AP)—Young Jake Schaefer was virtually assured recovery of his recently lost world's championship at 18.2 balkline billiards tonight when, in the second block of his contest with Edouard Horemans, the Belgian titleholder, he took a lead of 1,000 to 572. In the second 500 point block of their 1,500 point match he scored 500 to Horemans' 197.

Schaefer displayed remarkable mastery over the balls tonight and required only four innings, which made his average an even 100. Horemans played good billiards too, having an average of 65 2-3. The result of tonight's block never was in doubt from the opening inning when Schaefer added 148 to an unfinished run of 22 last night.

Horemans, in his first turn at the table seemed to suffer from the nervousness evidenced last night, but in the only other two tries that he got, he got an 89 and a 91.

Schaefer got his high run of the two blocks in his third turn at the table tonight, when he counted 210. From that point, the contest assumed the aspects of a runaway race.

The final 500 point block will be played tomorrow afternoon. Schaefer again will have the opening shot with the balls grouped closely at the head of the table.

That was where he left them with his unfinished run of 123 tonight.

Score by innings:

Schaefer 148, 19, 210, 123—500. High run 210, average 125.

Horemans 17, 89, 91—197. High run 91, average 65 2-5.

NEW COLLEGE HOCKEY ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 5—(AP)—The Northern Intercollegiate Hockey association embracing 16 middlewestern schools was officially organized today at a conference of athletic representatives and hockey coaches at the University of Minnesota. Sponsors hope to put the ice game on a firmer basis in middlewestern colleges and establish a league comparable to the Eastern Intercollegiate Hockey association.

Coach Emil Iverson, University of Minnesota, announced the schools which have entered the league. They are: Notre Dame, Marquette, Michigan, Michigan State, Michigan College of Mines, Wisconsin, North Dakota university, North Dakota Agricultural college, Minnesota, St. Thomas, Carleton, St. Olaf, St. Johns, Mac Alester and Eveleth, and Hibbing Junior colleges.

To equalize the calibre of the competition, the league will be divided into three divisons with the larger institutions in the senior class, state colleges and normals in the junior division and schools playing the game for the first time in a novice class.

Rules adopted permit body checking only within the goal area, 20 feet from the net and prohibit checking into the boards any place on the rink. Twelve players will be the limit that may be carried on a trip.

League officials will make an effort to have the league champions of the loop entered in the trial to determine the United States ice entry in the olmypics, Coach Iverson said.

TWO YALE COACHES ARE IN THE HOSPITAL

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 5—(AP)—Two Yale university coaches spent part of the Christmas recess in hospitals. George Connors, coach and trainer of the Yale track teams and trainer of the Yale football team, is in St. Raphael's hospital here recovering from an operation for gall stones. He went to the hospital on December 31. He was resting comfortably today and is expected to be able to resume his duties with the track and field candidates in three weeks. Meantime Earl Thomson and Al McGall, assistant coaches, are working with the track men.

Ed Leader, head coach of the Blue crew, is in the Tarrytown, N. Y., hospital where he went for an operation on one of his knees as the result of an old injury which Leader sustained while playing football with the University of Washington varsity several years ago. Some cartilage was removed. Leader is expected to leave the hospital tomorrow coming immediately to New Haven to take charge of crew candidates who report Thursday. Freshmen candidates report to Coach George Murphy tomorrow.

HARVARD ANNOUNCES ITS BASEBAL SLATE FOR 1926

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 5—(AP)—Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Providence college are newcomers on the Harvard baseball schedule for 1926 announced today, while five teams which met the crimson last year do not appear—Columbia, Georgetown, University of Maryland Springfield, and Tufts.

There are two games with Dartmouth and Catholic University, and Princeton is to play two games with Harvard for the first time since 1902.

April 10, Boston University; 14, M. I. T.; 21, Navy at Annapolis; 24, Catholic University at Washington; 28, Bowdoin; May 1, Amherst; 8, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 12, Holy Cross; 15, Pennsylvania; 19, Bates; 22, Princeton; 26, Williams; 29, Princeton at Princeton; 31, Brown at Providence; June 5, Holy Cross at Worcester; 9, Princeton in case of tie, otherwise Providence college; 12, Brown; 19, Dartmouth; 22, Yale at New Haven; 23, Yale; 26, Yale in case of tie (place undecided) probably New York.

NEW LONDON FIVE AT JEWETT CITY THURSDAY

As the Hartford Crescents were unable to arrange their schedule so that they could play the Jewett City five a return engagement on Thursday evening the game was cancelled until later in the season. However Jewett City will not be without a game as Manager Faber has booked the New London Pros, one of the fastest fives in the Whaling City. Owing to injuries Harry Mills will be unable to play with the Jewett City team and his great floor work will be sadly missed.

PAOLINO TO BE OFFERED BOUT WITH WILLS

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Paolino, known in European rings as "The Tiger of the Pyrennes" will be offered matches with Harry Wills and Gene Tunney when he arrives in this country, Tex Rickard said today. In commenting on the proposed American invasion of the Spanish heavyweight boxer, the promotes declared he would rather give Paolino a real test without "building up" preliminaries such as were accorded Luis Firpo.

"Paolino has made a big reputation for himself in Europe and if he is as good as he is reputed to be he will have no difficulty in establishing himself here," said Rickard.

"Firpo will not fight under my promotion until he has firmly established himself again as a logical contender for the heavyweight title. He must start at the bottom and work himself up by his own ability.

"A fight betwen the 'Wild Bull of the Pampas" and "The Tiger of the Pyrennes" would make great ballyhoo material but it would mean nothing unless Firpo trains and gets himself into condition for such a match. And I am tired of the experience of working him to train to protect my own investments.

"When Firpo fought Wills at Boyle's Thirty Acres, I was forced to post a bond of $50,000 because of pending litigation against Firpo. On top of that he insisted I cable his share of the purse to Argentine before he would return to this country to meet Wills."

BIG BASEBALL TRADE EXPECTED THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—Despite denials by both Washington and New York, a three-corner player deal under which Marty McManus of the Browns would be acquired by the Yankees, was expected in baseball circles to be completed before the end of the week.

Reports stated the St. Louis second baseman to come here in exchange for Spencer Adams, infielder and Tom Zachary, left-hand pitcher, now members of the Washington team. In order to get Adams and Zachary for trading purposes, the Yankees were expected to give up Waite Hoyt, right-hand hurler, to the senators. Ahron Ward, second baseman of Miller Huggins' team, also was mentioned as likely to go to the Browns before the negotiations are completed.

President Jacob Ruppert and Business Manager Ed. Barrow of the Yankees added their denials of such a trade being under way to that of President Clark Griffith of Washington.

GRAND CIRCUIT TO OPEN AT CLEVELAND JULY 5TH

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 5—(AP)—The Grand Circuit season opens at North Randall track here July 5 and will close with a week's meeting at Atlanta Oct. 16. To provide for a gap of four weeks for which no application for dates had been made, the stewarts arranged the schedule that horsemen could race on the Orange county, (N. Y.) circuit July 22 to Aug. 1.

Other grand circuit dates follow:

Toledo: July 12-17.
Kalamazoo, July 19-24.
North Randall, Aug. 23-28.
Syracuse, Aug. 30 to Sept. 4.
Indianapolis, Sept. 6-11.
Lexington, Sept. 27-Oct. 9.
Atlanta, October 11-16.

Two weeks from Sept. 13 to 25 were left open.

PLAINFIELD TO PLAY FAST STEAMROLLER TEAM FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 6—Friday evening at the Plainfield Community house the town team takes on the fast Steam Rollers of Providence. All the fans of Eastern Connecticut have heard a great deal about the nationally known Steam Roller football team and will have the opportunity of seeing some of the boys in action on the court. Everyone of the Steam Roller players are ex-Collegians, Archie Golembeski, coach of Providence college and Steam Roller team will be in the lineup. He needs no introduction to fans of this village as he has played here before. He held Morley to three baskets in the Plainfield-Whirlwind game two years ago. The lineup has not been received as yet but will appear in Friday morning's Bulletin.

NEW BEDFORD TEAM WANTS GAMES IN EASTERN CONN.

The New Bedford A. A. would like to arrange games with any teams in Norwich, Taftville, Jewett City, Baltic, Plainfield or Danielson. The New Bedford Five won the city championship and can bring a fast five to any floor in this part of the state. All challenges will be accepted by Mgr. Timothy J. Manning, 59 Mt. Pleasant St. New Bedford, Mass., or telephone 7322M, New Bedford.

LOAYZA GAINS DECISIVE VERDICT OVER ROSEN

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 5—(AP)—Stanislaus Loayza, Chilean lightweight, decisively outpointed Charley Rozen of New York in a 10 round bout here tonight. Loayza weighed 133 and Rosen 136.

Meyer Cohen of Holyoke, Mass., 150, received a decision over Vincent Forgione of New York 148 1-2 in ten rounds and Willie Dillon, Cuban lightweight, outpointed, Bobby Robideau of Allentown, Pa., over the same distance.

Eagles Still After Games

The Taftville Eagles, basketball team, would like to know what is the matter with the junior teams in Norwich. The Eagles have challenged any junior five in Norwich several times but have received no answers. Any team that is not afraid of the Eagles should write to Leodore Phaneuf, Box 85, Taftville, if games are wanted.

Boston Beats Pittsburgh

BOSTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—Boston defeated Pittsburgh 3 to 0 in a fast and clean hockey game tonight. Only one penalty for rough playing was imposed during the contest.

NEW YORK BOXING COMMISSION REVISES ITS PROGRAM FOR THE WINTER SEASON

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—(AP)—The state athletic commission shook up the boxing program for the next month or so at its weekly meeting today.

After approving cancellation of the Mickey-Walker-Tommy Milligan welterweight championship match at Madison Square Garden, January 22, because of Walker's damaged toe, the ring solons took steps designed to bring together Tiger Flowers and Dave Shade in an elimination test to decide an opponent for Harry Greb, middleweight champion.

Flowers already had been booked to fight Greb for the title at Madison Square Garden on February 26, following acceptance of the Georgia negro's formal challenge and $2,500 forfeit, but the commission now believes Shade's claims to middleweight recognition are strong enough to put him on an even footing with the Tiger.

Jess McMahon, grand matchmaker, expressed readiness to promote a Shade Flowers bout, possibly on January 22, to fill the Walker-Milligan vacancy, but it is possible that neither principal will follow the commission's suggestion. Leo P. Flynn, Shade's manager, did not receive it with enthusiasm today when the idea was put up to him. Nevertheless, he fixed $25,000 as his figure for such a contest. Flowers may balk at the idea of jeopardising his chance of meeting Greb by taking on a formidable rival beforehand.

The condition of Walker's toe, which recently was operated on as a result of infection, was announced by the commission as its reason for calling off his fight with Milligan, holder of the British welter title, but reports were current that the action also was connected with Walker's refusal to box on the Christmas fund card at the Garden December 23.

Dissatisfaction with this decision was expressed by Promoter Tex Rickard, who said he might ask the commission to reconsider it on Friday and request further examination of Walker to determine his fitness to fight.

The commission requested Gene Tunney to go through with his scheduled engagement with Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight at the Garden on February 5, and also put its foot down, temporarily, on any activities by Paul Berlenback, light heavyweight champion, in full-fledged heavyweight ranks. Berlenbach, the solons ruled, must first give Mike McTigue a return fight for the 175-pound title.

Charley O'Connell, Cleveland lightweight, and Willie Spencer, of New York, were each given 30-day "vacations" to recover from sickness which was said to have prevented them from fulfilling contracts in this state.

Y. M. H. A. Juniors Win

In what proved to be a one-sided game the Y. M. H. A. Juniors defeated the Valiants 45 to 11, Monday evening at the Y. M. H. A. floor. The superior passwork of the Jewish boys was responsible for the victory. The lineup for the winners was: Tiger and Sackowitz, guards, Henschel, center, Swartzburg and Sharron, forwards. The Juniors clash with the Broadway school five on Friday. They would like a game with the Eagles of Taftville for some night next week.

A dense fog hung over the borough most of the day Tuesday and motor cars used lights much of the time. This must be the Cloud Lugger's warm spell.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Norwich showed a gain of over 3 000 in population between the years 1840 and 1850 but the gain failed to help the district as other towns lost in population.

Items for the Norwich Courier of 1850, in part, are as follows:

Tuesday, December 31, 1850—We are indebted to Charles Bliss, deputy marshal, for the population of the several towns embracing this district. It will be seen that in all towns except Norwich and Colchester, there has been a decrease in population during the past ten years. The increase in Colchester is due to the establishment of the Haywood Rubber Co's works, one of the largest plants in New London county, within the borders of that town.

The population figures follow:

	1850	1849
Seventh Census
Norwich	10,265	7.239
Colchester	2,468	2,101
Franklin	895	1.000
Lebanon	1.901	2.194
Bozrah	867	1,067
Salem	764	811
Montville	1,848	1.990

Increase for Norwich, 3,026; Colchester, 367, in 17th district, 2,606.

An advertisement of 1850—To Let—Two very desirable tenements on Forrest street, in West Chelsea, in perfect order. Rent $50 and $75. Inquire of John Hartson, Esq., or E. Fuller.

Thursday, January 2, 1851—Local people announce that they are very well satisfied with the stage service thus far this year. Stages leave the Merchants hotel daily at 7:30 o'clock and go to Colchester by the way of Norwich Town, Bean Hill, Yantic, Fitchville and Bozrahville. The fare each way is 50 cents and the stages have been calling for all passengers leaving their names with the booking agents.

R. A. Manwaring is offering for sale two very choice store buildings in the village of Greeneville.

Backus and Barstow are now advertising the famous Commercial Parlor Airtight, which they are making from new and splendid designs. They also are making the well known Cylender stoves of new pattern, "right" for heating halls, stores, etc. People are asked to look for the "Round White Sign" at the west end of Water street.

Saturday, January 4, 1851— During the year ending June 30, 1850, there were built in Connecticut, three ships, seven brigs, 27 schooners, nine sloops and canal boats, one steamer a total of 47 boats, tonnage, 4,820.

The tonnage of the several districts in Connecticut is as follows:

	Regist'd	Enroll'd	Total
Middletown	95	12.033	12,129
New London	23,364	17,120	40,484
Stonington	13,188	6,724	19,912
New Haven	4,994	10,736	15,731
Fairfield	868	13,960	14,829

A bed of silver and copper ore has been discovered about three miles southeast of the village of Brandon, Ct.

FLORIDA LAND EASY TO BUY BUT HARD TO SHAKE LOOSE SAY NEW LONDON MEN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 6—A couple of New Londoners who bought land in Florida which they never saw are now anxious to sell it. They have been invited to sell by speculators in Florida and they have received legal documents to sign up for the purpose of disposing of the land, but that way of doing things does not appeal to the landowners and they have thus far declined to negotiate. One of the owners said, "It is the easiest thing to buy land in Florida, but to get rid of it when you desire to do so is quite another matter."

Niagara Engine company will hold its election of officers tomorrow evening. If anybody guesses that the company will re-elect Charles Brown as foreman, that person will probably be designated as a prophet. The company's members are to feast after they have transacted their business. When it is recalled that the Niagara company was organized before the outbreak of the War of the Rebellion, it may be assured that it has some history behind it.

In insisting that no business signs shall extend beyond four feet from any building the city council has given notice that care must be exercised in the placing of signs. There has been a sort of haphazard method followed sometimes that disclosed a disposition to have any old thing pass, but that will not be tolerated in the future.

John Permesa, Uncasville; Mrs. Joseph Martin, 24 Keeney lane; Harry LaForge, United States Coast Guard academy; Mrs. Rudolph Linquist, 63 Darrow street; Miss Mary Bellestrini, 13 East street, and Fortunato Fella, Italian-American hotel, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Joseph Francis, 65, died this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Fred E. Edwards, 32 Walbach street. He was a carpenter by occupation and for a number of years was employed by the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company. Besides Mrs. Edwards, Mr. Francis is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Harry McLaughlin, also of this city.

Frank E. Pollio, paymaster aboard the U. S. S. Mojave, United States coast guard, state pier, was arraigned in the Waterford town court last evening, charged with failing to possess registration and reckless driving. He was convicted of the former charge and received a minimum fine, but an acquittal was ordered on the more serious charge.

Pollio was operating his automobile in an easterly direction in Waterford and Mossbrooker's corner, Christmas eve. When about to pass the corner a large Packard limousine, owned and operated by Abe Davidson, local public service operator, and being driven in a westerly direction, appeared and in a few seconds the two cars crashed. Davidson alleged that the machine driven by Pollio suddenly changed its course and was headed directly across the highway with the result that the Packard was struck with terrific force and damaged to the estimated extent of $500. The state police were notified of the accident and two officers who conducted an investigation, ordered Pollio into court.

The Winthrop Restaurant, State street, has closed its doors because of the financial difficulties of the proprietor, Afax Markoff. With the restaurant out of business, at least temporarily, there are still 63 restaurants and lunchrooms in operation and a new "hot dog" house about ready to open.

Philip Adel, 27 Denison avenue, was arraigned in the police court this morning on a charge of reckless driving, but the case was continued until Wednesday morning. The automobile Adel was driving last night on Main street, near Federal street, collided with a machine owned and driven by Louis C. Tilton, United States coast guard. Both cars were extensively damaged.

Election of officers was held by the Crowley club in the club rooms in Jay street and the following officers were elected:

President—Madeline Gorman; vice-president—Lillian Sheridan; recording secretary—Margaret E. McNamara; corresponding secretary—Margaret Shay; treasurer—Isabelle Grimes; entertainment committee—Mae Hanley.

Mrs. Marian Barker, 61 West street, and Mrs. Peter Albano, and infant daughter, 41 1-2 Orchard street, were patients dismissed today at Home Memorial hospital.

Announcement is made by Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Nisson, 301 Pequot avenue, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Jane Nisson, to Joseph H. Creary, Miami, Fla.

John Bootin and Miss Nancy M. Carlson, both of this city, were married yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ, the nuptial ceremony being performed by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

Arthur Leary, quartermaster agent at the government pier, Water street, is enjoying his annual vacation and is touring New England states.

Thomas L. Martin, formerly of New London, now located in Brooklyn, N. Y., has concluded a several days' visit in New London and has returned to his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Littlefield, recently married, have concluded their wedding trip. Mr. Littlefield is employed as oiler on the New London line steamer City of Lowell.

John Troland, a senior at Amherst College, has resumed his studies after having spent several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Troland, 137 Lincoln avenue.

Miss Helen Flynn, daughter of Mrs. David Flynn, has returned home after visiting with Mrs. E. W. Sherman, Hartford. Mrs. Sherman was formerly Miss Claire Rogers, Ocean avenue.

Harry Weinstein, 37 Hamilton street lodged complaint with the police this evening because of an act of lawlessness of youths who reside in the vicinity of the Weinstein home. The boys removed an automobile battery from the yard and then hurled it through a window of the residence. Patrolman Ernest Opperman was assigned to the case and ascertained the identity of four of the guilty youths. They have been ordered to report at the police station tomorrow morning.

It was revealed late this afternoon that crooks have operated at the state pier within the past few days for officials of the Southern New England Telephone company lodged complaint with the police that a pay-station telephone installed at the section base of the United States Coast Guard had been broken into and not only were the contents of the telephone stolen, but a considerable amount of damage was also done.

The telephone was practically demolished by the crooks in their work to gain entrance to the compartments which contained the money that had been deposited through telephone calls. The amount of money obtained by the thieves is between $5 and $10, but the damage to the phone, it is estimated, will be between $75 and $80.

Patrolman Braxton Hill is on the sick list for he was taken ill late this afternoon and is confined to his home on Bank street.

A live wire of the Connecticut Power company became dislodged from its fastenings on a pole in front of the residence, 59 Truman street this evening and fell between the branches of a tree.

Because of the dampness the live wire quickly ignited the bark of the tree and the fire caused residents of that street to notify the police of the danger. The repair station of the power company was notified and a repair gang placed the wire back in position.

Holman Belle, a sailor, attached to local section base of the United States coast guard, state pier, is scheduled to be presented in the police court tomorrow morning on a charge of breach of the peace. Belle, it is alleged went to the home of his wife's parents last Saturday night, and finding his wife there, beat her and then trashed his father-in-law, John Bishop.

Commander E. J. King, U. S. N., commandant at the submarine base, is to be relieved of that command in the near future, as was revealed late yesterday when orders to that effect were received at the base from Secretary of the Navy Wilbur at Washington. It is believed, however, that Capt. King will not be given his assignment, or rather, it will not take effect until June 1. Had Captain King continued as such until Sept. 1st, he would have rounded out his third year at the submarine station. He had already made a request of the navy department for sea duty and had expressed a preference that he be given the command of the U. S. S. Raleigh and therefore the notice of his being relieved of the base command did not come as a surprise to him. It is rumored that Captain Adolphus Andrews, naval aide to President Coolidge, will succeed Captain King. It is also rumored that Lieutenant Commander Howard L. Flanagan, base executive officer and Lieutenant Charles E. Jeffs will also receive orders transferring them to other stations.

Captain King was assigned to the command of the base on Sept. 4, 1924. He is a veteran campaigner, having served in the Spanish-American war in the Asiastic uprising and the world war.

MRS. MALLETTE ORDERED TO LEAVE NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 6—Louise Mallette, or Brooks, a woman who came here from Westerly a considerable time ago, and who was concerned in the scandal that attached to the upbringing out of the house where Mrs. Palma resided on Howard street some weeks ago, is the mother of several children all being in charity institutions to which they were committed by the authorities of the city. The oldest child is a girl of 13 years. Mrs. Mallette has been twice married and has children by each husband. She came here from Pawcatuck and soon afterward took up her residence on Ronomoc street. She sought advice of a Westerly lawyer and he counselled her to get a divorce. This she did and then married Henry Brooks in November. She and Brooks agreed to disagree and the wife took up a residence on lower Bank street. That led to the acquaintance with the Palma woman and with the young girls who resorted at the Palma home. Today the accused woman was informed against as a lewd and lascivious person. She pleaded guilty. Judge Prince took into consideration that she was unfortunate, and advised her to quit this city, in order that she should follow the advice he ordered her to pay a fine of $50 if she continued to reside here.

Three young tramps were arraigned. They were manifestly not of the vicious sort, but just stragglers who happened here in rambling about without fixed purpose. They claimed to belong in Hartford, so they were allowed to keep going. The Learned mission fed them and they proceeded to leave the city.

James Ernest Turner, a man accused of the theft of clothes from a chief petty officer, was to have appeared for trial today, but the prosecutor asked to have the complaint nolled and that disposition was made of it.

RECEIVE DISHONORABLE DISCHARGES FROM SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 6—As a result of the naval court martial into the alleged rum activities engaged in by members of the crew of the patrol boat, 187, stationed at the state pier, and for trafficking in liquor, several members of the crew have already been dishonorably discharged. Charles J. Fogarty, New Haven, and James Little, were today dishonorably dismissed from the service and with all pay due them refused.

The 187 is the craft that is alleged to have received a quantity of liquor from one of the rum-supply ships off Montauk Point several weeks ago and with the liquor obtained by the crew of the craft, distributed for purposes of commercialization. The story of the liquor being given the members of the crew of the patrol boat was revealed when State Police Officer Henry J. Albright, Groton barracks, arrested a Filipino member of the crew, on State street, with several bottles in his possession. The Filipino declared that he had been given the whiskey by the master of the patrol boat. The Filipino also related the entire story as to how the liquor was obtained from the supply ship.

At a meeting of the directors of the Mohican company held at the executive offices, 280 Broadway, New York city, December 29th, 1925, the vacancy on the board of directors caused by the death of Mr. Frank A. Munsey was filled by the election of Mr. Hugh Dewart, general manager of the company.

Holiday Sweets of Children

Children, like grown folks, care for sweet things during the holiday season. No doubt, fond parents, aunts and uncles, have showered the little ones with plenty of candy during the Christmas holidays. Perhaps these have had disastrous results if the quantity consumed has been excessive. If so, parents may have learned the wisdom of providing for children during the holiday season sweets of a simpler nature. Such aids to health are discussed at the monthly well child conferences which are held in Moosup. The conference this month will be on Thursday afternoon, January 14th, in the Franco-American hall, from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Breed Theater

Many stories and many pictures have dealt with the adventures of the stalwart men who crossed the Western plains and mountains in 1849 to seek gold in the Sacramento valley of California.

The latest release which comes to the Breed theater today and Thursday, is the first film to have for its central character a lone woman pioneer.

The story concerns the romance of a woman who came to the gold country by water from Boston; who, after adopting three motherless children, proceeds to face the rigors of a rough mining life with a determined smile.

Miss Nilsson does heroic work as the loveable woman pioneer. Co-featured included in the supporting cast are with her are Robert Fraser and Lionel Barrymore.

Edwin Earle, Edwards Davis, Pauline Garon, Gladys Brockwell, Marceline Day, George Bancroft, and Snits Edwards.

Coming to the Breed

Broadway has seen many openings but never one that approached in popularity and enthusiasm the premiere presentation of The Merry Widow, Erich von Stroheim's production for Metro-Golden-Mayer, which opened Gloria Gould's intimate and beautiful Embassy theater in New York.

First nighters applauded and cheered as have subsequent audiences. Metropolitan critics simply raved, no other word can properly describe their enthusiasm, over the latest starring vehicle of Mae Murray and John Gilbert. Never in the history of motion pictures have such reviews been published in the New York dailies. Each and every one of the cities praised The Merry Widow to the skies and then some. It was a remarkable tribute to a remarkable production. The Merry Widow is riding on a wave of popularity that will sweep the whole world.

Read what New York's critics, acknowledged to be the most severe in the country, have to say about this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer record breaker, in tomorrow's paper.

Sympathy is all right in its place, but it's a poor substitute for beefsteak if a man is hungry.

SAYS BROTHER'S MARRIAGE SHOULD BE A HAPPY ONE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 5—Irving Berlin, who was married in New York, Monday, to Miss Ellin Mackay, daughter of the millionaire Clarence Mackay is a brother of H. M. Baline, in business as a fur dealer on Main street this city. Mr. Buline expressed the opinion today that the marriage would be a happy one. He said his brother was not dependent upon the riches of his wife for he was rich himself.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

James Abruzzo has severed his connections with The Palace Barber Shop and is now located at Kirby's Barber Shop in the new Sellas Bldg. on Franklin Square and will welcome his old friends and customers patronage.

Two Apartment House Sold

Real Estate Broker John A. Moran has sold for Mrs. Kathryn C. Taaffe, the two apartment house with large lot located at 204 Central Ave., on the corner of Fourth St. The new owner Mr. Julyan Kowalewski of this city will occupy one of the apartments after making some alterations.

Palace Theatre

It's your last chance to see the famous Babe London the comedy movie star at the Palace today and that gorgeous singing act Bohemian Life. Adolphe Menjou in The King on Main Street makes its last bow today also. Tomorrow the circus moves into town with man eating lions funny clowns and the one and only Lucy the most intelligent elephant on the road today with everything else that goes to make up a circus. Popcorn, pink lemonade, side show barkers, trained ponies will delight the old youngsters as well as the young children. The management is offering twenty-five dollars to any one who rides Cyclone the bucking mule. This is going to be one of the funny stunts of the show. No doubt there is going to be many ambitious youngsters who could do a lot with twenty five dollars that are going to take a chance that they can stay on top of Cyclone for the alloted two minutes.

Cyclone up to date has defied the best riders in the tent shows and no one has been able to stay on his back in any theatre yet still it is possible that some in Norwich may be able to do it. The riders with the show prove that he can be ridden by riding with out saddle or reins. It's going to be a great three days for everybody and if you miss this show you are going to regret it. In the meanwhile Max Hanover's guests at The Hanover Curland company continue to attract a lot of attention and its a treat for the children to take them down to see the lions fed at noontime. In Seitas Spa Margie and Jerry the two almost human monks continue to attract the attention of those passing the window and Lucy has been around to several schools making friends with the children. In fact Lucy shows a tendency to attend school and only today her trainer had some difficulty in keeping Lucy out of one school room. An amusing incident occurred today. Sellas Lunch has a griddle cake cooker in their window and Lucy nearly went through the window today in an attempt to get at the griddle cakes. Everybody is advised to come early Thursday and for the children are advised that Hanover Curland have a few free tickets left.

Coming to the Palace. Mary Pickford comes to the Palace Sunday in a picture that has taken the entire country by storm Little Annie Rooney. Mary plays a role that the public love her in namely a saucy keen bright little urchin of the streets fighting her own battles with the boys of the none too gentle neighborhood and coming out usually on top. This will be the first showing of the picture in this part of the state and the Palace is sure of capacity audience starting on Sunday. The usual vaudeville bill will be given with Annie Rooney starting Monday.

STONINGTON

John E. A. Avery, who is teaching in Great Barrington, Vt., spent the holidays in town.

Postmaster Frank D. Stanton and his assistants received general praise for the manner in which the holiday rush of mail matter was handled.

At the last meeting of the Ambulance Corps a committee composed of T. Clifford Connell, Lawrence Brooks and William J. O'Brien, was appointed to care for the matter of collections this year.

Miss Adele Moffett, who has been teaching French in Fairhaven, Mass., is to become a White Sister of the Sacred Heart and of Perpetual Adoration. She will enter on the feast day of the Epiphany, January 6. She is to go to Paris, France, sometime in June and will be a novice in training for two years, after which she will take her vows and become a professed nun.

THREE PLAINFIELD MEN GET STIFF SENTENCES

(Special to the Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 5—John Jollicoer and Silver Jolly were sentenced to serve one year in a reformatory school, and Harry Beckett received a sentence of 3 years in the state penitentiary, at their trial at the county superior court at Putnam, on Tuesday. Much sympathy goes to the parents of these boys, who have always enjoyed the pleasures of a good home, and had chances galore to make themselves respectable citizens, but instead chose the path that degrades their families. The above sentences were the result of a black-guardly holdup and assault case, which happened on Plainfield street during the latter part of 1925, in which an old saw mill owner was assaulted and robbed, of $172. By the clever work of the state police, the three prisoners were soon placed under arrest.

To escape the abuse of her father, Margaret Yeaw, 16, of Hoxie, ran away from home and was found by Officer Dyer Russell, of Moosup, to be living with Mrs. Lizzie Canterbury, Road. The girl was returned to her father at Arctic. She came to the home of Mrs. Lie on New Year's day, and had planned to start work there, but her father claimed she had stolen money at his home, and disappeared. She became acquainted with Mrs. Lie while both were employed at Arctic.

Mrs. Phillips, father of Charles and Elmer Phillips, is still confined to his bed at the Danielson hospital. The old man is about the same as during the
